WAR OFFICE REPORTS LADYSMITH RELIEVED BY GENERAL BULLER!

BRITISH FORCES ARE VERY NEAR LADYSMITH

But an Immediate Announcement of its Relief Need Not be Expected

CANADIANS GALLANTRY THE UNIVERSAL THEME.

Canadians Under an Absolutely Withering Fire Only Prevented from Carrying Lager at Bayonet's Point by Imperative Orders to the Contrary.

Kimberley, Feb. 27. Col. Peckham, with a mounted force and a maxim, proceeded to Barkly, where he was warmly welcomed. He left a strong guard and then proceeded to Longlands, Winderton, and Klip Drift. There were rumors of Boers in the neighborhood but no demonstration occurred. The Diamond Field Advertiser draws pointed attention to the fact that although Kimberley was relieved about two weeks ago there has been no amelioration in regard to the food supply. It is still impossible as it was during the investment, to procure a tin of condensed milk or cocoa without a medical certificate. The inhabitants continue without many of the common articles of food although meat rations have been increased to half a pound a day.

Coleman, Feb. 26. Yesterday an armistice was agreed upon and both sides removed their wounded and buried their dead. The Boers lost heavily in attack and then they worked among the trees. Severe musketry fire was resumed last night. It was started by the accidental discharge of a rifle. It is reported that there are 400 Boers near Kamekadele.

London, Feb. 28. In Her despatch to Lord Roberts following the announcement of the surrender of Gen. Cronje Her Majesty said: "Accept for yourself and for all under your command, my warmest congratulations on this splendid news." Lord Roberts replied as follows: "All under my command are deeply grateful for your Majesty's most gracious message. Congratulations from their Queen are an honor the soldiers deeply prize." General Buller has wired his thanks to the Queen for her telegram of gracious sympathy and encouragement.

London, March 1. A despatch to the Daily Mail from Pieter's station dated Sunday Feb. 26 and describing the five days continuous fighting of which the attack on Railway Hill by the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers was one of the supreme movements, says: "The Inniskilling joined the column with 24 officers, they have five left. That tells the tale. No man, no pointed account can give an idea of the difficulties of these hills and ridges which exceed each other like waves in a heavy sea, one giving way only to another. Each one is enfiladed and till one is taken it is impossible even with the heaviest artillery to know what for tussle he beyond it. The military problem changes as the column advances, each kopje refusing to give up its secret until the advancing troops touched its crest. To add to the difficulty the tropical rainy season set in to-day. For 12 hours the uniformity clung to the men like wet seaweed. Mud caught them underfoot. Mists closed down and shut out the position of the enemy. This discomfort is borne by all alike. Gen. Buller and his staff are virtually living the privates life. There has not been even a tent to cover the commanding general. They eat from their knees and with their shoulders against the rock and they sleep where ever they can. Field work is carried on under transport wagons and as these are not built rain proof they streams of water pour down on and blot the officer's records."

ANNIHILATED SEVENTY BOERS. Reports from Ladysmith says the Boers are still retreating. London, Feb. 28.—The Daily Mail has the following from Ladysmith, dated Saturday, Feb. 24: "Yesterday the Boer retreat continued. A party of about seventy, on route for the north, drew rein near Klip Hill. A battery of 15 pounders, placed not far off, suddenly opened fire, and practically annihilated the party. A Boer ambulance was later on the scene collecting the dead and wounded. "The Boers are trying to form a bridge or drift across the Klip River, south of Umbulwana, evidently for the purpose of aiding the passage of wagons and artillery in retreat from Coleman. Our guns are preventing this work being carried on."

condition of the wounded, who were untended on the hillside Sunday was so painful that General Buller sent a flag of truce to the enemy, and it was arranged that throughout Sunday military movements should continue on both sides, but there should be no shooting. This truce terminated at dusk. The Boers then resumed a furious musketry fire on the British left. Fighting continued vigorously. We shall see who can stand "buckling" best, the Briton or the Boer."

Mr. Churchill goes on to say that there is abundant proof of the Boers using a large proportion of illegal bullets, no fewer than five different kinds of exploding or expanding bullets having been found. He also asserts that the Boers are employing armed Kaffirs, and adds—"I have always tried to be fair toward the Boer, but after making every allowance, it must be said that they show, when in stress a very dark, cruel and vindictive underside of character."

London, March 1. A despatch to the Morning Post from Paardeburg says—"The Canadians were only prevented from carrying General Cronje's lager at the point of the bayonet by imperative orders to the contrary. Their gallantry is the universal theme of conversation. "We captured 4,000 small arms. Our tremendous shell fire had scarcely any appreciable effect on the Boer trenches. Their wounded during the week numbered eighty. The number of their dead we have not ascertained."

London, March 1. A despatch to the Times from Paardeburg, dated Tuesday, says—"The performance of the Canadians under an absolutely withering fire, which caused them to retire fifty yards until the engineers had dug trenches, was splendid, the dim light and the cloudy sky alone rendered the enemy's point blank fusillade ineffective. The Canadians held the position until dawn. The great admiration is expressed for their valor."

BRITISH OCCUPY JAMESTOWN. Brabant's Colonial Horse Again Presses Forward Towards Stormberg. Stormberg, Feb. 24.—Boer reports say that the British under Brig. Gen. Brabant, have occupied Jamestown, northern Cape Colony.

Jamestown is some miles northwest of Stormberg, whence Brabant's colonial division detached the Boers some ten days ago. Jamestown had been occupied by the Boers since the second week of last month.

London, March 1, 8 a. m.—The War office officially announces that Ladysmith has been relieved.

BOERS ATTACK FORT WYLIE.

They are Evidently Trying to Out-flank Gen. Buller.

London, Feb. 28.—The Daily Telegraph prints a despatch from Pietermaritzburg, dated Feb. 27, saying that at the conclusion of Sunday's armistice the Boers made a determined night attack on Fort Wylie. There was heavy firing that was prolonged for hours. The British maintained their position. The Boers when questioned during the armistice, avowed the idea of abandoning the investment of Ladysmith.

PRISONERS AT THE MODDER.

Six Hundred Boers Kept Behind a Wire Fence.

Cape Town, Feb. 28.—There is now six hundred prisoners at Modder River, most of whom surrendered Friday and Saturday. They are kept under guard between wire fences.

ONLY LOST 26 HORSES.

FROM ROBERTS.

Lord Roberts Takes Famous Officers of the Transvaal.

London, Feb. 27.—Lord Roberts reports that 29 Transvaal officers were captured and eighteen Free State officers. The guns captured from the Transvaal forces were three 75-centimetre Krupp, nine 12-pounders and one Maxim gun. From the Free State the British captured one 75-centimetre Krupp and one Maxim gun—fourteen guns in all. The officers captured by Gen. Roberts, besides General Piet Cronje, include the following well-known commanders: Chief Commandant M. J. Wolmarans, a member of the Volksraad. Field Cornet Frus, a Scandinavian. Col. Albrecht, the famous Austrian artilleryman. Major Von Deitz, the distinguished German officer responsible for most of the splendid engineering works of the only nine short in reaching Cape Town while the artillery lost twenty-seven.

ENGLISH PRESS COMMENTS.

London, Feb. 28.—The Standard warns against exaggerating the consequences. It says that Gen. Roberts' success brings the termination of the war a step nearer, but it must not be supposed that the British have won the war. The British have no right to assume that a single reverse or even a succession of reverses will reduce them to despair.

The Daily News, in a similar warning, points out that the very fact that Commandant Cronje was able to hold out against a vastly superior force may encourage the Boers to hope for the best from the defensive positions guarding the road to Pretoria, if not also those commanding the road to Bloemfontein. The Daily Chronicle declares that it would be unwise to regard Gen. Roberts' success other than as a milestone.

MANY ERRORS IN CABLED CASUALTIES.

A Fair Margin of Doubt as to Identity of Some of the Killed and Wounded.

Ottawa, Feb. 28.—The Militia Department announces that no official list of the killed and wounded Canadians will be published until the mails arrive from the War Office with the names and numbers.

There are still many errors in the cables list of casualties, both in the first and second engagements in which the Canadians participated. The numbers already published are in some cases not to be found on the nominal roll at all, and some of them belong to the Australian and other colonial rosters. Relatives of the volunteers must bear in mind that many of the identifications are merely conjectural. Meanwhile those people who are ready to hear either good or bad tidings had better restrain themselves until they have something definite to go on. Much sorrow has already been caused by hasty corrections, which may have no foundation in fact.

A TOAST TO ROBERTS.

Lord Carson Drinks the Health of the Victor of Koodos Rand.

Calcutta, Feb. 27.—Lord Carson, the Viceroy, at a dinner given this evening at Government House, said: "I propose on this great occasion to break the ordinary rule. I ask you to drink the health of that brave soldier and former Indian Commander-in-Chief, who, on the anniversary of Ladysmith, has wiped out that stain and gained a noble and glorious victory."

MORE WORK TO BE DONE.

Mr. Broderick Says that the Task is Not Yet Completed.

London, Feb. 27.—Mr. William St. John Broderick, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, when addressing the volunteers at Guildford this evening, referred to the "gratifying turn of the tide in South Africa," and paid a high tribute to the services of the colonial forces. He said that long marches would still have to be undertaken, and there might be privations and further vicissitudes in store, but the country would never forget the deeds of her sons nor the great achievements of Lord Roberts.

London, Feb. 27.—A month ago the work in which Gen. Buller was engaged at the present moment would have commanded breathless interest and thrown the whole Empire into a state of anxiety. But Natal has been so overshadowed and thrown into the background by the pursuit of Cronje and the dire assurance that Ladysmith was out of danger that the gallant doings around Colenso have passed almost unnoticed. Now, however, that a pause is likely to result from General Roberts' brilliant coup in the Orange River delta, attention again turns to the persevering but unfortunate Buller, who has been pressing slowly forward from Colenso and waging a running fight with the rearguard of the retreating Boers, in which he has lost very heavily in the statement of a correspondent that after the attack on Railway Hill on Feb. 23rd by men from three Irish regiments only five officers and a hundred men answered their names, as to be killed on.

After crossing the Tugela at Colenso, Gen. Buller pushed forward, fighting a series of almost daily actions with the Boers, who gradually fell back to their strong position near Grooters' Kloof, ten miles directly south of Ladysmith. It was here that the enemy's rearguard made the great stand which resulted in such heavy loss to the British—no less the extent of which is not yet fully known. Gen. Buller has, however, surmounted this difficulty at last and scattered the Boers to the south of Ladysmith. To do this it was necessary for him to recross the Tugela. This does not mean that he had to retreat but steps to Colenso, for the river winds sharply to the north and practically runs parallel with Buller's line of advance towards Ladysmith. Having recrossed Ladysmith's spur, a line which runs into the Tugela from Pieter's Hill, the British found that the passage was so strongly defended as to be impassable. Buller therefore threw a portion of his force over the Tugela, to the right, crossed his men and searched about sunset. The Boers were scattered and lost to prisoners. It does not seem that the Boers had any guns mounted on the position which confirms the impression that they are covering their retreat from Natal with riflemen. The guns were removed long before the British got near their position. There is still a considerable body of Boers at Umbulwana mountain, about five miles to the east and south of Ladysmith, a post upon which they formerly mounted three long guns, which inflicted considerable loss on the garrison. With this exception the way to Ladysmith is practically clear, and a five mile march will bring Buller in touch with White's men at Camer's Camp and Waggon Hill. The Boers must first be cleared from Umbulwana, but White's guns will be able to assist in this task, which ought not to be difficult. On the whole, therefore, it would not be surprising if Gen. Buller's advance guard entered Ladysmith before the end of the week.

London, Feb. 28.—The War Office has received the following despatch from General Buller: "Headquarters. Headwaters, Feb. 28, 5 a.m.—Fanning that the passage of Langewach's Spruit was commanded by strong detachments I reconnoitered for another passage of the Tugela. One was found for me below the cataract by Col. Sandbach, Royal Engineers, on February 25. We commenced making an approach thereto, on Jan. February 26, finding that I could make the passage practicable. I crossed the guns and baggage back to the south side of the Tugela, took up the pontoon bridge on Monday night and delayed it at the new site, which is just below the point marked Cataract. During all this time the troops had been scattered, crouching under hastily constructed small stone shelters and exposed to a galling shell and rifle fire, and throughout they maintained the most excellent spirits. Tuesday Gen. Harbord, with two battalions of the Sixth Brigade, and the Dublin Fusiliers, crept about a mile and a half down the banks of the river, and ascending an almost precipitous cliff of about 100 feet, assaulted and carried the top of Pieter's Hill. This hill to a certain extent turned the enemy's left, and the Fourth Brigade, under Col. Norcott, and the Eleventh Brigade under Col. Kitchener, commanding, the whole about sixty prisoners and scattered the Boers' position, which was map-

BULLER'S OFFICIAL DESPATCH.

London, Feb. 28.—The War Office has received the following despatch from General Buller: "Headquarters. on the long road over which the British have yet to march to final triumph. The Times finds the effects not easy to calculate. It recapitulates the alternative ways in which the victory might demoralize the Boers, but adds—"We see clearly that it may not have any of these results. Such a defeat, serious though it is, would hardly bring them of our own pace to their knees. The Boers are almost as stubborn and unyielding as ourselves, and the victory may have to be followed up and even repeated."

The despatch adds that, owing to the enemy's splendid position, the difficulties of the British are stupendous. Progress will certainly be slow.

The Boers' Main Position Captured After Severe Fighting and Heavy Loss.

GUNS MANNED BY NAVAL MEN DID GREAT WORK.

Heavy Slaughter Among the Irish Regiments—Fearful List of Casualties Rolled up in Relief of Ladysmith—The Queen's Sympathy.

REGIMENT WAS DECIMATED.

Irish Regiment Behaved Splendidly Under Boer Fire.

London, Feb. 28.—Richard Harding Davis sends the following despatch to the Daily Mail from Pieter's, describing the desperate fight on Railway Hill. It is dated February 24: "Last night the Inniskilling Fusiliers, mixed with some of the Dublin Fusiliers and the Connaught Rangers, attempted to carry Railway Hill from Pieter's. They were under a continuous fire, through which they passed up the heavy broken ground to the first Boer trenches. Half way up the hill the Boers retreated to the crest, and then came back on either flank of the Irish troops, enfilading the captured trenches with a savage cross fire as well as a direct one.

"All night and until 9 o'clock in the morning our men held the position under a continuous fire and at terrible cost. At roll call only five officers and one hundred men answered to their names."

"Col. Thackeray and Major Sanders of the Inniskilling; Col. Stewart, of the Dublin Fusiliers; Captain Mainland, of the Second Gordon's and Col. Thorold, of the Welsh Fusiliers, were killed. Two hundred and fifty-two of the rank and file were killed or wounded.

"Gen. Lytton's brigade relieved them at 10 o'clock this morning, when the Boer artillery pounded the troops holding the centre kopje without pause, but with little effect."

SYMPATHY OF THE QUEEN.

She Cables General Buller on the Death of Irish Soldiers.

London, Feb. 28.—The Queen has telegraphed Gen. Buller as follows: "I have heard with the deepest concern the heavy losses sustained by my brave Irish soldiers, and I desire to express my sympathy and admiration of the splendid fighting qualities they have exhibited through these trying operations."

TREMENDOUS DIFFICULTIES.

General Buller is operating in a DOLL-OUT COUNTRY.

London, Feb. 28.—General Buller's account of the tremendous natural obstacles he is overcoming in his efforts to reach Ladysmith has brought public interest with a sharp turn from complacent contemplation of Lord Roberts' victory to a realization of the serious conditions still existing in Natal. Though General Buller's lengthy despatch is construed as a victory bravely won, the commander of the forces in Natal has so often reported similar victories without achieving his main objective that the public has learned to contain its jubilation until Ladysmith shall actually have been relieved, while the list of casualties lavishly following any gain by General Buller is always awaited with dread and anxiety. However, the nation confidently awaits the news of the relief of the besieged troops.

BOERS FLANKING MOVEMENT.

Inniskilling Regiment Lost Tremendously in a Recent Fight.

London, Feb. 28.—A special despatch from Colenso, dated Tuesday, Feb. 27, says: "The Boers are endeavoring to out-flank us, and every fighting continues."

London, Feb. 28.—The Boers under Brabant's pressure, have evacuated their position in this neighborhood, retiring northward. In the fighting here their loss is thought to have been considerable, as 25 graves were found.

PETERBOROUGH, FEBRUARY 2, 1900

THE SOUTH AFRICAN RATHER.

The future of the blacks in South Africa is a problem that will get some attention some concern. The effect of the present war may be to teach them more and more to respect Great Britain, but there is also a danger that it will stimulate their love of fighting. Fortunately it is that the British rule of the blacks has been gentle, but firm, and that they have been taught by practice, that the British were their enemies and brethren, while they were otherwise the Boer might have found in the native powerful allies. As it is, Britain has secured for the tribes orderly government, while the Boer record is one of cruelty, oppression and slave trading. Harold Bates tells in Leslie's Monthly how the great Trek was made with the object of establishing a slave state. Even now in the Boer colonies a black is treated worse than the Dutch treat their dogs. Mr. Bates says: "One day in my office in Johannesburg the door was pushed open by a Kaffir prone on the floor, dragging himself by his elbows. Thinking he was wounded, I arose to assist. It was from a government official, and the Kaffir was merely an apprehensive messenger delivering a public document. I made him get up and take a chair while I answered the message. When I gave him the note he slunk away much mystified. Afterward I spoke to the Boer official about the episode. He protested that I had done very wrong. 'I always kick them out of my office,' he explained, 'then they know who is the superior.' Another law prohibits Kaffirs from whistling or singing in the streets, and as the spirit of the black man, however much depressed, finds expression in melody, this statute is constantly violated; and for their musical indiscretion Kaffirs are dragged in great numbers to jail and beaten more heavily on route. The Boers explain that this was passed to suppress the exasperating independence and jubilant bravado of the blacks, and to instruct them in the ways of true humility."

The black man has feelings—and a memory—and he is not likely to be quick to part to the aid of those who have so abused him. Under British rule he has been gradually improving his condition and acquiring some of the habits of civilization. It would be regrettable were the war to stop the beneficent process. But if the Boers should invade the black man's land the black man must be aided to defend himself, no matter what the consequences may be. Britain cannot afford to leave him to stand alone.

GLENALDA.

Weather has been fine. Every heavy snow storm today—the heaviest of the season. Our contribution for a Council on Saturday was very quiet. Mr. John Post was elected by acclamation to fill Mr. W. J. Rosebush's place. Mr. Rosebush for Hope, Michigan in March; we hope that he will have success. The Methodists held their annual tea meeting on Friday, February 2nd. There is a large quantity of saw logs and cedar being taken out this winter by the Gilmour and Hattburn Companies. It is landed on Lake Huron. Mr. Ralph Winters met with a painful accident—having part of his hand cut off accidentally by a marking hammer. One of the Boers has evidently escaped from South Africa, and reached this place. He has taken up arms in form of a club and laid wait along the highway to make raid on one of our British subjects, who happened to have a cannon loaded with one hundred and sixty pounds of bone. With good aim he landed a bullet between the Boer's eyes. When he awakened he wanted to know if lightening had struck any one else. I think that George will get the widow yet.

ONEMEE.

The sleighing is invaluable to many, judging from the amount of loads of wood, coal, hay and grain on the roads. The health of the village is excellent. No bad cases of grippe. No word received so far by Berg. Mr. O'Connell's parents of his being under the influence of the Boer. Last word he was acting as assistant quartermaster, and was at Helms. There are a number of friends and acquaintances attending the funeral of the late Wm. J. Kennedy, Esq. The contract for supplying the Swiss Cheese factory, St. Emily, has been given to David Thomson, Onemee. The tenders are out for Cowan's Bridge, 5 miles south here.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

In Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views. Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvelous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this beautiful land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and led to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advances of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the incursions of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinct Dutch architecture still remain, but in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a pictorial history incident to the progress of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wynne Fleming, an African whose authority upon South African matters is world-wide acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by The Morning Times. For particulars and announcement on another page of this issue.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with one of the largest ports in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally interesting buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxuriant vegetation and glorious climate, the wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals lend an air of peace and tranquillity, while the magnificent edifices of the most modern type, beautiful botanical gardens, and the public improvements are evidence of the wonderful advance of civilization.

WHEN MEN ARE HIT BY BULLETS.

Soldiers have widely different ways of receiving an injury. If you take a dozen soldiers as like each other as peas so far as height, weight, strength, age, courage and general appearance, and wound them all in precisely the same place, you will find that scarcely any of them are affected alike. One man on receiving a bullet in his leg will go on fighting as if nothing had happened. He does not know, in fact, that he now contains a bullet. But perhaps in two or three minutes he will grow faint and fall. Another man, without feeling the slightest pain will tremble all over, totter and fall at once, even though the wound is very slight. A third will cry out in a way to frighten his comrades and will for get everything in his agony. A fourth will grow stupid and look like an idiot. Some soldiers wounded in the slightest manner will have to be carried off the field. Others, although perhaps fatally injured, can easily walk to the ambulance. Many die quickly from the shock to the nervous system. A very curious case is reported in the surgical history of the American civil war, in which three officers were hit just at the same time. One had his leg from the knee down carried away, but he rode ten miles to the hospital. Another lost his little finger and he became a raving lunatic. While a third was shot through the body, and, though he did not shed a drop of blood externally, dropped dead from the shock.

Two more. Uncle Zekel Watson was accustomed to seeing good sized squares of cup cake, lemon cake or gingerbread on the supper table, and when he had his first plate of ice cream in a city restaurant he looked with some disfavor upon the macaroons and small sponge drops which accompanied it. "How do you like it?" asked his niece, who was under the honors of the city for her uncle. "The ice cream is first rate," said Uncle Zekel. "I call it entry good. But when you come to these things, be added, lifting one of the sponge 'lady fingers' and surveying it doubtfully. 'I presume to say they're all right enough, what there is of 'em, but there isn't enough of 'em; just nothing but gauze and swallow'—Youth's Companion.

Books. When I consider what some books have done for the world and what they are doing, how they keep up our hope, awaken new courage and faith, soothe the pain, give an ideal life to those whose homes are hard and cold, bind together distant ages and foreign lands, create new worlds of beauty, bring down truths from heaven, I give eternal blessings for this gift—James Freeman Clarke.

Family Peacemakers. "Many a family peace is made by the magisterial in a city than the city ever makes by the magisterial. There is hardly a day passes that every member of the minor judiciary is not called upon by a determined husband or wife, usually the latter, to issue a warrant. Nine cases out of ten the applicant is considerably excited and is eager to invoke the aid of the law in settling some trifling controversy. By calm argument and assurance the visitor can usually be persuaded to give the office of her or his peace and happiness another chance, and a home is perhaps saved from being broken up.—Philadelphia

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Joachim Bent.
Cronje's army is now occupying Cape Town.

The Times was the first paper in Canada to announce two of the most important events of the war—the surrender of Cronje and relief of Ladysmith.

County Maps.
Only a few copies of the splendid new map of Peterborough County left. Mounted on a card with wooden rollers 12.50; paper 10 cents. Times Bookstore.

New Saw-mill at Beavercreek.
The Beavercreek Times says:—Mr. Thos. Callahan, of Campbellford, representing the Beavercreek Company, arrived in town on Tuesday, and at once proceeded to making arrangements for building a large mill here in the spring. Part of Mr. Walter Mullett's farm, close to the river has been leased, and work will be commenced immediately. From 100 to 200 men will be given employment during the summer months. The sawmills to be derived from such an industry in our midst can hardly be estimated, and Beavercreek will undoubtedly boom.

Boy Wanted.
To learn bookbinding. Apply at the Times Bindery.

Two Big Scoops.
The public yesterday morning had living breathing proof that this great family journal scooped the Globe, Mail and Empire, and World. The relief of Ladysmith was first announced by us, not a word of which appeared in the early editions of the Toronto morning papers. The surrender of Cronje was another event which we got and gave to the public first. The little fellows here are used to being scooped, but the Toronto papers are not yet accustomed to it. The g.f.j. gets up in the morning early and is always looking for the proverbial worm.

Canadian Patents.
E. G. Rogers, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D.C., U.S.A., reports the following patents granted by the U. S. Patent Office, Feb. 28, 1900, to inventors residing in the Dominion of Canada—M. Brillinger, Toronto, electric suburban car; R. D. Fraser, Hamilton, umbrella cover; A. A. Fraser, New Glasgow, gripper for cable cars; G. O. Harrison, and J. A. Fitzsimmons, Vancouver, amalgamator; R. F. Hennings, Toronto, sectional water heater; W. C. Herbert, Brantford, cold-water iron; D. H. Hildred, Brantford, device for supporting burner heads; M. G. Lambert, Kewville, combination tool; T. Millie, Hamilton, method of portable tenting; J. W. Murray, St. George, window mask; E. Babin, Belleville, cutting apparatus for reaping or mowing machines; S. Turner, Toronto, step mechanism for wire coiling machine.

THE MUD LAKE BRIDGE.

A Deputation Waits on the Provincial Government

The deputation appointed to wait on the Ontario Government regarding the bridge over Chemung Lake had their meeting on Wednesday. The deputation consisted of the Warden and several members of the Town and County Councils, the Town Solicitor, Mr. J. B. McWilliams and several from Renfrew.

The deputation was introduced to Hon. J. M. Gibson, Attorney-General, and Hon. P. H. Lachford by Hon. J. H. Stratton and the claims of the deputation regarding an appropriation towards the construction of the Mud Lake bridge, were put forth by Warden Forster, Rev. Collins, of Renfrew, Mayor Kennedy, J. B. McWilliams, G. M. Rogers and E. D. Edwards.

The Ministers in reply assured the deputation that their request would receive immediate and careful consideration after which the deputation withdrew. The members of the deputation were afterwards entertained in the building by Hon. J. H. Stratton.

The Storm of the Season.
Yesterday's blow, which continued into last night, was the storm of the season. The roads are badly drifted, and in many parts of the country are impassable for anything but a light sleigh or cutter. Mr. C. Stanley had a mile down in Westwood and could not make the grade through the drifts, and had to postpone the sale. The strains were all late.

Corp. C. T. Thomas, of "D" Company, is amongst the wounded at the battle of Paardeberg. Corp. Thomas belongs to a military family, six brothers having been members of the Canadian militia, having been connected with the Governor-General's Foot Guards, Ottawa. Corporal Thomas has a brother who holds the position of night editor of the Morning Times. Mr. Thomas is naturally very anxious to know the extent and severity of his brother's wounds and is patiently awaiting details.

A Friend.
An old man named Pat Costello going about town soliciting aid in the shape of provisions and money, which he says is for a family named Johnson, living on Ayler street. He tells a pitiful story about the sufferings of the family, which are composed of mother and little children. Enquiry elicited the fact that Mrs. Johnson knew nothing about the matter, or had she ever received anything from Costello. He has no authority to beg for her, and she was very indignant on being told of Costello's actions. Costello is evidently a fraud of the first water. Since writing the above a charge has been laid against him by the Chief.

A Patient Feels.
Editor Morning Times:
Dear Sir,—Being a constant reader of your paper, I take the liberty of asking you if farmers are liable to be prosecuted for building a fence which is patented on their own property. The fence is composed of common wire and fence rails and is known as the Wortman fence. Kindly give me an answer to this in the Times Letter Box of next week, and

Mr. Fitzgerald of Vacuum Oil Co. is also a guest at the Snowden House.

Mr. J. D. Fawcett, of Lindsay, the celebrated curler, registered at the Snowden House last night on his way east.

Miss Maud McIntyre, of Fenella, is a guest of her sister, Mrs. James M. Campbell, Water street.

Mr. Jos. Hill, representative of the O'Keefe Brewery Co., of Toronto, is a guest at the Snowden House.

Mr. T. J. Dineen, who has for the past six years filled a responsible position in Miss Redkin's store, George street, has accepted a position as traveller for a Toronto house. Before leaving he was the recipient of a handsome present from Miss Redkin and the store staff. Mr. Dineen was very popular.

HOW PETERBOROUGH CELEBRATED THE VICTORY.

Whistles Blew, Bells Rang and a General Jubilation was indulged by Townsmen.

When the Times appeared yesterday morning announcing the relief of Ladysmith, the news spread rapidly, and by nine o'clock flags were being put up in all directions. When 12 o'clock struck every steam whistle and every public bell in town sounded a joyous and triumphant chorus. The pupils in the Institute were given a half holiday, and the boys formed in squads singing patriotic songs and shouting themselves hoarse.

The artillery was run out and a number of charges were fired on the market square, much to the consternation of nervous people who resided in the neighborhood.

Everybody was bubbling over with good nature. The faces of the people showed in unmistakable language the feelings of the heart—that the long trial in which brave General White and his gallant band were not the only sufferers—had come to an end.

Everywhere the people looked happy, and prepared for the demonstration which was to take place at night.

A procession was formed consisting of "mounted men, sleighs and footmen with torches and bands of music. These marched through the principal streets of the town amid a shower of rockets and a display of fireworks, and wound up at the market hall, where the crowd entered, and which was soon filled to the doors.

In a remarkably short space of time the immense market hall was completely filled with men of all ages from boys to gray haired men, bubbling over with excitement and rejoicing at the relief of brave Gen. White and his noble followers.

Mr. James Kennedy, our worthy Mayor, took the chair and invited the clergymen present to take seats on the platform, where the 57th Battalion band, S. O. E. band and officers of the militia, artillery and dragoons were assembled. The band opened with the National Anthem, which brought the vast audience to their feet, and hundreds of mainly voices took up the strain with a heartiness that made the hall ring. Prolonged cheers followed for Gen. Buller and his army.

Mr. Brown, a member of the Strathcona House, was requested to take a seat on the platform, which he did. The numerous address cannot be given in detail, as it was impossible to hear the speakers, owing to the continual melody of fife, horn, bugles, tin whistles and numerous other so-called musical instruments. The following programme was given:

Address—Rev. S. J. Murray.
Cheers for White.
"Gude Brittain"—57th Battalion band.
"Soldiers of the Queen"—Sergeant Smith and Comrades.
Address—Rev. J. C. Davidson.
"The Maple Leaf"—57th Batt. band.
Address—Mr. D. W. Dunlop.
"Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue"—57th Batt. band.
Address—Rev. J. G. Potter.
Address—Major E. B. Edwards.
Recognition—Major Miller.
Address—Rev. J. Haskew.
Address—Mr. J. W. Garvin.
For want of a few hours to use their bayonets on, some of our young soldiers had their heads impaled on their bayonets.

Miss Lillian Stanley returned to Toronto yesterday evening after spending three weeks the guest of her brother, Mr. Charles Stanley.

Mr. Dickson Davidson left yesterday for Vancouver, B.C., and carried with him the hearty good-will of nearly every man, woman and child in Peterborough.

The Times Leads Them All.
That the Times leads in supplying its readers with the latest and most reliable news, everyone now admits. Our war reports are sent from London and not from New York, hence their accuracy. The Times was the first newspaper in Canada to announce the surrender of Gen. Cronje's army and yesterday morning the relief of Ladysmith was published. No other morning paper had this information. The reason of this is, The Times gets reports up to 4 a.m. each morning while the Toronto morning papers go to press about 2.30. The Times leads them all.

Penaltyman's Request.
Yesterday a deputization of delegates delegates representing a number of the local poultry associations of the province waited upon the Provincial Government for the purpose of soliciting that a grant be made local associations to assist them in holding their shows and in promoting the poultry business.

Mr. Wm. Collins, secretary of the Peterborough Association, was prime mover in organizing the deputization. There were present Messrs. Wm. Collins, Peterborough; Dr. A. W. Hall and John Chambers, Toronto; J. McFadden, Hamilton; A. W. Tyson, Guelph; John Ramsey, Owen Sound; J. A. Wilson, Sarnia; Corcoran, Stratford, and H. B. Donovan, of the "Poultry Review," Toronto.

A meeting of the delegates was held at the Albion Hotel, when it was decided to ask for a grant of $500 for each of the thirteen old Agriculture and Arts districts.

The deputization was received at 2.30

THE CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE

CHATHAM, ONT.

Canada's greatest school of SHORTHAND and BUSINESS training, still holds a very strong lead over its contemporaries.

No better evidence of this claim can be offered than the following, which shows how widely this justly popular school is patronized.

10 Cities, Towns and Villages in Canada, United States and Newfoundland represented in the attendance during the year to date.

10 Countries in Ontario, six of the United States, together with five from Manitoba and Alberta, have sent their representatives. They come from the Atlantic on the coast to the Pacific on the west. Distance proves no hindrance to those who are determined to attend the college.

The present is an excellent time of year to make a start. Pupils are admitted at any time. For catalogue, address

NONAGNARIANS TO THE POPE

Rome, March 3.—The Catholic non-agnarians of the world presented an address of congratulation to Pope Leo XIII on the occasion of the Holy Year, as the Sovereign Pontiff completed his 94th year to-day. The idea of this novel address by signers nearly a century old originated, it is said, in the mind of an aged priest in Thessalonica. The suggestion was met with favor to the continent and copies of the document prepared for signatures. The following is a translation of the address: "Having arrived at an age when the soul feels itself free from influences which, at other stages of life, often mislead or smother its nobler impulses, the undersigned are able to understand better than ever before those great truths of which Your Holiness has never wearied of reminding the world, and which the latter, in its own misfortune, obstinately ignores. The remembrance of the great part of Your Holiness' life must fill your soul with gratitude to God for all that he has accomplished through you. And to this consciousness Your Holiness must certainly be indebted for the flourishing health, the ever youthful strength which are the wonder of the world (the joy of the Universal Church)." This date has a double significance, as it is also the 51st anniversary of the coronation of the Pope. He received the congratulations of the high prelates in the throne room.

CARL SCHURZ HONORED.

New York, March 3.—This is the 71st anniversary of the birth of Carl Schurz, the eminent social economist. It is appropriately celebrated by his admirers throughout Germany and America.

THE CASE OF THE MASHONA.

Cape Town, March 3.—The Supreme Court resumed the case of the seized Mashona to-day.

PORTO RICO TARIFF IN COURT.

New York, March 3.—President McKinley's policy of treating Porto Rico as foreign territory and levying the full tariff duties upon imports from that island, in spite of the decision by the Supreme Court in the case of A. S. Loewell & Co. v. Insular Co., has been challenged in the United States Circuit Court to enjoin Collector Midwell from continuing to collect import duty on goods from Porto Rico. This is brought about by a suit of law the question which is agitating the entire Federal Administration. Washington and both branches of Congress—the United States Senate and the House of Representatives—have taken a different line from the administration in the matter of applying the tariff to the island. The suit for Loewell & Co. was brought by Charles Henry Butler, of 71 Broadway. It was argued to-day and the application remanded by District Attorney Burnett.

UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN GLEE.

Milwaukee, March 3.—The Glee, Mandolin and Banjo Clubs of the State University are shortly to start on a tour of this and neighboring States.

BLOW TO ANTI-IMPERIALISTS.

Boston, March 3.—E. Spencer Pratt, who was Consul-General to Singapore during the Spanish war, who was to lecture here under the auspices of the Twentieth Century Club to-night, has surprised and disappointed the anti-imperialists by his sudden departure for Europe.

DEMOCRATIC PARTY EXTENDING.

Topeka, Kan., March 3.—Ex-Supreme Court Reporter G. C. Clemens will lecture here to-night on the extension of Social Democracy. Clemens has been a staunch Populist.

from which party he has withdrawn to espouse the new cause.

TRIPLE FENCING.

New York, March 3.—At Morning-side Heights to-day Yale, Columbia and Cornell meet in a fencing contest. Fencing has taken on a great boom in the colleges this year and an inter-collegiate meet is soon to be held at the New York Racquet and Tennis Club.

ORATORIAL ASSOCIATION.

Columbia, Mo., March 3.—The Missouri Oratorical Association holds its annual contest here to-day.

TEXAS ANNIVERSARY.

San Antonio, Texas, March 3.—The Independence of the Republic of Texas which was established on this day in 1837 is being celebrated as Independence Day throughout the State. The Republic in 1845 joined the Union.

TAKES VACATION.

Berlin, March 3.—John B. Jackson, Secretary of the United States Embassy, and Mrs. Jackson, left to-day for a month's vacation.

Buffalo, March 3.—Justice John Woodward, of the Appellate division of the Supreme Court will deliver the oration at the celebration of the birthday anniversary of Robert Emmet, to-morrow evening.

OPEN MEETING.

Peoria, Ill., March 3.—The Emmet Club, instead of giving the usual banquet to-morrow, Emmet's birthday, proposes to hold an open meeting, at which speaking, singing, and instrumental music will be held away. The meeting will be devoted to speeches in sympathy with the two South African republics in the war they are now waging with England. All nationalities are to be invited to participate.

EMMET CLUB FAVORS BOERS.

Wilmington, Del., March 3.—The Irish Music Club and the Robert Emmet Association will hold an entertainment in the Opera House for the benefit of the Boer hospital fund to-morrow. The day is usually celebrated as Emmet's birthday.

TO CELEBRATE EMMET DAY

Chicago, March 3.—Elaborate preparations have been made by the Irish societies of Chicago to celebrate Emmet day by the Irish Nationalists and nineteenth Irish societies, to-day. The celebration will be held in Central Music Hall. Miss Maud Gonne, the Irish Joan of Arc, will deliver an address. Father Canavan, of the Holy Name cathedral, will deliver an address on "Robert Emmet," and will be followed by Colonel Richard S. Burke on "How Maud Gonne earned the title of 'The Irish Joan of Arc' and why she deserves it." John F. Keating will read a proclamation by the Irish Nationalists. W. H. Joyce, of the Nationalists, will make permanent chairman.

MARTIN'S TERM BEGINS.

Richmond, Va., March 3.—U. S. Senator Thos. S. Martin to-morrow enters upon his new term, for which he was re-elected in December.

TO BE SUPPRESSED.

Elizabeth, N. J., March 3.—The Women's Christian Temperance Union and good women of this city have taken an action to suppress "Sobho," which is billed for to-night, at Jacob's theatre. They have appealed to the mayor to suppress the play.

CONGRESSIONAL CONTEST.

Chicago, March 3.—Cumberland County Democrats are holding a primary election to-day, to select state delegates and decide the contest between Congressman Joseph B.

Crowley and former Congressman A. J. Hunter.

AN OHIO SOCIETY DINNER.

New York, March 3.—The annual dinner of the Ohio Society will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria to-night. The Ohio Society is the largest of the State societies here, and for a time this city was dominated by Ohio men. Mayor Strong was an Ohioan and not many years ago all the big daily newspapers were edited by sons of Ohio. They included Whitelaw Reid of the Tribune, Col. W. L. Brown of the News, John A. Cokerill of the World, Eaton S. Driggs of the Herald, and John R. McLean of the Journal. Several financial kings of Wall street were from Ohio. They were Calvin Brios, Sam Thomas, John Byrne, also Ex-Gov. Hoadley is regarded as one of the "Metropolis" great lawyers. The Ohio dinner to-night will bring together all the great sons of the state who have helped to make it great, and the political utterances will be part of the campaign literature of 1900. President McKinley, Senator Hanna, and Senator Foraker will all attend.

The Bear Old Union

For The Times.

'Tis but a bit of bunting,
But our brave Canadian hand
Are fighting like true lion's whelps,
In defence of the Motherland:
For such acts of devotion,
The Maple Leaf should be Worked in upon the Union Jack,
And wave on every day.

'Tis but a bit of bunting,
The Bear Old Union Jack;
Yet thousands for it, give their lives
While shielding from attack, Lying British hearts must cease to Dread.

'Tis but a bit of bunting,
Yet floats over every sea,
An emblem true of freedom,
For people that are free.
Gather round our glorious flag,
Wherever it be unfurled,
And show the nations' far and near,
'Tis the best flag in the world.

The Storm of the Season.

Yesterday's blow, which continued into last night, was the storm of the season. The roads are badly drifted, and in many parts of the country are impassable for anything but a light sleigh or cutter. Mr. C. Stapleton had a sale down in Westwood and could not make the grade through the drift and had to postpone the sale. The drivers were all late.

HUTCH TABLETS

For dyspepsia and sour stomach possess a superiority over all other treatments in that they give relief instantly and cure permanently. Every parent knows how impatient a child becomes under the cruel infliction of illness, and these features, when Hutch is known not to produce harmful effects, will be appreciated. Headache and all stomach ailment are banished almost immediately. During this holiday time when the little one's mind and body are being built up for the long while until next vacation it is imperative that each child should be pain free. Hutch is equally valuable for old as well as young folk. The dose varies—the cure is invariable. Deliciously chocolate coated, Hutch is sealed in glass, thus its primary virtue is retained.

PLAN TO AID BRITISH ARMY.

Englishmen Here will Send a Hospital Corps to the War.

Chicago, March 3.—A movement has been started among the English-born citizens of the United States to organize a hospital corps similar to that raised by the Irish societies recently and sent to the Transvaal to care for the wounded soldiers of Great Britain. The plan was brought up at a meeting of the Society of the Sons and Daughters of the British Empire at the Great Northern hotel last evening and the society entered heartily into the work.

The scheme started in the Society of the Sons of St. George, which has members in all parts of the United States. It is proposed to enlist and equip a corps exactly similar to the one which recently left Chicago for South Africa to aid the Boers. It is hoped to get the corps ready for service within the next six weeks.

The Sons and Daughters of the British Empire are preparing for another demonstration, to be given in Central Music Hall March 31, for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the British soldiers killed in the war in South Africa. Dr. W. Douglas McKean, who was born and reared in the Transvaal, will be the orator of the occasion.

A large delegation of English-born residents of Chicago will take a special train for Joliet, March 3, to attend a mass meeting of a branch society of the Sons and daughters of the British Empire.

A PICKPOCKET'S RUSE.

The Trick by Which She Once Got a Woman's Purse.

Jack Piggott, the noted pickpocket, used to tell a funny story about the difficulty he had in picking the pocket of a fashionably dressed woman who was looking in at the window of Shreve's jewelry store. It illustrates the hardships that the light fingered gentry are forced to endure in the pursuit of their profession and when first related was considered amusing not only by Piggott, but by the many to whom he confided his experience.

It was a cold winter evening, and the lady as whose purse Piggott had designed stood looking at the holiday snare so temptingly displayed. Piggott said that he tried all the arts known to the craft for the extraction of the wallet, but all in vain, until, as a last resort, he snatched a toothpick from his pocket and, reaching around, tickled the lady's ear. Instinctively she raised her hand to brush away the invading insect or whatever it might be and in so doing let go of her pocketbook that she was carrying in the pocket of her coat.

It was only an instant, but it was long enough for the expert pickpocket to get in his work, and when she put her hand back her money was gone, and in the crowd around her she could not identify the pale faced, fashionably dressed young man at her side as the person who had robbed her, and if she had accused him there would have been no proof against him as the swag was at once passed to a pal who stood ready to receive it and run. Piggott was not even arrested for that crime, and the lady's ludicrous outcries furnished material for mirth long afterwards.—San Francisco Bulletin.

ADVANCING FROM KIMBERLEY.

British Forces Have Occupied the Neighboring Districts.

Kimberley, Feb. 27.—Col. Peckham, with a mounted force and a Marine, proceeded to Barkly, where he was warmly welcomed. He left a strong guard and then proceeded to Langlands, Windarton, and Klip Dam. There were rumors of Boers in the neighborhood, but no demonstrations occurred.

Healed of Her Heart Pangs!

After doctors had said no cure—Acute heart disease had put Mrs. Fitzpatrick well nigh in the clutch of the "Grim Reaper." But Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart met her at the hospital door, offered her life. she accepted the great healer and to-day is well and strong.

In these days of hurry and bustle, nervous strain, poor digestion, the struggle of the temple clerics for an existence and the conflicting rules of the married man for money, the heart, the human engine, is wrought upon for double the duty that Providence originally assigned it. Thus it is that we may pick up any newspaper any day and read of the sudden taking off of this, that and the other person, here, there and yonder—the cause assigned, heart failure, strain, overwork, and no assistance offered nature to help her carry her load. Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart is a positive remedy. Thousands of cases where such and sudden death seemed imminent, its wonderful curative powers have been demonstrated, and in most acute forms of heart disease relief has come inside of thirty minutes after the first dose has been taken. Some of the most pronounced symptoms of heart disorder are: Palpitation, shortness of breath, weak and irregular pulse, smothering spells, swelling of the feet and ankles, tenderness and pain in the left side, chilly sensations, uneasiness if sleeping on the left side, fainting spells, hunger and exhaustion. Any one of these symptoms is enough to convince of the need of heart disease—and any one of them, if neglected, may mean sudden death to the patient.

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart not only gives almost instant relief, but in the most stubborn cases it will effect a rapid and permanent cure. It is not an artificial stimulant. It is a heart specific, and so has after effects or depression. It acts directly on the nerve centers, between nervous centers, and poise all weaknesses, and generally tones the system.

Mrs. John Fitzpatrick, of Genoa, Ont., was a great sufferer from heart disease. Here was a stubborn case of over five years' standing. She was treated by several eminent physicians and heart specialists without any permanent relief. She became so bad that she went to the hospital, and was in a short while discharged from there as a hopeless incurable; but, to use her own words, "At a last resort, I bought a bottle of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart. One dose gave me almost instant relief from a very acute spasm. I felt encouraged, and persisted in its use. It just took three bottles to cure me completely, and I gladly bear my testimony to this wonderful remedy as a life savior."

What it has done for Mrs. Fitzpatrick it can do for any sufferer from heart disease.

Dr. Agnew's Cathartic Powder relieves and in the head in ten minutes, and has saved untold cases of fifty years' standing.

Dr. Agnew's treatment will cure blind, bleeding or itching piles in from three to five nights. One application relieves the most irritating skin diseases; 25 cents.

Dr. Agnew's Pills, for constipation, slight headache, biliousness and stomach troubles generally. Only 25 cents a box.

Sold by Chemist & Druggist.

PERSIA AND RUSSIA.

The Ancient Empire Ready to Fall into the Moslem's Grasp.

London, March 2.—Of the 9,000,000 people in Persia, a country that is said to be falling into the control of Russia, the large majority are Mahomedans of Zemi or Sanskrit origin and of the Shiah sect of Islamism. A few fire worshippers, or Parsees remain, and a sprinkling of Jews, Armenians, a horde of Kurds, and about 30,000 Nestorians, or Chaldeans, most of whom are now Protestants. Perhaps the most difficult part of the population Russia will have to deal with are the Babees, who are estimated to number nearly half a million. They are followers of the Bab, or prophet, who rose early in the late reign. He promulgated a new religion, the commission of a sect that existed in Persia about 15 centuries ago and reached such power that it was necessary to massacre nearly 200,000 of them. It was a Babee who wounded Naur-ed-Deen Shah many years ago and it was a Babee who finally assassinated him. In the late reign they committed some serious disorders. Their membership is secret and includes all classes, and they will be as ready to turn against the Shah as against the British. For like many communists, the dividing line between them and anarchy is often scarcely perceptible.

The Parsees are not an unhappy people. They have not been more oppressed than other Asiatics. They are bright, intelligent, and full of conversation and wit. One hears more laughter in Persia than in almost any other country.

But their religious fanaticism is at present practically synonymous with strictness, and if their religious freedom and customs are untouched they will not greatly mind the loss of national liberty. They dislike Europeans because they are not co-religionists rather than because they are not Persians.

MILLBROOK'S LOYALTY.

DISPLAYED OVER THE NEWS FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

The Citizens indulge in a wild time,
in which there is great rejoicing over Cromie's surrender.

Special to the Times.

Millbrook, March 1.—Never in the history of our town was there such an outburst of enthusiasm and loyalism displayed as that which marked the glad tidings of the surrender of Gen. Joubert, the lion and brave commander of the Transvaal. No sooner had the telegram been received than long streams of bunting and flags flew from many windows, and the fire and church bells echoed the joyful news. The school children became so enthusiastic by the inspiring news that the teachers proclaimed a holiday, which was spent by them in parading the streets in a body for three hours, using everything that would make a noise, from the drum to the cow bell, business being practically suspended till the fever had been checked by over-indulgence.

In the evening the streets were thronged by citizens, and music far and near who had learned of the proclamation to take place at 7.30, (which was so cleverly arranged by a number of the old Canadian bachelors) or true Canadian patriots, that the crowd cheered themselves hoarse.

The procession was formed as follows:—the mounted men; 15 representing the House with Gen. Ordle as leader, and 15 Tommy Atkins, with Gen. Kitchen as leader.

Each took position in the eastern and western suburbs of the town and marched forward almost in battle's bold array, till the business portion of the town was reached, and then a gallant charge was ordered by Lord Kitchen, with the effect that the Boers were captured with all the business of war. The procession was then formed, headed by our gallant general, and followed by the Citizens' brass band, the prisoners of war and the noble faces of the victorious Tommy Atkins, and an enthusiastic mob marched through all the principal streets, amid the hoos and yells of "Brave Kitchen," "Brave Boer," "Brave at his killing," "Canadians forever," and the shrill echo of firearms and brilliant illumination of sky rockets and fire crackers.

Upon returning to the Town Hall a number of brief but patriotic addresses were received amid terrific applause. Cromie was so cleverly designed by our artists that Canada's renowned cartoonist of the Montreal Star sent for a copy, which was returned at once by telegraph, and has already appeared in the columns of that paper. Mr. Jas. Reynolds acted Mr. Cromie to perfection. Taking all into consideration, it was one of the most notable events that has ever occurred the loyal blood of our patriots, and will be remembered by those who witnessed it.

They Dye for the World.

DIAMOND DYES
Are Imitated But Never Equalled.

For over a quarter of a century Diamond Dyes have stood the severest tests in millions of homes, and have won a fame and popularity that has made them for the world's standard home dyes. Speculators, who for the sake of large profits, have endeavored to imitate the Diamond Dyes, but their productions have always proved miserable failures and disappointments. There is as much difference between the genuine Diamond Dyes and the imitations as there is between a genuine bank note and a counterfeit.

If you wish to dye successfully, profitably and well, avoid all imitation package dyes. Ask for the "Diamond" and see that you get them.

THE ARCTIC MOSQUITO.

It is About the Most Terrible Insect Fest in the World.

"Nothing that has ever been written about the Arctic mosquito begins to come up to the real thing," said a guest in the St. Charles corridor the other evening. "I went up the Yukon river in the summer of 1894, representing the Alaska and Dominion Trading Company, and we struck mosquitoes as soon as we got into the hills. They are twice as large as our familiar bayonet species, and their sting is like the prod of a hot needle. They sweep along the valleys in dense clouds, and if they catch a man unprepared they are liable to blind him before he can escape. I heard stories of children being stung to death and can readily believe them."

"Whenever we went ashore we wore heavy hat nets and took the utmost precaution, but were certain to suffer more or less. One of our party cut the tongue out of his shoe, and a narrow line of sock was exposed under the lacing. Next day he was bitten there at least a hundred times, and his feet were so terribly inflamed that the shoes had to be cut off."

"Another man, a fireman in the boat crew, got drunk on Alaska whiskey one afternoon and lay down to take a nap in a corner of the engine room. I noticed him a little later and was horrified at the solid brown mass of mosquitoes that had settled on a small exposed section of his cheek and throat. In an hour his face was swollen out of all resemblance to anything human, he was unable to swallow and was burning with fever. It was a week before he was able to be about. I saw a number of cattle near Fort Hamilton that had been made stone blind by stings near the eye."

"The Arctic foothill mosquito is without doubt the most terrible insect pest in the world."—New Orleans Times Democrat.

THE PARIS SHOW.

The Paris exposition catalogue will contain 100,000 names.

The Paris of Milwaukee will be part of the exhibit of that city at the Paris exposition. A series of photographic views of the public parks of that city will be shown.

It took a bid of $75,000 francs to secure the privilege of letting out seats for the Paris exposition of 1900. For the 1889 exhibition the successful bid for the monopoly was $9,000 francs.

Governor Mount of Indiana is personally supervising an elaborate exhibit for his state at the Paris exposition. One of the features of this will be a series of large photographs to show the progress of the "good roads" movement in Indiana, where there are now 50,000 miles of graded and graveled highway.

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., With Monahan Treas., after securing the Jim Hill claim adjoining it on the north, awarded the ledge and W. H. Stowell reports on this ore as $100 in gold, immediate. Upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Grant, through our agent, J. J. Brown, Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasury stock, the company has authorized me to place a small amount of this stock at Spokane. Remember the Fairfax and Jim Hill are less than 500 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $12.50 per share, and is an investment of that. The Fairfax at 25 cts. is a speculation. Watch it in the market.

CLEVER, BUT SOULLESS.

A Woman's New Way in Which to Pay Social Debts.

"I don't know much of the ways of the world," said a young physician not long ago. "For I am not in society, but if many society women are as one I know here in town I think it is safer to be out of it. It was not because, but it wasn't so long ago as that plenty of people can remember the circumstances. I had among my patients an elderly woman who lived with the daughter's family. The daughter lived, if not beyond her name, at least up to the very edge, went out a great deal and was entertained a great deal.

"The mother fell sick with a complaint which I knew would prove fatal. I did not inform the family till one day the daughter asked me to tell her frankly what her mother's condition was and just how long she could live. I told her that the old lady could not possibly last more than a fortnight. He begged me not to let anybody know how serious the case was. She didn't want her young daughters distressed, she said.

"Of course I told nobody, and just a week after that I read in the papers that Mrs. Dash, the daughter of my dying patient, had sent out invitations for a large dancing party, to be given on an evening a fortnight away. My patient did not live as long as I had expected. The day after she died I read in the papers that 'owing to the sudden death of her mother Mrs. Dash had been compelled to recall her invitations.'

"She had never intended to give a ball. She could not have afforded it, and she 'bluffed.' I have cold shivers every time I see her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

AN EXCITING LIFE.

Why the Chicago Girl's Brown Hair Turned Golden Red.

"Gosh, Marler, but that was a close shave!" exclaimed Uncle Eben as he dragged his worthy spouse out of the way of a street car that was yet 30 feet away. "This yer Chicago life is 'nough to make a man's hair turn gray."

"Turn gray?" started his wife.

"'Twouldn't be so bad if that was all it done. It's decent and respectable to have gray hair, but when it comes to making a peer young gal's hair turn yellow just on account of the excitement of all these cars on railroad on streets an boyin people there's when I say it's a sin to live in big cities. I'm a-goin right out to 'Lina Jane's house, of I kin ever find it, an stay right in it till we leave Chicago."

"How do you know it makes people's hair turn yellow?" asked Uncle Eben.

"I ain't never heard tell of anything of that kind."

"Well, I see it with my own eyes—last winter I see it turn brown again after the poor dears was rested all summer in the country. You know them four gals what staid all summer over at Cousin Miles'! When they first come, they'd big brown eyes an fair complexion an right yellow hair. Party soon every one of 'em's hair begin to get streaked in spots, an before the summer was gone they all had rich brown hair. Then I saw one of 'em what made their hair turn brown, an she said it was all's brown, but that the excite life she'd been livin in Chicago, what she had to act in a theater every night, made it turn yellow. Poor thing! She looked so much better at the end of the summer that I hate to think of her coming back to this great, wicked city."

CHURCH AND CHURCHMEN

The old "Second church" in Boston celebrated its two hundred and fiftieth anniversary recently.

The Universalist church reports 1,008 parishioners and 47,471 families, an increase of about 1,300 families over last year.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale will not occupy the pulpit of his church in Boston again until spring. Dr. Lyman Abbott will be the supply for the month of January.

Rabbi Emanuel Schreiber of Youngstown, O., who has been chosen rabbi of the Emanuel synagogue of Chicago, is 45 years old and a native of Austria. He is a doctor of the Royal college of Vienna and has written a number of religious works.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Glassware should be washed in warm water with a dash of soap powder, rinsed off in clear, warm water and polished with soft linen towel.

Hot or cold water cans or jugs should be turned upside down when not in use, so that they can drain and dry thoroughly. If left damp, they will rust inside and be spoiled, because rust eats holes in the metal.

For dishwashing kerosene oil has been found to form an emulsion with the grease, so that a few drops of kerosene dropped into cold or tepid water will keep knife handles from being injured, as in the case where soap and hot water are used.

RECOVER AMERICAN LIFE.

The North American Life Assurance Company, whose statement for the year 1899 will be found in another column, occupies the well-deserved reputation for solidity and enterprise. Nearly five million dollars worth of new policies were written during the year, and the cash income from premiums and investments approached a million. In the language of the report: "The financial position of the Company is unimpaired, its percentage of net surplus to liabilities exceeds that of any other Home Company."

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT.

Submitted to the Shareholders at the annual General Meeting, held at the Company's office, 3 Toronto-street, Toronto, on Monday, the 19th day of February, 1900.

The Directors beg to submit their Report, together with the financial statements, for the year 1899, the fourth in the Company's history, and have pleasure in stating that its business shows a considerable increase in volume and continues to give satisfactory results.

The net income from premiums, after deducting $7,514.70 for re-insurances, was

The amount derived as income from investments was $1,777.71.

Five hundred and eight-eight claims were paid during the year, amounting after deducting $1,115.57 received from re-insuring companies, to $27,708.00.

The Revenue Account, submitted herewith, after debiting all charges and expenses, shows a balance of $12,273.99. This has been applied as follows:—$5,000.00 to

Contingent Fund, $1,000.00 in payment of Dividend No. 2, $3,000.00 unappropriated. The Reserve Fund now stands at $20,000.00 and the Contingent Fund at $3,000.00.

The Company's paid-up capital is now $147,000.00, and the securities deposited with the Registrar-General at Ottawa amount to $25,231.58.

The premium income shows an increase of $25,721.48 over that of 1898.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The principle of providing compensation for accidents to workpeople, referred to last year as actively developing in England, has made considerable headway in Canada, but the Labor Legislation introduced in that connection may be said, in its present form, to place a premium upon speculative damage suits, and to be subversive of the object sought.

The necessity for adopting some common basis of practice in transacting Li-

President, an arrangement with that end in view is nearing completion.

From an Agent's and Policyholder's standpoint, the financial standing of an Insurance Company is always of interest. In that connection reference may be

THE PARSON AT THE MATCH.

It's very disagreeable to sit here in the cold.
And sinful waste of time—oh, well, it's too late now to mope.
I'll think about my sermon and my prayers for Sunday next.
And the young folks may be happy—let me see—what was my text?
But what a throng of people—an immortal soul in each—
With such an audience this would be a splendid place to preach.
I'd have the pulpit half way down—what ice without a smirch!
Here are the men—I wonder if they ever go to church.
"The teams?" Ah, yes, "the forwards, backs and cover-point and goal";
Thank you, my dear, I understand—Is that a lump of coal?
"Hush!" Ah, yes, "the puck?" just so! One's holding it, I see—That fellow with his clothes all on—Ah
that's the referee.
What was his whistling for? His dog?
Well, well, that's rough; I really think we're doing wrong to stay.
It's sickening, deafening; dear! I wish this uproar could be stilled.
I do sincerely trust there'll not be anybody killed.

It's a wonderful exhibition of alertness, speed and strength.
I suppose there's not much danger—
there's a fellow at full length.
He's up again; that's plucky. Well, the little lad has pluck—
And now he's master of the ice, possessor of the puck.
He dodges two opponents, but collides with one at last.
A Philistine Goliath—David baffles him and last.
Darts forward o'er the whirling sheet,
while from each crowded row
The crowd spectators cheer him on—Look has he lost it? No!
He's clear again. Played, played, by boy.
I'd like to see him score a goal.
(I'll have no voice for Sunday if I shout like this much more.)
But there his ruthless enemies overwhelm him in a swirl—
Well played, you hero, safely passed. Now for a shot on goal.
Shoot, shoot, you duffer; shoot, you goose, you ass, you great galoot.
You adle-pated idiot, you nincompoop
you, shoot.
You've lost it—never mind—well tried—that other duck was grand.
Why do they stop? "Off side," you say?
That's puzzling. I suppose it's right. I wish they'd not delay.
This is a most provoking interruption to the play.

"Cold?" Nothing of the sort. I was—
I'm heated with the game.
I'm really enjoying it, indeed, I'm glad I came.
I'd like to see both sides at once; I won't from where we sit.
They've scored one wonder—What's the row? A player has been hit?
Such things are bound to happen in a rough game like this.
They'll soon resume the play, my dear;
there's nothing much amiss—
Some trifling accident received in a rough body check.
A shoulder dislocated or a fracture of the neck.

Oh, no, it's nothing serious—the game begins again.
They're here, a writhing, struggling mass
of half a dozen men,
Battling and grunting with the strife,
And breathing hard and fast,
Sweated back and forth and stooping low like elms before the blast.
Changing their places like a fleet of vessels tossed-driven That blindly meet within the waves and part with timbers riven, Waving their sticks with frantic zeal—
But isn't this a sight?
My goodness! I could sit and watch a game like this all night.
There, dirty trousers, there's your chance.
Muffed it! Why weren't you quick?
This is a sight to make the end rejoice, go head the stick,
To rouse the drowsy and give them life
to last their half a year—Hit him again—I wish I had my congregation here.

My stars! and this is hockey. Hockey's the king of sports.
This is the thing to come to when you're feeling out of sorts.
This is the greatest holiday I've had for many weeks.
This helps one to appreciate the feeling of the Greeks.
I understand my Homer now—O Hercules, beloved.
You Trojan giant, be that's cast in an Olympic mould, Ye gods, be more than doubled up that other stalwart core—Here comes swift-footed Mercury, the messenger of Jove.
Adorn the blue, outstripping all, he speeds. Oh, what a sport!

His shoulders have no wings, but see, he has them on his shirt;
He's broken through the forward line,
battered the cover-point, Thrown down the other man and kneaded their game all out of joint.
And now he rushes on the goal—this makes the scores real.
Goal! goal! hurrah! hurrah! well done,
men of the whined wheel!

At last—how soon! the game is done:
I've scarcely drawn a breath;
The setting out is difficult; I'm almost crushed to death.
The cars are packed; how we'll get home
I'm sure I do not know.
Here's room for you; get up, my dear:
I'll walk; away you go.

My sermon's gone, but as I walk, I cannot help but think That, after all, perhaps I've found a sermon in the rink.

This world is an arena with a slippery sheet of ice.
And all have stakes and hockey sticks and enter without price.
And make all round for those who rest—
the idle and the old;
But those who are not in the game are apt to find it cold.
Some play defence, some forward with terrific speed and stream.
The puck keeps flying 'twixt the goals at spring up in a trice.
Now up, now down, across and back, here,
there and everywhere,
The grit of skates, the crack of sticks, the shouting, fills the air.
Some slip and fall thousand times and play the part of a trier.
Some go to places on their feet, and have to leave the ice.
Some play offside, kick, tackle, trip try every kind of foul.
Some players are forever cheered, some only get a howl.
We seldom here the whistle of the watchful Referee,
Who mostly lets the game go on as if he didn't see.

No going rings out half-time to let the players get their breath.
To most full time comes only with the solemn stroke of death.
The winners are not always those who make the biggest score—
The vanquished are not always those when the suburban game is o'er.
For many things are added to make up
the grand amount,
And everything is taken at the last into account—
The score of sticks we played with, and the way our feet were led,
For the trophy in salvation, and the reference is God.

God prosper our Canadian sports, and smoke them clean and pure, Whole-hearted, manly, generous, and let them long endure!
Long live each finest winter sport, each good Canadian game,
To train the youth in lusty health and strength of frame,
To make them noble, vigorous, straightforward, ardent, bold, More near a perfect standard than the grandest knights of old!

Keep in the path of rectitude the young throughout the land,
And guide them ever on their way by these unerring hand,
Along the slippery path of life in safety
strength of frame,
And keep their bodies holy as the temple of the soul;
For the river of the future from the pre-sent's fountain runs,
And a nation's hope is founded on the virtue of her sons.

The glory of a man is strength. Thy wisdom has declared—
Let strength increase, and strength of frame which ought to be gained,
And let these twin go hand in hand with strength of heart and mind,
And strength of character present all forms of strength combined.
Oh, make our strength the strength of truth and good,
And use it for those ends and turn what's glory to Thine own!
—W. M. L. Macdonald, in the Montreal Witness.

A JUSTIFIABLE DESIRE.

The large majority of people very naturally have a justifiable desire that the physician's prescription should be filled by a competent druggist. Our long experience and our ample facilities for dispensing are at your command at all hours.
If you have wisely decided to make use of the "Cure-O-Cough" and kind kind of medicine, we are always prepared to supply your wants. Our stock of this popular medicine is always fresh and pure. We heartily recommend it.
H. R. Macdonald, Druggist, Peterborough, Ont.

His Opportunity.
"An operation for appendicitis," the surgeon assured the sufferer, "is rather a serious thing, of course, but it is not too early an alarming one, and it will discuss, moreover, just how much satisfaction you have."
"You" replied the patient, "I suppose it will show just what's in me. Go ahead."—Chicago Tribune.

Picking Out the Winners.
The latest plan to punish a scamp
when the waiter and male guests are clad in swallowtails is to pin your hands to your trousers pockets and fling
a few coins when you meet a champion. If his eyes begin to bulge and his head commences to travel toward you, he's a winner. This is a straight-up-Cincinnati Requirer.

A Blackmail.
Tommy—I bought this dog to make money out of him.
His Master's Boon—How is that?
Tommy—I expect you to give me 20 cents for try him up over there you want to see later. He's a real strong-Ohio State Journal.

Sentenced to Electro-cution. out "my copy—A man, 'I'm' and murderer of Melville R. Lord, confined Dunsmuir, was sentenced to electro-cution during the week terming to-morrow. Mull has experienced religion and said that he had been redeemed from his wicked ways.

Crown Prince's Widow Marries.
Vienna, March 1.—Margaretta Marquis de Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, widow of all delays, the Crown Prince's widow of Austria, widow of the Crown Prince Rudolph, is to be married to Count von Lichter, and now, according to "Vanity Fair," she is to be the Austrian throne. Archduke Ferdinand, three months ago married Countess Chotek, for her sake resigning his claim to rule. She is a handsome lady in waiting of Princess Steph-ania.

OLD COLONEL R. E. MORSE.

Have you ever sat out on the edge of the bed in the morning with your elbows on your knees, your head buried in your hands, and wondered if there was anything you would do the night before that would have made you feel worse?
Among the more polite this feeling is spoken of as the realization of indigestion in diet; but you plain people call it old Colonel R. E. Morse. There are lots of things that will give you a Colonel, but a Hutch is the only thing that will make you feel like a person with a future instead of a person with a past. You must cleanse your liver, and that's all there is in it. Here's the proposition:
Say that there are two medical preparations standing on the table, one is a new, dangerous, bad tasting stuff, the other one a small deliciously chocolate coated, pleasant tasting tablet and gives instant relief, which would you take?
Is as much as our advertising is confided entirely to be most intelligent, all we ask is, that you give the proposition one moment of your thought. The immense sale of Hutch proves beyond a doubt that the Canadian people are thoroughly disgusted with vile tasting medicine and were merely waiting the advent of something new and delicious like Hutch. It is a Doctor for Ten Cents and gives instant relief.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Wanted.
A little girl about 15 or 16 years of age to do light house work. No children to mind. Apply at once, 300 King street.

Obituary.
Another well-known citizen passed away on Friday last in the person of Mr. Patrick McKeown, aged 67 years.
Mr. McKeown was of quiet and industrious habits, and had been a resident of Peterborough for about 20 years. Funeral took place yesterday from the family residence, Hunter St., to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

Boy Wanted.
To learn bookbinding. Apply at the Times laundry.

Funeral Notice.
On Wednesday last, Mr. J. W. Sim, manager of the Post, died at his residence at a painful accident. While working at a machine, his hand was drawn into a revolving pulley by coming into contact with the belt, and he was killed at once. Mr. Sim was a native of Ireland and had been in the Post office for many years.

County Map.
Only a few copies of the splendid new map of Peterborough County left. Mounted on an atlas with wooden rollers $2.50; paper $1.00. Times Bookstore.

Without Authority.
Mrs. Thomas Nicholas desires the Times to state that Pat O'Connell, who was arrested and sent to jail for begging, had no authority to use her name when soliciting charity. He is a fraud from the word on.

How Things are Done Elsewhere.
The Midland Free Press, in noting a recent shaking up of town officials, says: "The council is now on the lookout for a good man for the position, and that man will doubtless soon put in an appearance." The council have shown that they are determined to have reliable men in these important positions. This action will please the people mightily, for complaints of inefficiency and mismanagement have been frequent. It appears to be the intention of the council to make further changes unless the men for certain complaints are avoided in the future.

We Don't Believe It.
Lindsay Post—"The stringency of the money market seems to have hit the business men in this town. The total amount placed on the collection plate at last week night service amounted to only $10.00. The contributor of the money will surely receive a free pass to any place he wants to go. We don't believe a word of it. The Salvation army so far as Peterborough is concerned at least, is well maintained. There continued with it give their time and money freely, and we fancy the same conditions exist elsewhere."

Off the Africa.
Mr. McMillan, the popular manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, a short time ago presented Mr. R. A.
Davidson, J.P., with a tail-scarf cap.
On Saturday, the latter gave the cap to the Strathcona Horse. Mr. Alf.
Brown, accepting the animal on behalf of the contingent. The dog wears a coat of khaki and possesses a distinctly open countenance. Mr.
Brown, who is a member of the Strathcona Horse, took the dog with the understanding that if it survived the war the animal was to be returned with charges C.O.D. The dog has been christened "Kilgore" and particularly on account of his early religious training, by the name of a prominent British general.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Haverford College, of Philadelphia district, intends to send another cricket team to England the coming summer, to play the leading colleges and schools in that country.

Forty entries have been made for this year's Queen's Plate, the largest number that have been made. Diagram has five, Hendrie has five, Dymont has four, Ned Clancy has four, David Boyle and Joe Duggan have three each, and Miss Jones of Brockville has one.
Wangler, a full brother to Wicker.

I.W.—You are correct in claiming that twenty-four for your hand of four 8's and a 9, twelve being the six fifteens which may be successively formed.

R.—The player not having the suit led may play any card he pleases.

R.C.—A wine the pot, except the money bet, which belongs to A, provided he can show that he split openers as he claimed.

M.—No, a player having made a build and his opponent declining to build up on it, he cannot increase the size of his build; but he can make another build if he chooses before taking in his first build.

Pick Lillie, who refereed the Stratford-Peterboro' Colts' match, says that the last half was the fastest hockey
he has ever seen in his life.

Ab. Stratton bet Jimmie McFadden a hat that the Colts would win, and told him to have the chaplain ready for him on arrival at Stratford. The laugh, however, is on the Peterborough Colts, for the Colts were down 9 to 0.
—Telegram.

Through some mistake the goal posts were not set in the Peterboro' Thursday night, and the people were very much disappointed. —Telegram.

And if they had been there Peterborough Colts would have been champions of Ontario to-day. This goes.

Rev. J. D. Potter began a series of special sermons to young men yesterday in St. Andrew's church.

In the Murray street Baptist church
Rev. Mr. Bastow preached the usual monday sermon to young people on "Joseph, or a Study of Providence." Communion was administered after the morning service.

The missionary services in connection with the local Methodist churches took place yesterday. Dr. Carman preached an eloquent sermon in the George street church at 11 a.m., and Dr. Buchanan preached at the Charlotte street church, exchanging pulpits in the evening.

It Is What?

Editor Morning Times:
Sir,—Knowing that the Times is anxious to promote in every way the efforts which are being made to assist the patriotic movement to provide comforts for the wives and families of our brave soldiers, I venture to ask you to publish this letter. I use that a call is being made for articles to be sent to South Africa for the Canadian troops. These articles are made up of almost everything in the way of clothing and luxuries, even Florida water is mentioned as one of the articles needed.

Now, Mr. Editor, I am the last one in the world to discourage these good people who have undertaken this work.
But it appears to me that it is the shoorest folly to send such stuff to our soldiers. In the first place it is doubtful if it will ever reach South Africa, and in the second place, if it did, how in the name of common sense is the stuff to be got to the men when the transport service is being taxed to its utmost to provide food and other necessary supplies? Would it not be infinitely better for these noble-hearted ladies to devote their energies to providing comforts for the wives and families of the absent men?
Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I am, etc., VERITAS.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Ashburnham Council to-night.

The Town Council meets to-night.
There was a small market on Saturday
owing to the snow blockade.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trade will take place to-morrow night.

The police want an owner for a small sawmill picked up on the street Saturday night.

The annual meeting of the Chess Makers Association will be held in the Council Chamber on Saturday next.

Mr. W. J. Stubbs leaves next week for Brantford where he occupies a position in the Bell Telephone exchange.

As a result of the recent heavy snow storms, some of the back country villages have been completely isolated for several days.

Butter was selling at 20 cents per lb.
and eggs at 20 cents per dozen on the market on Saturday. There was an account of the snow blockade.

The Macfarlane Wilson Co. and the Geo.
McHugh Co. have a number of men employed removing the salvage from their recently destroyed building.

Mr. Wm. Tudhope, one of the oldest citizens of Orillia, is dead. He was the founder of the large business now carried on by the Tudhope Carriage Co., and was a very prominent part in town affairs.

All the leading daily newspapers, it is said, will shortly increase the subscription price from 25 to 50 per cent. To meet the advanced price of materials and paper.
All other journals will attempt to be forced to insist upon the prompt payment of the present subscription price.

The Messrs. Monson Boyd Co., of Robertson, are advertising for sale their staunch towing and passenger boat, the steamer Beaubien, together with five masts. They will be put up for auction by Mr. Geo. McHugh on Tuesday, March 10th, at 2 o'clock, at the Beaman House, London.

One of our little local contemporaries announced a few days ago that Hon.
Senator Dobbin was in town. This does not refer to the manager of the other little local paper, although Senator Dobbin might make a capital Senator, and he suggested to the Government that he get one of the vacancies in that chamber.
With one of our contemporaries in the Government and the other in the Senate there would be nothing left for the editor of this G. F. J. but to join the Fortnightly Club or the Town Council.

How to make a Boom

Beaverion is to be boomed as a summer resort, and spruces Orillia may take a piece of advice. Last week
M. H. Dickson, the general Passenger agent of the G.T.R., paid a visit to Beaverion. According to the Express he was taken in hand by Mr. Geo.
Veale and Messrs. McMillan and shown about the town and its environs. To some prominent citizens he gave the benefit of his knowledge. It suffices to say he thought the people of Bea-verion should outdo some of the spaces of the Tourist's guide for 1900 to Bea-verion, but this in his opinion should be generously supplemented by the town. It would pay, he said, to clean up the streets and shops, not that they are not now as cleanable as those of the average village, but they might with advantage be made more so.
"A few dollars paid the road overseer for keeping the woods and rubbish off the streets, and the shade trees, notwithstanding the fact that they are attractive or useful than the shady trees." In the case of Orillia there is no feature of the town's shortcomings so apparent as indifference for well and the thoroughness.
In this respect the township is on the road to outdo the metropolitan Orillia town. The fact is that, to twist an old saw, cleanliness is next to advertising.

UNNATURAL HUNGER

A Bare Sign of Hidden Sympathy

"It was necessary to eat dinner at 11 o'clock," says Mrs. C. P. O'Brien, 1121 Preston street, Rockford, Ill., in order to have strength to prepare the noonday meal for the family.

"While I was drinking coffee I felt so faint that I could not stand. I was unable to proceed with the work which I had lunch. If I missed the 11 o'clock meal
I was attacked with a severe sick headache."

"My complexion at that time was a night, great blotches appearing on my face, and I was so nervous I could sleep but a few minutes at a time, and would wake in the morning more tired than when I went to bed."

"Our grocer called my attention one day to Postum Cereal Coffee. This was about three years ago. I immediately quit the use of coffee and took up Postum, having it prepared properly. The change produced a remarkable result. In a week or two
I was able to leave off the 11 o'clock lunch and take my dinner in the regular way with the rest of the family.
My blotchy complexion disappeared and a natural complexion took its place. Now I can go from morning until night without a meal, if I desire, and no headache or inconvenience of any kind appears. I sleep sound as a baby, and my kidney trouble, which was more than serious, has entirely disappeared."

"A lady friend was recommended to try Postum, and a short time after,
told me she was disgusted with it, for it had no taste. I asked her if she boiled it carefully fifteen minutes after the real bubbling commenced. She said so, and in reply to another question, said she used Postum regularly, and liked it very much indeed, and that it had made a great change in her health and the health of one or two members of her family."

"It seems plain, from the experiment, that one is justified in the inference that coffee is an actual poison to many human beings, and sets up all sorts of diseases. The remedy is plain enough,—to shun the coffee and use Postum Food Coffee, which is made by all grocers at 15 and 25 cents a package."

GOVERNMENT BUDGET PROPOSALS ADOPTED.

Great Britain's Purse Strings Untied to Provide for the War Expenditure.

ROBERTS' TROOPS OCCUPY STRONG POSITIONS.

Sir Alfred Milner Proclaims Martial Law in Several Districts—Gen. Buller Issues Revised Casualty List—But Little Fighting Going on at the Front.

Oxford, March 3. Gen. French yesterday evening notified a body of Boers trekking north west and west a squadron last night to keep in touch with them. This morning the troops were followed by about 150 Boers who advanced around a hill but retired precipitately when the British shelled them. The Boers then opened a heavy fire with maxims and also began firing from a kopje in the centre of the position with a long range fifteen pounder. The Boers' trekking in consequence of Gen. French's movement was temporarily stopped.

London, March 5. General Buller's revised list of casualties from Feb. 14 to Feb. 27 gives 90 men killed, 664 wounded and 25 missing.

Cape Town, March 5. Sir Alfred Milner has issued the following proclamation:—"Whereas the enemy's forces have invaded the districts of Prinsloo, Kenhardt, Britstown and Barkly west and whereas many British subjects have taken up arms, and whereas it is necessary to repel invasion and suppress rebellion, now, therefore martial law is hereby proclaimed in these districts."

London, March 5. The House of Commons has adopted the Government budget proposals.

London, March 6. A despatch to the Standard from Oxford, dated Sunday, March 5th, says:—"Lord Roberts' army now occupies a most advantageous position. The sixth division under General Kelly-Kenny, is posted on the right and takes all the heights for a distance of five miles south of the Modder. The seventh division, under General Buller, is in the centre, immediately south of the river, and Gen. Buller, with the ninth division, is on the north bank. The cavalry brigade, under General French, is posted on the left front and the mounted infantry, under Col. Midley-Martin, on the right front. The country round consists of wide, grassy plains, broken only by ridges and isolated kopjes. A body of the enemy has taken up a position on one of the latter, a flat-topped hill to the north of the river five miles beyond. General French to-day took out horse artillery and shelled them."

Another force, four thousand strong, holds an isolated group of kopjes south of the Modder and in front of the British mounted infantry. Their position is surrounded on all sides by level plains over which the Boers must make their way in order to reach the river, and as a consequence their situation appears precarious in the extreme. The health and spirits of the troops are excellent. The British cavalry and mounted infantry have been reconnoitering the enemy's positions. There has been little fighting."

THE SITUATION IN CAPE COLONY.

London, March 5.—General Roberts is apparently allowing an interval to elapse, not only for the purpose of allowing time for his strategic plans to develop. It is scarcely likely that he will make any aggressive move in the Free State until the enemy has been driven back from the Orange River, for until then his flank on this line of communication would not be entirely free. The retirement of the Boers from Oosburg has already been brought about; the road bridge over the Orange River at Roshan, to the north, has been seized by the English and found undamaged; while the enemy, who still hold the railway bridge at Nerval's Post in considerable numbers, have been entangled, and must fall back shortly this giving General Buller's position a high claim to be considered. Moreover it is officially reported that the Boers around Stormberg are gradually melting away in the face of the flanking march of Brigadier-General Buller and the mounted divisions. Before long the enemy will have disappeared entirely from the south of the river and then Roberts and Kitchener can continue their operations against the Boers in the Free State without fear of interruption from this direction.

It is reported that a strong Boer force of some 1,500 men have been encountered at Abraham's Kraal, which is twenty-five miles due east of Modder's River, at the point where the

FRANCE LOOKING FOR TROUBLE NOW!

The Fickle Nation Preparing to Try Conclusions With the Giant Nation Across the English Channel.

London, March 5.—The St. James Gazette publishes interviews with unnamed French diplomats and generals, declaring that, in their judgment, war between England and France is inevitable. One official of the French Government condition of the troops in this town is such that they could not march more than a couple of miles.

BLUNDER AT SPION KOP.

Benjamin Burleigh says it was a blunder. Owing to a mistake.

London, March 5.—Mr. Bennett Burleigh, the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, writes as follows regarding the retirement of Buller's force from Spion Kop:—"Seeing that the 90th—King's Royal Rifle Corps—were in an exposed position, where they could afford little help in the task of clearing the Boers off the hill, and that they would come under the shell and rifle fire of both sides an order was sent them to retire. There is the mystery and crux of all that ensued. So far as I am able to glean the order in question was simply addressed to the 'O.C.'—officer command ing—but that it was meant the 90th should withdraw to the south and join the Scottish Rifles, as some say, seems open to question."

What appears to have happened is this: In the death of absence of Col. Riddell, Col. Thorneycroft took the message, and read it to apply to the whole

A PLEA FOR PEACE BETWEEN RACES.

London Papers Compare French-Canadians Fighting for Britain in South Africa With Riots in Montreal.

London, March 5.—The papers comment on the fact reported by the war correspondent of the Times, that one company in the Paardeberg fighting was wholly of French-Canadians unable to speak English.

The Daily News says:—"Perhaps the wide circulation of this interesting piece of news will bring some sense of shame to those responsible for the disgraceful force upon the Spion kop range. A retirement which may have been a retreat followed, and by 10 p.m., when the rifle fire dwindled into sniping again, the Boers were again in a position to cut down men remaining under the dip of the mimosa trees."

As General Buller was setting out to ride over to Warren's force, he for the first time heard of the disaster. I dare say Gen. Buller was dreadfully shocked and mortified.

KEPT THE FLAG FLYING.

General White's Patriotic Address when the flag was raised.

London, March 5.—A despatch from Ladysmith states that when General Buller reached the post after the arrival of Dundee's cavalry, he was called upon for a speech. He said:—"People of Ladysmith, I thank you all for the heroic, patient manner in which you have assisted me during the siege. It has been a terrible trial, but thank God, we have kept the flag flying."

General White, who was very much affected, then led the singing of the Na-

THE WAR MAY END WITHIN A MONTH.

If Boers Assume Only the Defensive, the End Will Soon Come—Disease Among British Horses May Prolong Struggle.

London, March 5.—Charles Williams, war expert of the Morning Leader, says to-day:—"No news of the anticipated movement of Roberts' force against the Boers has been received, and no news from Gen. French and the condition of his cavalry. From forty to seventy thousand horses and mules have perished in Cape Colony in a single spring from disease, and if we assume only half this mortality among the British transport animals this spring, the outlook is sufficiently alarming. However, it is now thought the war may be over before the horse disease has done its worst in May. The war will hardly last till then, if One Land, the African-Bond organ at the Cape, speaks with any authority on the intention of the Boer leaders, which it probably does not."

TO FLOOD BRITISH HOSPITALS.

Boers were Building a Dam in Order to Oust the Garrison.

London, March 5.—A correspondent of the Standard writes: Approaching Ladysmith is a high dam that was only half completed. Thousands of bags of sand had been placed in the bed of the creek. In some places they projected for a considerable distance above the surface of the water. It apparently had been the object of the Boers in building this dam to flood the valley in which among other buildings are the hospitals used by the British. The enemy when they retired left a hundred new shovels at this place and a number of trunks filled with sand.

The railway had been broken in many places, and a large number of culverts had been blown up. It will be necessary to do considerable work before the line is fit for use again. The is quoted as acknowledging that France was preparing for war, and would attempt simultaneous invasion of England and South Africa. France is now very strongly reinforcing Madagascar, the French point nearest Natal.

Then a duel ensued between the two. Sergeant Mason and the Boer, Harry Mason tried to peep around the Boer's helmet and the Boer returned the compliment. Five Boer bullets were sent through Mason's helmet, cutting his hair close or twice, but leaving him uninjured. Others came perilously near his throat, arm and hand. Finally, the Boer drilled a hole through Mason's shoulder. Wounded, he changed his rifle to the left, resting it upon the lock. A lucky shot of the sergeant's touched the Boer, who fell forward, with his head between the rocks. Then Mason made steady, putting a shot of two into the head, which never missed. Weak from the loss of blood, Mason arose, retired, and his wound dressed, and then walked out of the action.

ESCAPED FROM PRETORIA.

Three British Officers Elude the Vigilance of their Guards.

Lorenzo Marques, March 4.—The Standard and Digges' News, of Johannesburg, states that three British officers—Haldane, Mansur and Brockle—escaped from Pretoria last Monday during the confusion which followed the cutting off of the electric light.

TO INTERCEPT THE BOERS.

A British Force is Sent Through Zululand for this Purpose.

Durban, March 2.—Yesterday a number of horses were sent into Zululand, with the object of marching a British force through Zululand and intercepting the Boers north of Middelburg.

PROMOTED FOR WHITE.

He Will be Made a General at no Distant Date.

London, March 4.—Lloyd's Weekly states that Lieut-General White, the commander at Ladysmith, will be promoted to be a general, and that the appointment will be gazetted next week. Lord Dundonald will obtain a junior step on the grade to Major-General and his work will be recognized at no distant date.

A SHORT SESSION.

OF PETERBORO'S CIVIC PARLIAMENT LAST NIGHT.

The Editor, Excitement and Street Frank. By the Mayor, Peterboro, to the Committee—Accounts Communications.

The Town Council met in regular monthly session last night; when there were present: Mayor Kendry, and Aldermen Oke, Sawers, Weir, Dawson, Clinkenbe, Robinson, Irvine and Corkery.

A scandal connected with one of our public departments was thrashed out behind closed doors, prior to the meeting, but reporters are promised full details, when it is expedient for the matter to be published.

On adjourning to the council chamber, the reading of the minutes was dispensed with.

CONTINENTAL WAR IS A NEAR PROBABILITY!

The Attitude of Russia and France Becomes Very Threatening to Great Britain.

RUSSIAN BEAR GROWLS, FRENCH EAGLE SCREAMS

A Considerable Party in France is in Favor of Immediate War With Britain and Cooler Heads Have Great Difficulty in Keeping Peace There.

London, March 5.—It is commonly supposed that the Franco-Russian attempt to induce the Sultan to re-open the Egyptian question having failed, Russia may push the military preparations already made on the Afghanistan frontier. Possibly this is the most imminent danger, but Russia has really done nothing yet to betray such intentions.

The French situation is becoming more obviously threatening, despite the imminence of the Exposition, in which the French people are taking a surprisingly lukewarm interest. The hostility to England has reached an intensity which is gravely perilous. It must be remembered that the French nation has not been mentally soured in several years, and it has long been feared that the mania for war would supervene after the follies of her recent history. A French diplomatist of high rank said in private conversation in Paris yesterday:

May Come at any Moment.

"A considerable party in France is in favor of immediate war with Great Britain, and the cooler heads have great difficulty in keeping peace. I myself am doubtful whether we shall not be worn off if we wait longer. The antagonism between the two countries has reached such a point that the break may come at any moment."

Sir Charles Dilke, who is one of the coolest and keenest observers in England, entertains similar apprehensions, and prophesies of war with England before September are common in Paris.

Where the Key is.

On the other hand, it is probably unjust to accuse the present French Government of deliberately plotting a rupture with Great Britain. The key of the situation is, after all, St.

Petersburg, and not Paris. The French would hardly undertake to attack England without the consent and aid of Russia, and the Czar remains inscrutable. There are plenty of so-called authoritative reports representing his attitude at both extremes, but the moment probably has not arrived when Russia is willing to attempt a consummation of her ambitious plans by an appeal, if necessary, to force. Her great strategic railway is not finished.

The chief antagonism in the path of the realization of her ambitions, however, is now hampered in a way which perhaps affords even greater advantages than the completion of her railway and other preparations. Moreover, now that England has discovered her own weakness, it is certain that she will begin to make ready for eventualities in a manner which will perhaps render the future of Russia a question of time.

A Critical Situation.

These various features of the situation, which are unquestionably more critical than any other in the world's recent history, are engendering the attention of not only statesmen and diplomats, but of all intelligent classes. Financial and commercial circles are candidly anxious, and the failure of the complete reversal of the military situation in South Africa to improve the stock market is perhaps the most convincing danger signal of all. The Government's decision to bring up the budget a month before the end of the financial year is a thing unprecedented, and adds to the uneasiness.

The Boer situation, considered by itself, is much simplified. Half of the Orange Free State will probably be in undisputed possession of the British within a few days, and the other Boer lines will be withdrawn from British territory, except northern Natal. The progress of the British invasion thereafter will be slow or rapid according to the skill and courage of the Federal forces.

in Peterborough, free of tax, for the conveyance of electricity from their proposed new power house at Napanee to their manufacturing buildings, passed its first reading, but sustained a check in its second reading at the hands of Ald. Sawers and Dawson, who insisted upon a time limit of 25 years at most being attached to the franchise.

Ald. Sawers moved, seconded by Ald. Dawson, that the by-law be referred back to committee to confer with the Company's solicitor regarding fixing a time limit to the franchise.

To Protect the Walks.

A by-law providing for the protection of granite sidewalks passed its second and third reading.

Reporters Excluded.

Ald. Dawson moved, seconded by Ald. Roberts, that in future reporters be excluded from all committee meetings—Carried.

Mr. Green's Claim.

This long standing matter came up again before the Council, when it transpired that Mr. Leonard of the C.P.R., claims that Mr. Green has no legal title to the property in question. The latter gentleman then produced his title deeds, but it was urged that the Crown Lands Department had not been paid their original purchase price of $18, together with an accrued interest of $57, and the Council desired the presence of their solicitor before taking any further action.

The matter was finally referred to the Finance Committee, at the meeting of which Mr. Green and Town solicitor Edwards will be asked to attend.

Market Fees.

The Market Committee was empowered to advertise the sale of the market site. The Council then adjourned.

NEW LINE TO SPAN CONTINENT.

Columb' He Hought Talks of Plans for Connecting Milwaukee Route.

New York, March 5.—Plans have been completed partially for a new transcontinental railway, with a connecting line of steamships to Liverpool, by which the distance between that city and the western grain districts of the United States is to be shortened 900 miles. The new Milwaukee southwestern is to be part of this system, which when completed will extend to the Pacific coast. Col. James McNaught, who returned to-day from Milwaukee, in speaking of the enterprise, said:

"The final proposition of the Milwaukee Southwestern Railway Company, which is to be built from Milwaukee to Rock Island, will be submitted to the county board of supervisors to-morrow. This road will be operated in connection with the Canada Atlantic and its connections will be used as far as Ottawa. From there the road will be built to Quebec. The connection will be finished by the Grand Northern of Quebec, which is under construction, and will be completed by June. The line will be in full operation to Quebec by the middle of August."

RAN A RACE WITH DEATH.

Narrow Margin by Which a Man on a Railway Bridge Won.

A high trestle bridge more than a quarter of a mile long, supporting the single track of the Nickel Plate railroad, spans the valley of Grand river, east of Palmyra, O. The bridge is little wider than the distance between the rails, and the ties are placed eight or ten inches apart, the space between being open to the river below.

A young man who crossed recently had a thrilling experience on the bridge. He had just passed the center when a fast train rounded the curve behind him. As the engine whistled he quickened his pace. With every step the train was rushing nearer, and there was not a moment to lose.

Once the young man stumbled and seemed about to fall, but quickly regained his balance and hurried on. As he reached the place for which he had started the train was close behind, and he had just time to swing himself over the side of the bridge as the locomotive thundered by. The ends of the ties were slippery with grease from dripping axle boxes, and his foot slipped wide as he left the track. His right hand, stretched blindly out before him, touched a round iron bar, bracing two parts of the bridge, and, with a grip like that of a drowning man, his fingers clamped around it. For a moment he swung in empty air. In another his left hand had found a place beside his right, and his feet touched the well-known edge of a board below. With bleeding fingers clutching the slender iron bar that vibrated widely from side to side, moments seemed hours.

At last the train passed, and the young man was able to climb slowly to the track above. Unnerved by the trying experience, he lay for a moment stretched across the rails and, then rising to his feet, with blanched face and unsteady limbs, made his way to firm ground.—Cleveland Leader.

SCAVENGER OF THE VELO.

The Avenger, Which Keeps the Wide Plains Clean.

Although the term "vulture" has been used for all time as a term of the vilest opprobrium, no one who knows the bird, its appearance and its habits could doubt for a moment that it is a creature of a depth of degradation which is barely conceivable.

And yet the vulture does a great deal of good in acting as the scavenger of the wild. But for his quick eye, carion taste and love of dead meat the disease germs in the carcasses of dead animals would be far more prolific and dangerous.

Throughout South Africa is found the avenger. Go anywhere you like on the veldt, and sooner or later—and in all probability the former—you will find the remains of his ghastly meal. There are hundreds of thousands of these scavengers in the transport and trucking service. Many of them die from exhaustion, want of water or cruelty from their Boer masters. Or they may eat of the poisonous tulip, a bulbous plant growing in marshy places.

A hunter, or trapper, soon knows if any one of his or his own have been eating tulip. The neck of the ox swells, his eyes close up, he gives short, sharp coughs, and his case is generally hopeless. Sometimes, however, he may be saved, and this by a peculiar homoeopathic plant of remedy. If the bulb of the tulip is crushed into pulp, mixed with hot water and forced boiling hot down the throat of the ox he may recover.

The quickness of the eye of the avenger is simply astounding. An ox falls out of the veldt, evidently ill. He is out of spec from his yoke fellow, and he goes down and away to the horizon on all sides is absolutely clear and cloudless.

Hardly has the breath left the body of the poor ox than you may observe far, far away up in the sky a tiny black speck, then another and another and another, until there are 20 of them. Gradually they get larger and larger, circling round in ever diminishing circles all the while they descend. The dead ox turns the center of the conference of their flight. Within a few minutes the ghastly birds swoop down upon the still warm body and commence their ghastly task.

An hour afterward there is nothing in the air but a bundle of bleached white bones that might have been there for months. The sky is clear and spotless again. The avenger has scavenged the veldt.

Whittier's Predicament.

Whittier held "Gull Hamilton" (Abigail Dodge) in the highest esteem, and the letters that passed between them were really most delightful. Here is one of the series in "The Ladies' Home Journal" that is truly characteristic of Whittier. It was written in 1880:

"I must tell thee something dear. Last week the Amoskeag veterans from New Hampshire and a Massachusetts company, with military bands, came and paraded before our house, and Governor Smith of New Hampshire and one or two officers called on me. When they left and I stepped out to see them cheerily off, the men in epaulettes got up a grand military salute, with music and three cheers, and I was wined and dined. It was a queer predicament? I did, I fear, somewhat compromise myself by lifting, almost involuntarily, my hand to my hat. But I resisted the temptation and only pulled my hat lower down over my brows by way of apology."

Some Ready Made Law.

Bourke Cockran studied law under Judge Theodore L. Dwight. One day the professor asked a question which seemed easy, but was really difficult. With his magnificent voice Cockran answered the best he could, adding as a saving clause, "Such, I take it, is the common law."

The good old doctor glanced significantly through his spectacles. "That would be all right, sir, if you had made it uncommon law."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Aggravating the Offense.

"You are charged, young man," the magistrate said, not unkindly, "with carrying the complaining witness nearly out of his senses by putting him through some mock ceremony of initiation. I can make allowance for exuberance of spirits among college students, but sometimes this exuberance is carried too far."

"It was this way, your honor," explained the youth who appeared to be the spokesman—"We were out for a little lark, and we caught a Jay."

"The fine will be $2 and costs," said his honor, his face hardening.—Chicago Tribune.

A QUEER SENSATION.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE HELD UP AT THE POINT OF A REVOLVER.

Curious Phenomenon That Causes Each Man in a Roomful to Believe That a Weapon is Pointed Straight at His Own Head.

"If you will take my word for a little experience I had recently, perhaps I can make clear to you how it is possible for three men to hold up a roomful of fairly brave men and get away safely with their money," said a merchant from the state of Washington who was a guest at the Lotos club one night recently. "I was in such a hold up not long ago, and I have ceased feeling as fellows who have been through similar experiences. I was one of 70 men who were held up in a big gambling hall, and as I am not regular patron of the Lotos club I kept quiet about it at home. The gambling house is one of the best known in the west, and on the night of the hold up it was filled with a representative crowd. A search would have disclosed the fact undoubtedly that many of the men present were armed. No trouble in recent years has occurred in this place, and there was no reason to anticipate any. It was nearly midnight when the door opened and three men, masked and each holding two revolvers, entered the room.

"Hands up, quick!" shouted the fore man.

"I was sitting at a two table when I heard this command, and so I looked up I found a revolver pointing straight at my head. When I compared notes with the other seventy odd men later, I found that each one had the same experience. There were seventy odd revolvers, and yet each man in the room was willing to swear that one of them was pointed at his head all the time. The crowd was simply paralyzed with fright. For two or three seconds I was moved. Then over in the corner a Louisville sport brought his hand around to reach his hip pocket.

"Stop that or I'll shoot," said one of the masked men, covering him with his revolver. "Hands up, now; quick! We mean business."

"Every man in that room did hold his hands up. There was no hesitation then. It was my first experience in that kind of game, but it was not until I was able to take my hands down that I realized how tiresome the operation was. There we stood, each man with his hands stretched high above his head, hold up in a room on a busy street when an order would bring help at once. It was a pretty sure thing, however, that no one would make the outcry. The three masked men had eyes for every move, and their revolvers pointed all ways at once. It is easy for a man who has been through such an experience to suggest that if several men had only made a break these fellows would have run. I can honestly say that the barrel of the revolver into which I looked seemed to me to be as big as a tower pipe. Every thought that I could use the end of the barrel, and I was awfully afraid that the man who held the revolver might get nervous and shoot me by accident. I tried to look pleasant to appease him. All this had taken perhaps a minute or so, a half when the spokesman addressed to me:

"We lined up as directed like a lot of schoolboys."

"Now then, my friend here will relieve you of your valuables without your assistance," said the spokesman. "Don't move, because there are two dead shots behind you. Keep quiet, and it will soon be over."

"It was a very odd place of work. I can assure you. One of the three went straight down the row, taking each man's watch and money. He didn't get as much as he expected, and as near as I could estimate later the lot he was carrying was under $5,000. There was over $100,000 in the safe which the robbers overlooked. When we had been cleaned out, the spokesman said:

"Now, gentlemen, you are sorry to be inconvenienced just further, but we shall have to request you to stand just as you are for five minutes more. Don't cut the time short, or you will get hurt."

"The side door opened at this instant, and we heard the order 'Hands up, Chin! or you are a dead man!' It was one of our Chicago friends who was returning with a tray filled with drinks. He promptly dropped his tray, smashing all the glasses and threw up his hands. We heard no other sound for five minutes. Each man counted the seconds to make sure that he shouldn't take down his hands ahead of time. The proprietor was the first man to move. As soon as he felt that it was safe he turned and found the robbers gone. He picked up a heavy chair and threw it through the window. It started the men who had it and the crash that followed attracted general attention in the street below. The proprietor stuck his head out of the window and profanely shouted such details of the hold up as he might put the people in the street on the track of the robbers. It was a queer sensation, however. The fellows who entered the place found the Chin standing in the ruins of his glasses with his hands still above his head. The proprietor told him to take his hands down. The Chin wouldn't do it, and two men who pulled his arms to his side had all they could do to keep him. He had look of the big barrel of his gun, and he hadn't forgotten it.

"Now this was an actual experience, and some of your New York papers had accounts of it. If I were mixed up in an affair of that sort again, I would value my coat just as highly. It was a pretty good and not a yellow streak that made that crowd act as it did."

Reverly Caught Alive.

In Lake Dorset, Ontario, in Ontario, there is a species of fish called the "cod," which are never caught alive. They are said to be the only fish of the lake and are never met with in the river. One or two dead specimens of the breed which have been found in the lake are treasured as curiosities.

The Bridal Feast

Is not infrequently followed by a long, heated period of enforced fasting and freshly mortification. The check grows hollow, the eyes are dull and deep ringed, and the step is slow and languid. There is an "all dragged-out feeling," which makes life an utter burden.

The great functional changes which follow marriage are not usually anticipated, or the wife suffering might be avoided.

Dr. Pierre's Favorite Prescription is the best friend of weak and sickly women. It cures the various diseases that rob the eyes of brightness and the step of lightness. It tones up the system and establishes the womanly organism on a basis of sound health.

"Favorite Prescription" contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, nor other narcotics. Accept no substitute. There is no other medicine "just as good" for weak and sickly women.

"I had been a great sufferer from female weakness for about two years," writes Mrs. Henry Richardson, of New York City. "I could do no work part of the time. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierre's Favorite Prescription and felt as well as ever did."

Young married women will find a lasting friend in Dr. Pierre's Medical Advice. It contains 100 pages and is sent free (in paper cover), on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of postage and mailing only. Cloth binding, 50 cents. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Sound and Prosperous.

58th Annual Report.

Canada Life

MR. D. R. WILKIE, General Manager Imperial Bank of Canada, says—
"I have given the question of the probable rate of interest which may be counted upon in this country during the next quarter of a century upon securities in which life insurance companies could invest with safety, my most careful consideration, and beg to state that although I should like to see calculations made upon a 3 per cent. basis, that rate probably errs too much on the safe side."

"It has to be borne in mind that although the rate of interest upon certain classes of securities that were at one time looked upon as the only safe investments for life insurance companies, have since been displaced by other investments—railroads, bonds, and other securities—that have come to the front. A careful selection could be made of perfectly good bonds that yield even a higher rate of interest than do these securities that were at one time looked upon as the only safe investments for life insurance companies."

"With enterprises and at the same time cautious management, I don't know why a 3-1/2 per cent. rate should be beyond the reach of a well-managed company. In order, however, to provide for contingencies, I should be prepared to suggest a basis of 3-1/4 per cent., which rate, I believe, can be depended upon in this country for a period of twenty-five years on securities in which life insurance companies should invest."

MR. THOMAS FRYER, General Manager Merchants' Bank of Canada, says—

"In my opinion the average rate of interest for the next 25 years on such securities as life insurance companies should invest in depends largely on whether or not the world is going to have war or peace as the prevailing state of things. If the former, the average rate for money may be expected to keep firmly up to the present rate, but if the latter, I do not see what can prevent it from falling to a considerably lower value in 25 years. It would not be prudent to calculate on a higher rate than 3 per cent., and I have very little doubt, except in the first contingency named, that before the expiration of 25 years the best insurance companies will either be preparing to put their reserves on a 3-1/2 per cent. basis or they will have already done so."

HON. GEO. W. HUGHES, Provincial Treasurer, says—
"From present appearances it is not probable that life insurance companies could calculate with safety on a higher rate of interest on their investments than 3 per cent. It is the interest of policy-holders that insurance companies should do so, as to place beyond all possible doubt their ability to pay the policies when they mature. A calculation based upon a higher rate than 3 per cent. might be imprudent for the company. Where the interests of a family are concerned the safety of an insurance company is of the utmost importance to the parties insured."

MR. J. H. MANON, Manager Canada Permanent Loan and Savings Co., says—

"From best opinion I can form should think that a rate not higher than 3-1/2 per cent. per annum should be used. If investments of company were confined to first-class bonds, I should name a lower rate, but believing that they invest partly in real estate and partly in bonds, I should think 3-1/2 per cent. might be accepted as a reasonable rate, although conditions not now apparent might arise and alter this."

MR. WALTER S. LEE, Managing Director of the Western Canada Loan and Savings Company, says—

"In the next twenty-five years the maximum rate of interest on the highest class of mortgages is not likely to average over four per cent. (4 per cent.), and on such front-rank debentures as a first class life company should confine itself to for investment, I should say three per cent. (3 per cent.). I believe, therefore, that three and one-half per cent. (3-1/2 per cent.) all round would be a reasonable prophecy to make."

MR. R. WILSON SMITH, Financial Agent, Montreal, says—

"Amongst the elements to be considered in replying to the above question are the future progress and development of the resources of the Dominion, as well as the fact that absolute security is the first consideration in connection with the investment of life funds. However, in the light of past experience and general average conditions, while for some years an average rate of 3-1/2 per cent. may be fairly counted upon, yet for the grade of security in which life insurance funds ought to be invested, it will be more prudent and conservative to assume a 3 per cent. rate for the next quarter of a century."

In the light of these opinions and in the face of the decided advice tendered by the distinguished actuaries who were consulted, I feel sure that the course recommended by the Directors will, among all reasonable business men, be recognized as moderate and in the best interests of our policy-holders. I have pleasure in moving the adoption of the report."

MR. F. W. GATES, Vice-President, said—
Mr. Chairman, as Vice-President of the Company it has been my fortune to second the adoption of the Annual Report for a great many years, and it is a great pleasure to me to be here today to do so at this fifty-third annual meeting of the Company, especially as we see that the Company has enjoyed such great prosperity during the past year in securing so large a volume of business. In looking back over previous reports of our meetings I find that both our late esteemed President and myself repeatedly called attention to the rapid fall that was taking place in the rate of interest, and we always took occasion to point out the serious effect this would have upon the profits of this and all other companies."

But I supposed no one anticipated that the fall would have been so continuous. I am free to say that if ten, fifteen or twenty years ago the Directors could have foreseen what remarkable reductions would occur in interest rates they would undoubtedly have applied a portion of the profits at each quinquennial period towards strengthening the Company's reserves, and thus have enabled us to pass a 3-1/2 per cent. basis with very variation in our rate of bonus than must now arise. It may interest you to know that if we had at each quinquennial period from 1876 to 1890 paid the same rate of bonus as in 1896—that is, 3 per cent.—we would now have had more than enough accumulated surplus to have enabled us to pass to a 3-1/2 per cent. standard and still to pay a 3 per cent. bonus on this occasion."

When I first approached the question of paying a materially reduced rate of bonus, I confess to a feeling of some misgiving as to how far we should now go towards strengthening our reserves, but when the actuarial valuations upon the different standards were laid before us, and when we had also the opinions of independent experts that we would be justified in going much further than we now recommended, I became convinced that the course which is now proposed was not only prudent, but that we would be lacking in our duty to posterity and to the true interests of this institution by recommending any less conservative course than is now submitted for your adoption."

To intelligent persons it is, of course, unnecessary to point out that this special reserve of $60,000 is not taken away from the policy-holders to be used for other purposes, but that it is held for the greater security of our policy-holders and as a fund which will materially aid in increasing their profits in the future. Of course, some enemies of the Company, and a few irresponsible rival agents may for ulterior motives endeavor to misrepresent our action and intentions, but we are confident of the soundness of our course. One thing is certain, all companies in Canada have, sooner or later, to face this problem, and the longer it is put off the more difficult will it be to accomplish."

I have much pleasure in seconding the adoption of the Report. The report was unanimously adopted, after which the usual votes of thanks were tendered to the Directors, Officers, Agents, etc., all the speeches being most enthusiastic in tone. It is the intention of the Company to publish these more fully for the information of its policy-holders later."

MR. B. E. WALKER'S OBSERVATIONS.

MR. B. E. WALKER, General Manager Canadian Bank of Commerce, made some very important observations in moving a vote of thanks to the Company's Directors.

Mr. Walker said—The solicitors of a great Company have a very serious responsibility cast upon them; of this the most evident to us is that of looking into mortgages, and keeping the Company (and this firm has so successfully done for fifty years) out of litigation; but while that is a very serious it is not the most serious responsibility. There is the question of debentures and bonds and loans of all kinds in death claims, but by and all that there is the great advantage of a solicitor of a company, especially if he be also a director of the Company, being so well acquainted with the general business of the company that as director as well as a solicitor he may, on all kinds of subjects, offer the calmer wisdom that a lawyer with a judicial mind is more apt to have than business men. This Company has been singularly fortunate in that respect, and I wish to tender special thanks to it at this time because you have been taking of the Canada Life passing through what may be called a critical period in the criticism."

There is not that only end of a quinquennial, but we are bound to meet a fall in interest, partly because we see it is necessary ourselves, and partly because of the action of the Government, and also because the old administration is passing away. I might say here that ex-President Hamilton occupied several offices that are now occupied by at least four men to-day. This is the beginning of a new administration, and, as you have been told, this Company has been kept afloat from stem to stern, and has been examined over in every part, has been examined in a manner that in my own experience in other institutions few companies have ever been subjected to, and in all this we have had the greatest possible help, not only as an ordinary business man, but as a solicitor, and in every way, from Mr. Bruce."

Departing from the mere matter of the resolution for a moment, I would like to say that there is one point which has not been very completely made here, and that is this—This Company has been at the end of a long administration put through the crucible, a thing which to any company, bank or other institution, whether it results in a disappointing statement or not, is an enormous relief, because it has a supreme test, and that test has been responded to, and the Company has been able to stand it. That is a thing every agent, every policy-holder, every shareholder of the Company, everyone concerned in the Canada Life, might bear in mind, that after a long period of administration, largely by one man, whose administration we all respect, it has been put to the supreme test, and has answered it splendidly. There is this point to remember in addition, that if it hadn't been necessary to make this adjustment of interest we would have presented after the examination a statement practically not different from the statements of the past. The great thing in a company after all is to know that it is a really doing the right thing, the wisest thing. No bank, no insurance company, no mercantile company, and no business concern of any kind has ever yet suffered from doing the thing that was the right thing. (Hear, hear.) And I believe that is what we are doing to-day. I do not hesitate to say that my own view is in favor of going to 3-1/2 per cent. entirely. I cordially agree with what has been done, it is a more moderate course, but I am for the view that this Company will be able to say it is on a 3-1/2 per cent. basis, and will point to the fact that it stands where the best companies in North America stand, and that it is able to put itself in the front in that position."

I have slipped away from my resolution, except that through all the discussion and consideration we have had—new legislation at Ottawa, as well as everything else—we have been greatly blessed in having on the board one gentleman (Sir George H. B. Mackenzie, Bart., who has retired from the firm of solicitors, but who had that experience, and another, who is actively engaged to-day in the work of Solicitor of the Company, as well as being a Director."

MR. A. BRUCE, Q.C., in acknowledging the vote of thanks to the Solicitors, said—
I acknowledge with gratitude this expression of your satisfaction with the way in which the Solicitors have discharged their duties, for it is a great satisfaction to the lawyer who honestly gives of his best to his clients to find his efforts appreciated."

As I am addressing what is in part a new constituency I may be pardoned for referring with some measure of pride to two points—first, that among the many millions of dollars of securities for money which have passed through our hands, there has never been one instance of a defective title in any class of security; and second, that we have kept the Company much out of the courts, and thus left the officials free to attend to the management of its affairs instead of being harassed with litigation."

The Solicitors are not entitled to all the credit on these points for the care exercised by all connected with the Company, both in the insurance of lives and in the investment of the funds, no doubt conduces largely to the immunity from loss and litigation which the Company has enjoyed, and this observation leads me naturally to any something of the Company's investments and the safeguards which are thrown around them, which may not be out of place at this time."

This is an important epoch in the Company's history, and affairs, as it has recently come under new Executive management, and it happens that the quinquennial investigation report, which is presented near the beginning of that management, goes to show that the Company cannot afford to pay so large a bonus to policy-holders as heretofore, and that may be a source of disappointment to some."

The diminished bonus is due entirely to the lower rate of interest received on investments in recent years, as has already been pointed out by Mr. Bruce, and I may be permitted to give one illustration on that point. In giving evidence before the county judge at Hamilton some two years ago on the question of assessment on income, Mr. Bruce showed the revenue authorities received from premiums and interest thereon in the case of a given number of lives entering at the age of thirty for a twenty-year endowment, and the proportions on $1,000 were—$69.22 from premiums and $39.87 from interest earned thereon."

As life insurance is largely undertaken as a provision for the wife and children of the assured, it may be assumed without argument that the chief desire of the assured is that the payment of the policy should be made beyond question of doubt, and those who are assured in the Canada Life Assurance Company are entitled to feel that, as I believe."

The statements submitted in the report show abundantly the solvency and strong position of the Company at the present time after it passed through the ordeal of an investigation by the Michigan Insurance Department, where five experts were occupied nearly four weeks, and the close scrutiny of a new official, the Treasurer, who naturally does not care to take over an asset at more than it is worth."

You, therefore, begin with a sound basis, reflecting credit on the late management, and I wish to say a word as to the protection afforded for the future."

(1) You have the limitations imposed by the Dominion Legislation on Insurance Investments, and here I may say that the Government last year considerably extended the area, and wisely on the view of the large amount of funds of insurance companies seeking investment, beyond the limited classes formerly opposed to some companies, realizing, as was pointed out by the Canada Life at Ottawa some years ago, that ex-patriate funds must depend on the wisdom and good judgment of those entrusted with the investments."

(2) The Treasurer is at the head of the Investment Department, his life has been spent in financial studies, and he while time is devoted to making out and looking after the Company's investments, and the importance of the profitable use of the funds is shown by the illustration I have given, and it is true economy to have that department in very competent hands."

(3) The Treasurer having thoroughly investigated a proposed investment brings it before the Board of Directors with all the information obtained, and the board passes upon it, and it is worthy of mention that the board adopts the practice of not passing any investment should any direct take formal exception to it."

(4) And before the investment is carried out the Solicitors of the Company pass upon its validity from a legal aspect."

(5) Besides all these safeguards all the securities pass under the scrutiny of the Dominion Superintendent of Insurance year by year, and are subject to inquiry and inspection by the Insurance Departments of the various States in which the Company transacts business."

(6) Then the securities when taken are kept most carefully in a fire and burglar-proof safe with two combinations, kept by two officers, independent of each other."

(7) Further, the securities are yearly or oftener examined by a committee of Directors, and also by the Auditors, who make a continuous audit during the year of all the money transactions of the Company."

I trust that the policy-holders will fully realize the care taken in making investments and providing for their continued safety and security, and will continue to confide in the Canada Life Assurance Company which the Company has so long enjoyed."

A number of other prominent policy-holders spoke in most complimentary terms of the report, amongst whom were William Gibson, M.P., Beauville; William Hendrie, Esq., and Adam Brown, Esq., Hamilton; D. R. Wilkie, Esq., W. H. R. Mamey, Esq., and Dr. John Hoskins, of Toronto."

The following gentlemen were appointed Directors on behalf of the policy-holders—Mr. George Burton, Hon. Donald MacInnes, Very Rev. Dean Innes, A. Bruce, Q.C., Wm. Gibson, M.P., J. W. Maclellan, Esq."

The following gentlemen were elected Directors on behalf of the shareholders—Mr. W. Gates, Esq., Adam Brown, Esq., N. Merritt, Esq., H. E. Walker, Esq., Hon. Geo. A. Cox, Esq., A. Lamb, Q.C., Dr. John Hoskins, Esq., W. Cox, Esq., H. H. Walker, Esq."

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors the Hon. Geo. A. Cox was unanimously re-elected President, and Mr. F. W. Gates Vice-President."

JOUBERT AND KRUGER HAVE A DISSENSION!

The Commander-in-Chief of the Boer Army Has Resigned as a Consequence.

UNCONFIRMED REPORT OF MAFFKING'S RELIEF.

President Kruger Shed Tears at Ineffectual Attempts to Rally the Boers. Who Were Completely Paralyzed by Lord Roberts' Masterly Tactics.

London, March 9. (4 p.m.) The War Office has issued the following despatch from Lord Roberts: "Clemens has occupied Norval's Post and the adjacent country. As soon as the Boers and pontoon and troops arrive he will cross the river when the necessary repairs to the railway bridge will be commenced."

"Clemens occupied Burghersdorp March 7, and was greeted with great enthusiasm on the part of the local inhabitants. His reports that large numbers of the Boers in the neighborhood are anxious to surrender."

Poplar Grove, Orange Free State, Friday morning, March 9.

General French, who is ten miles ahead, reports that his front is clear of the Boers. All other reports tend to confirm the state of disorganization of the Boer forces of the Transvaal, as well as Free State. The general impression is that the further progress of the British to Bloemfontein will not be opposed.

London, March 10

The correspondent of the Daily News at Poplar Grove says the Boers were seized with a panic, thus spoiling the whole plan which had been beautifully calculated to destroy them utterly. As the sixth division emerged from a hidden position and appeared on the crest with the mounted infantry in skirmishing order, the Boers thought the whole earth was covered with soldiers in their front and rear and on their flanks. They did not wait to verify this, but fled, seized apparently with a dread that they might share the fate of Cronje.

London, March 10

The Berlin correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "I learn that there is a disunion between President Kruger and General Joubert and that the latter has resigned. Probably President Kruger will assume the chief command."

General Schlabach and other commanders are also likely to resign for similar reasons and because President Kruger ignored their advice to make peace overtures after the first Boer victory."

London, March 10

Maffeking as a beleaguered town attracts must sentiment and nothing has been heard from there since Feb. 19. There is a rumor this morning that Col. Baden-Powell has been relieved, but this cannot be traced to any substantial basis.

London, March 10

All the special despatches from Poplar Grove confirm the reports of the panic of the Boers. The morning Post's correspondent says: "President Kruger shed tears at ineffectual attempts to rally the Boers, who were completely paralyzed by Lord Roberts' masterly tactics. They were too demoralized to hear of expostulations and declared that the British cannon were everywhere."

TERMS OF WAR LOAN.

London, March 9.—The bankers of London met the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Booth, at the Bank of England this afternoon to discuss the terms of the war loan, which will be advertised to-morrow.

OSPOWALD FIGHT BLOODLESS.

London, March 9.—The Times has the following special to-day: "Poplar Grove, March 7.—Our attack was delivered to-day. Success was instantaneous on both banks of the river, the Boers retreating and being driven in full flight east and across the river. The Free Staters are demoralized. The operations presented a beautiful spectacle, and appeared as bloodless as field manoeuvres. The Boers displayed no gallantry whatsoever."

LYDITE'S EFFECT ON BOERS.

Durban, Natal, March 7.—A lieutenant Anderson, who commanded a section of the Natal Naval Volunteers, a Lydite mine was fired in the course of an exercise he said this toward the close of the Pieter's Hill engagement: the naval mine threw Lydite shells on a slope 200 yards distant. When the place was reached by the Boers he killed the Boers and counted therein 3 dead Boers who had been killed by the concussion of the Lydite, not on one of them having a wound of any kind.

LODON EN FETE FOR HER MAJESTY!

A Magnificent Tribute of the English People to Their Revered and Honored Sovereign.

London, March 9. A magnificent ceremony and this caused more enthusiasm. For as the Queen's carriage stopped at the Temple steps, when the Lord Mayor, Mr. A. J. Newton, solemnly handed Her Majesty the sword of State. With a smile, the Queen accepted it and returned it to the Chief Executive, saying:—

"Thank you for all that my city has done."

To which the Mayor replied:—

"Your grace has made my words will forever be treasured in my heart."

Then the Life Guards trotted on, the purple and crimson and gorgeous uniforms, the marshal and sheriffs, and the Queen drove quickly along the embankment, which was black with cheering people. Accompanying Her Majesty were the Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein and Princess Henry of Battenburg. To see their Queen.

Over the roadway, which had been kept clear for the carriage, the crowds swarmed until it was impossible for those near the railway to move an inch. Somebody started to sing, God Save the Queen, and half a mile or more of people took up the strains. In response to this the Princess of Wales and the Duke and Duchess of York reappeared on the balcony.

command at Glenlee with 6,000 men. When Kruger met the burghers in Natal he carried a rifle, but there is every reason to question the success of his attempt to inspire fresh spirit in the commandos, which are awed by the overwhelming number of British reinforcements and British soldiers' courage. The President proposes to visit the Free State. President Kruger, on the eve of his departure for Bloemfontein, declared that he was going for the purpose of a compromise, and predicted that things would be settled satisfactory to everybody.

AND THE BRITISH ADVANCE.

British cavalry and infantry have moved to the East.

London, March 9.—The War Office publishes the following despatch from Lord Roberts:

"Poplar Grove, March 8.—Two brigades of cavalry with horse artillery and Kelly-Kenny's division marched to-day ten miles eastward."

THE TIMES' COMMENT.

London, March 9.—The Times says: "There has been a change of command in Natal, where a force of 6,000 returned to the Free State. President Kruger, on the eve of his departure for Bloemfontein, declared that he was going for the purpose of a compromise, and predicted that things would be settled satisfactory to everybody."

Many American flags were displayed by American citizens and Americans on the street. Still nodding vigorously, Her Majesty passed out of sight into the quadrangle of Buckingham Palace. The scene here, when Lord and Commander joined in singing the National Anthem, was unprecedented, and will probably never be repeated. Viscount Cross and Mr. Chamberlain acted as spokesmen and graciously greeted the Royal visitor, but it was to Lady Buller that the Queen quickly turned with a graceful smile. Then, in the presence of the legislators of the United Kingdom, drawing the wife of the reliever of Ladysmith closer to her, she whispered words of thanks.

Jack from the H.M.S. Powerful, which had flown throughout the siege of Ladysmith, the cheering was tumultuous. The crowd which assembled was of immense proportions. Lunch was prepared and served in a shed adjacent to the railway station and the men ate heartily. The majority of them looked well, but showed signs of the rough work and fatigue they had undergone. Their uniforms bore the tokens of wear and tear. After lunch, headed by Captain Percy Scott, the men marched to the place of embarkation for Simonstown.

Employment of Ladysmith Relieving Force is Not Made Known. London, March 9.—A despatch to the Daily News from Ladysmith, dated on March 7, reports that General Buller's force is now ready to advance after a much-needed rest, but its future employment is unknown. The gradual movement of the commands is being arranged, and according to the Standard's correspondent, General Buller is going to Stormberg, while Gen. Hunter will be given command of the tenth division.

London, March 9.—The flight of the burghers from Poplar Grove, according to all accounts was wholly inglorious. A Times despatch from Poplar Grove under yesterday's date, goes so far as to assert that the Boers' route was complete that the submission of the Free State is being demanded by the burghers from their unwilling president, and considered that its submission would be made within a week. Probably the Boer's wisest course was flight, but it was most undignified and is certain to produce concentration at Bloemfontein. There is a growing out- cry against any further identification of the Free State with Transvaal interests.

THE POLE ON THE WAR.

He Thinks that President McKinley ought to Interfere.

New York, March 9.—A cable from Rome says that Count Pissinatti, leader of the Mexican Catholics, was received at a private audience by the Pope, who said: "The religious manifestations of the holy year are a source of great consolation to me. My joy would be complete but for the fratricidal South African war. I daily pray that President McKinley will offer the friendly mediation of America. He would then deserve the thanks of the Christian world."

FRANCE EXPRESSES REGRET.

Paris, March 9.—M. Delcasse, Minister of Foreign Affairs, is said to have written a private letter to Sir Edmund Gosset, the British Ambassador, expressing deep regret at the Bordeaux pro-Boer riots on Wednesday, and promising that the necessary measures will be taken to punish the offenders and to prevent a repetition of such an incident.

THEY ARE LOSING INFLUENCE.

Both the Presidents Were Present at the Retreat of Oostfontein.

London, March 9.—The War Office has received the following despatch:

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

The ladies seem to be having quite a time on the rink just now—they are having hockey matches galore, and some of them are becoming experts.

It seems that the committee of management in connection with the first tournament in Ottawa were not satisfied with the decision of the referee in the bout, Charles Graham vs. Stone of Perth. They have put up a special medal for a fast-to-between the winner of the 125 lb. class and Graham.

PROTEST AGAINST ROGUE NEWS.

Dr. Leyds Says Newspapers Publish Fake Interviews.

Berlin, March 9.—Dr. Leyds, the Transvaal diplomatic agent, has issued a protest from Brussels against "Jogues news" purporting to emanate from him. He singles out a prominent Berlin paper as an offender.

THE AMER'S SIGNIFICANT UTTERANCE.

London, March 9.—The Amer of Afghanistan has authorized his agent in London to publish the following statement of the policy of Afghanistan towards Great Britain and Russia. After saying that he had devoted much anxious thought to the possibility of Russia taking advantage of the Transvaal war to advance through Afghanistan on India, His Highness adds:—"I have come to the conclusion that Russia's feared Afghanistan, as a war with the Afghans would mean a general rising of all Islam, which would spread through Russia-Asia. Russia had not troops enough to combat such a rising. Her hold on the Mussulman countries she has conquered is insecure. They hate her, and with ten times her power Russia could not fight Afghanistan and India successfully. The Afghans prefer death to slavery, and their women and children are being taken by the Russians."

After saying he is willing to send numerous troops to help Great Britain in the Transvaal, but adding that the Afghans are unaccustomed to the sea, the Amer says:—"But England's troubles are always my troubles, her strength is my strength, and her weakness is my weakness. England must remember that I am always ready to fight for her on land."

FREE STATERS WOULD THROW UP THE SPONGE

President Kruger is Trying His Best to Infuse Spirit Into the Burghers.

HE ENDEAVORS IN VAIN TO STEM THE RETREAT.

French's Cavalry Was Too Much for Their Stomachs and a Total Rout Was the Result—Cronje's Capture Takes the Heart Out of His Admirers.

London, March 9. No one can doubt that the reverse to their arms in the Free State have confronted President Kruger with a situation which will require all his shrewdness to surmount. The statement of General Roberts that both Presidents Steyn and Kruger were on the battlefield of Wednesday last and endeavored with might and main to rally the retreating Boers is significant, and shows which way the wind blows. The Free State forces were completely demoralized by the surrender of Cronje and cannot now be depended upon to make any determined stand against the British.

Kruger, informed of this fact and fearing an immediate collapse of his allies, hurried post haste to Bloemfontein, after making one of his characteristic political appeals to religious feeling, and at the time of General Roberts' last advance was engaged in an attempt to instill the wavering burghers facing the British with his own stern and unbending courage. What success he encountered is shown by the precipitate flight of those burghers on sight of the redoubtable cavalry division under French, who have evidently struck terror into their souls which cannot be eradicated.

Indications are that the Free State will before long seek peace of itself and leave the Transvaal to continue the struggle alone. It is certain that the constituents of President Steyn will not long continue to suffer from which they would draw no advantage even in the event of victory. These good people are undoubtedly asking themselves why they should allow their country to be taken over by the British in the face of a war for the benefit of others. Kruger is doubtless endeavoring with might and main to persuade them to continue the struggle, offering every comfort in his power, but it is not likely that his influence and that of Steyn combined will prove as powerful as that of French's cavalry.

The secession of the Orange Free State from the confederation may be looked for at any moment and will certainly take place after the next important British success. Meanwhile no important changes is reported from the Free State. Gen. Roberts, as a result of his recent movement, has passed eastward another ten miles from Poplar Grove and has now a force of 6,000 cavalry, 10,000 mounted infantry and every gun about forty miles from Bloemfontein, his object evidently being to sever the Boers from their base at Bloemfontein and drive them northward. Gen. Clements holds the southern end of Norval's Post Bridge, which has been blown up by the Boers who only defend the northern end in small force. As elements holds the wagon bridge a few miles to the west where he has reason to believe he should not outflank this body, drive them off and repair the railway bridge in which case his advance northward to join Roberts would quickly take place.

PROTEST AGAINST ROGUE NEWS.

Berlin, March 9.—Dr. Leyds, the Transvaal diplomatic agent, has issued a protest from Brussels against "Jogues news" purporting to emanate from him. He singles out a prominent Berlin paper as an offender.

THE AMER'S SIGNIFICANT UTTERANCE.

London, March 9.—The Amer of Afghanistan has authorized his agent in London to publish the following statement of the policy of Afghanistan towards Great Britain and Russia. After saying that he had devoted much anxious thought to the possibility of Russia taking advantage of the Transvaal war to advance through Afghanistan on India, His Highness adds:—"I have come to the conclusion that Russia's feared Afghanistan, as a war with the Afghans would mean a general rising of all Islam, which would spread through Russia-Asia. Russia had not troops enough to combat such a rising. Her hold on the Mussulman countries she has conquered is insecure. They hate her, and with ten times her power Russia could not fight Afghanistan and India successfully. The Afghans prefer death to slavery, and their women and children are being taken by the Russians."

After saying he is willing to send numerous troops to help Great Britain in the Transvaal, but adding that the Afghans are unaccustomed to the sea, the Amer says:—"But England's troubles are always my troubles, her strength is my strength, and her weakness is my weakness. England must remember that I am always ready to fight for her on land."

from Lord Roberts:

"Poplar Grove, Friday morning.—Presidents Kruger and Steyn were both present at the flight of March 7th, and did all in their power to rally the troops. The rout, however, was complete, the men declaring that they could not stand against the British artillery and such a formidable force of cavalry."

BOERS ARE DISORGANIZED.

They Lack a Guiding Spirit in the Free State Operations.

London, March 9.—From various quarters come signs of the possibility of a secession of the Orange Free State from the alliance with the Transvaal. All the despatches from Lord Roberts' headquarters, including those of the commander himself, indicate the lack of a guiding spirit among the Boers and individual demoralization, pointing to disintegration unless speedily stopped.

THEY WISH TO SURRENDER.

London Times Says the Free Staters May Soon Surrender.

London, March 9.—The flight of the burghers from Poplar Grove, according to all accounts was wholly inglorious. A Times despatch from Poplar Grove under yesterday's date, goes so far as to assert that the Boers' route was complete that the submission of the Free State is being demanded by the burghers from their unwilling president, and considered that its submission would be made within a week. Probably the Boer's wisest course was flight, but it was most undignified and is certain to produce concentration at Bloemfontein. There is a growing out- cry against any further identification of the Free State with Transvaal interests.

THE POLE ON THE WAR.

He Thinks that President McKinley ought to Interfere.

New York, March 9.—A cable from Rome says that Count Pissinatti, leader of the Mexican Catholics, was received at a private audience by the Pope, who said: "The religious manifestations of the holy year are a source of great consolation to me. My joy would be complete but for the fratricidal South African war. I daily pray that President McKinley will offer the friendly mediation of America. He would then deserve the thanks of the Christian world."

FRANCE EXPRESSES REGRET.

Paris, March 9.—M. Delcasse, Minister of Foreign Affairs, is said to have written a private letter to Sir Edmund Gosset, the British Ambassador, expressing deep regret at the Bordeaux pro-Boer riots on Wednesday, and promising that the necessary measures will be taken to punish the offenders and to prevent a repetition of such an incident.

 DOCTOR J. A. COUURE, Quebec.

ORGANIZATION.—The Company was organized in 1897, and has since carried on its business without interruption. It had then a daily output of fifteen tons of dry pulp; later on the capacity of the mill was increased to thirty tons of dry pulp daily. Last spring, owing to the ready sale of the pulp, the Directors deemed it advisable still further to increase the production by adding three more grinders and a nine-grinder mill, with a capacity of fourteen thousand tons per annum. The Company paid a half yearly dividend at the rate of six per cent. per annum, the surplus profits over the dividend being spent on improvements and betterment.

There has never been a single share of the Capital of the Company of the mill, and the new capital was entirely taken up by the original shareholders. PURPOSES OF THE BOND ISSUE.—The Company has to complete and equip another mill of greater capacity than the present one at a site only eight hundred feet distant. The new mill will have a capacity of twenty-eight thousand tons of pulp per annum, making the combined output of the two mills forty-two thousand tons of dry pulp per annum.

MILL SITE.—The mill is situated on the Chicoutimi River, near where it discharges into the Saguenay, and within the limits of the Town of Chicoutimi, which town is the terminus of the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway, and the head of navigation. The Chicoutimi and Ontario Navigation Company make Chicoutimi the terminus of their line from Saguenay to the Atlantic.

WATER POWER.—The water power developed for present requirements is estimated at eight thousand horse power. The head on water is twenty-five feet; sixty cubic feet of water passes through the mill every minute, and this all the year round. The water is conducted to the mill by a steel pipe, eleven feet six inches in diameter. In the penstock are five wheels, three of forty inches, one of twenty-five inches and one of twenty inches. The Company possesses twenty-five thousand horse power. The water is clear and free from all impurities. The river flows from Lake Kenogami which acts as a reservoir or settling pond, it flows for ten miles to the mill on its rock bottom all the way. The wood is floated down the Chicoutimi River right to the mill where there is a pond large enough to store nine hundred thousand logs without any danger whatever.

SHIPPING FACILITIES.—The Quebec and Lake St. John Railway runs close to the mill site, and from the mill there is a branch line to the mill itself. In the mill are three car tracks, which make shipping of the pulp after it is manufactured, and the receiving of the wood for manufacturing very convenient and cheap. An elevated cable trolley line takes the pulp from the mill to the harbour wharf on the Saguenay River, where it is loaded on barges for reloading on steamships which come within four miles of the mill, on the Saguenay, at a point where there is a splendid harbour, for steamships of any size.

WOOD.—The Company owns 35,000 acres of timber limits, well covered principally with Black Spruce and some White and Gray Spruce. The Black Spruce is especially good for ground wood pulp, and turns out one hundred and fifty pounds more dry pulp per cord than any other spruce. Besides this a great quantity of the wood required for years to come can be had from the farmers in the neighbourhood. The Company has at present stored for winter use one hundred and eighty-three thousand logs twelve feet long.

PAIDUP CAPITAL.—The present plant employs one hundred and fifty men night and day, the new plant added will employ four hundred and fifty men.

FIRE PROTECTION.—In the yard are three large hydrants giving a constant pressure of forty-five pounds. There are always one thousand feet of hose ready for use in case of necessity.

PULP TRADE.—The Company has an assured market in England and France for the whole of its output. The output for this year (1900) is all sold. Orders have already been received from two firms in England for the whole product for 1901.

The cargo of wood pulp was valued at $66,000." The principal office of the Company is at Chicoutimi, with a branch office in Quebec.

PRESENTED TO STRATHCONA'S HORSE.

An Interesting Spectacle at Ottawa Yesterday When the Corps Received Four Guidons.

Ottawa, March 8.—About five thousand people gathered in Parliament Square this morning to see the presentation of four guidons to Strathcona's Horse. The ceremony occupied half an hour, and was over at noon.

This was really the first opportunity of the Ottawa people to see the Strathcona men on their mounts, and the route of the parade was thronged with loyal observing citizens.

The force created a most favorable impression, the men being perhaps the most stalwart sent from Canada to South Africa, and the horses being stocky little cayuses—very hardy and strong. With their Mexican saddles and leather trappings, they made a very brave array. Col. Steele was in command.

The regiment was drawn up in double line on Parliament Square, and the formation was very well kept, except for one or two interruptions from "bucking" bronchos. This led to an exhibition of equestrianism that tickled the crowd immensely.

On the steps on the central terrace His Excellency and Lady Minto, the

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

Peace and in War—A splendid lot of views.

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and beaded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the end of the century. In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such rapidity and stride as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives clashing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resisting the incursions of civilization. In spite of this, no strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intelligence and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, they possess fine buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but nestled in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scene of war, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have consigned to the authorship with Mr. Wynne Flemming, an officer whose authority upon South African matters is world-wide acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country South of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war. This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

Another beautiful feature of the most modern type, beautiful in color and the public improvements are evidences of the wonderful advance of civilization.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Government House staff, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, an dthe Cabinet Ministers, Sir Charles Tupper and the other distinguished guests, gathered. Among those present with the Rideau Hall party were the Marquis and Marchioness of Hertford, whose son is a private in the regiment.

Mrs. Borden made the presentation in a neat little speech in which she alluded to the guidon as a talisman, and said that the hearts and prayers of Canada went with them.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier referred to the generosity and loyalty of Lord Strathcona, who held his enormous fortune more as a public trust than as a private possession.

His Excellency also eulogized the public spirit of Lord Strathcona. Sir Charles Tupper declared his confidence that Strathcona's Horse would uphold the best traditions of the British army.

Dr. Borden also spoke. The guidons are in red and white silk, the motto being "Perseverance" and the crest a beaver and a maple leaf.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 10 1900

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Another Sharp Advance in Hogs.
 Hogs have advanced another 1-8 cent per pound, prices being with $8.50. Mr. E. F. Kennedy is prepared to pay this price for farmers' hogs delivered at his yard any day next week and would advise farmers calling on him before selling.

Boy Wanted.
 To learn bookbinding. Apply at the Times building.

Police Magistrate.
 A bill has been introduced into the Legislature by Mr. Sam Fox, providing that municipalities which pay their police magistrates shall decide on the amount which shall be paid. So far as county municipalities are concerned, this is all right, and would be a popular move, but it would hardly do to place magistrates under the virtual control of the council, in towns and cities.

Apprentice Wanted.
 We want a good, smart boy to learn press work at the Times press department. Won't have to deliver papers or run messages. Apply at once.

Annual Meeting.
 The annual meeting of the Peterborough County Association will be held in the town council chamber on Tuesday evening next. A large attendance of members is requested.

Carriage.
 The typographical appearance of the Times, is not up to the usual mark, in consequence of changes in the printing department. The machine on which the Times is printed is being overhauled, and we ask our readers to bear with us for a few days. The Times will be brighter and better than ever, once we get our machinery in shape.

Insurance Companies.
 In Spahr vs. North Waterloo Fire Insurance Company the Divisional Court has decided that the insurance is collectable. The policy contained a clause providing that the insurance should not be effective if the house was "unoccupied." The fire took place while the occupant was temporarily absent, and the court holds that the house was unoccupied or "unoccupied" at the time. Look over your premises while your wife is at the club, your children at school, and your "help" at market.

A Quaint Wedding.
 A quaint wedding took place on Wednesday in Amburgham, the contracting parties being Mr. S. H. Baker and Miss Annie Anderson. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. J. E. Moore, of March street Methodist church, and Mrs. Baker have taken up their residence in the village, and have the hearty good wishes of their many friends for their future happiness.

Indian River.
 Mr. John O'Brien has moved into his new residence.
 Mr. John Duff, war correspondent at this place, thinks the little unpleasantness in South Africa is almost over.
 Mr. Dennis Sullivan has completed having the timber for William Fitzgerald's new barn.
 Mr. H. P. McEnty purchased a prime team of horses last week from Mr. Harrington, of Elmhamore.
 Alderman Brown is delighted with the number of hogs being weighed on his new scales.
 Everybody reads the Times in this neighborhood. It is the best paper we get.

May's Artillery.
 The Times has received a letter in which the writer refers to the town road across which, with a cloud of steam attached, has been hovering the snow on Water street, as "May's artillery." He says that the "artillery" has been moving off the slopes of snow, drawing forth the life of those who are forced to drive over the street. Lydiate admits will not be a circumstance to what will take place on Water street when the thaw is on. It will require more than artillery to protect the engineer from the just vengeance of an outraged community.

THE FOOTBALL CONCERT.

The Rugby Club Secures a Big Success Last Night.

A fine athletic concert given last night under the auspices of the Peterborough Rugby Football Club, at the Opera House, was a success. The Opera House was fairly well filled, and the best of good feeling prevailed.

A fine programme was presented, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, fencing, gymnastics, tug-of-war, matched wrestling, and a series of the war by Mr. Roy, which alone was worth the price of admission.

The programme was opened with a piano solo by Mr. C. J. Rodgers, which was well received. Mr. Davidson followed with a song given in splendid style.

The single stick bout between Sergeant Major Brittain, and Sergeant G. Cameron was heartily applauded, as was also the exhibition of gymnastics by Mr. J. A. Macleod and squad from the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium.
 A song by Mr. Best Scott, maddening solo by Mr. J. Hackett, and tug-of-war between the electric works and Wm. Hamilton Co., and also between baseball club and rugby club, completed the first part of the programme.
 The war scenes presented by Mr. R. M. Roy, were the leading feature of the entertainment. To say that they were excellent, would not be doing them justice. The justice they were simply grand, giving those who saw the vivid and realistic idea of the struggle now going on in South Africa. It is hardly necessary to say that this part of the programme was heartily received and vigorously applauded. Mr. Roy, we understand, has many requests from outside points to exhibit his superb views.

The local football team, which had won so much glory on the field of sport last season, securing the championship, were presented with the cup and caps. The boys took their well-merited honors gracefully.
 A song in good voice on a form by Mr. Crane, secured a hearty encore, after which another fencing bout between Messrs. Brittain and Macleod, a hand bout by Messrs. Talbot and Galt, won by Mr. P. Eckenham, tug-of-war, instrumental quartette and comic duet, completed the musical portion of the programme.
 The tug-of-war between the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company, and the Canada General Electric Company resulted in victory for the latter team after a severe struggle.

As Others See It.
 The Lindsay Post says: "Why now have we seen in Peterborough, immediately after the heavy snow fall, the authorities issued posters calling upon all citizens to clear the walks in front of their respective properties, and so aid in snow-plow contractors. That is a common-sense plan for the speedy removal of the trouble." Our contemporary evidently don't know the truth. Citizens generally did not shovel the snow off their sidewalks. Some of those who did are now shovelling it back again so as to make a bridge over the water on the low paved streets. The way we do things in Peterborough is a holy terror.

 The readers of the Times are reminded that the "Dear Hearts of Ireland" will be presented in the opera house on Monday, March 13th by the Catholic Literary Association Dramatic Company, under the management of Miss Lillie Simons, elocutionist. The play will be interspersed with many up-to-date Irish specialties. The play has been thoroughly rehearsed, and will be in every way first-class. Tickets are now on sale at Lynch's Drug Store, where reserved seats may be secured. Mr. T. Hanrahan, financial secretary will also be pleased to supply tickets to those requiring them.

Up to the present date the ministers of the Presbyterian church in Canada have contributed $71,544 to the Twentieth Century Fund.
 Considerable hay and wood was offered for sale on the market yesterday. Hay brought $7 to $8 per ton, and hardwood from $4 to $5.50 and soft wood $3.50 to $4.

The Times is asking a thoroughly equipped electric department to The Times, so that the paper will soon contain illustrations equal to the larger city papers.
 The young men charged with stealing bicycle wheels from the risk appeared before Police Magistrate Dumble yesterday and pleaded guilty, although they said they had no intention of stealing the wheels. The case was adjourned until this morning.

The patriotic address, by Rev. M. E. Wilson, delivered in the Mark street church, Amburgham, on Thursday evening, was well attended. A duet was sung by Miss Annie Smith and Mrs. J. H. Smith with good effect. During the rendition of "Hail Britannia" by the choir, the Sunday school children waved their Union Jacks.

Stationer's Bill.
 Mr. W. M. German has introduced an amendment to the License Act, it has four sections. One provides that hotelkeepers may serve beer and liquor during prohibited hours. This question is now in dispute. The second section asks that hotels may be kept open in municipal districts.
 The third section provides that when local option is defeated that such bill cannot be submitted again for three years.

 The fourth section asks that all licenses may be paid half yearly. Now license holders in cities have this privilege.

A GOOD RECORD.

Result of the Year's Operations of the Queen Fire Insurance Company.

Elsewhere will be found the report presented at the 29th annual general meeting of the Queen City Fire Insurance Company, which was held at the head office and that institution, Toronto, on Wednesday, Feb. 23. We heartily congratulate Messrs. Scott & Wainman, underwriters, on the result of the year's operations, which is most satisfactory. A glance over the detailed statement of accounts published in this issue of the Times will show that, in addition to the great reserve fund of $15,000, there was added to the credit of the profit and loss account of the company the sum of $63,110. This places the surplus assets alone at the exceedingly low rate of 4.8 per cent of the assets in force. The regular shareholders' dividend, equal to 25 per cent of the original paid-up capital, was paid, and, in addition, a bonus divided of 5 per cent on the paid-up capital was added to the bonus of each risk, based on actual experience. The old board of directors, Hon. Justice Maclean, J. D. Chipman, J. G. Scott, Thomas Wainman, and Hugh Scott, were unanimously re-elected, and at a subsequent meeting Hugh Scott was re-elected President and Thomas Wainman Vice-President.

I hereby certify that I have audited the books and examined the vouchers and securities of the Company for the year ending 31st December, 1899, and find the same correct, carefully kept, and properly set forth in the above statements.
 HENRY WM. EDDIS, F.C.A.
 Toronto, Feb. 8th, 1900 Auditor.
 On moving the adoption of the report the President said:
 "You will see from the statements before you that, in addition to our great reserve fund of $75,000, we also had at the close of last year at the credit of profit and loss $76,333.10. Such substantial results must be very gratifying to all of us, as it places our surplus assets alone at the very large rate of 4.08 per cent of risks in force.
 Realizing as we do, that all insurance is mutual, no matter by what name you call it, as it is the assured that pays the losses and expenses, only equitable rates should be exacted, and which we aim at doing.
 Our hands are not tied by any hide-bound tariff of rates, but fix them on the merits of each risk, based on actual experience.
 We will find it in their own interest to communicate with us, giving us the most reasonable rates, and it is with much pleasure that we are able to add that during our 29 years' experience we have never been in a court of law.
 The adoption of the report, seconded by the Vice-President, was carried.
 Moved by D. J. Chipman, seconded by Justice Macleod: "That a bonus dividend of five per cent on the paid-up capital be paid to shareholders, in addition to the regular dividend for the past year, 1899." Carried.
 The old board, viz:—Hon. Justice Macleod, J. D. Chipman, J. G. Scott, Thomas Wainman and Hugh Scott, was

EIGHTEENTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE Federal Life Assurance Company of Canada.

The eighteenth annual meeting of the Shareholders of the Federal Life Assurance Company of Canada was held at the head office of the Company in Hamilton on the 6th of March, 1899. The Managing Director, Mr. David Dexter, presented the following reports and financial statement—

DIRECTOR'S REPORT.
 The Directors have pleasure in submitting for the information and approval of the Shareholders the following report of the business of the Company, together with a statement of receipts and disbursements for the year, which closed on 31st December, 1899, and of the Assets and Liabilities on that date.
 New business consisted of sixteen hundred and fifty-seven applications for insurance, aggregating $2,829,700, of which seventeen hundred and ninety-five applications for $2,077,900 were accepted; applications for $10,000 having been rejected or held for further information.
 Annuity premiums to the amount of $4,000 were also received.
 During the year, as in previous years, about 90 per cent of the new business of the company was on its investment plans, showing that investment insurance still holds favor in comparison with other forms of investment on which interest earnings are depreciating steadily. The feature of profit accumulations for a term of years is increasing in popularity.
 The increasing prosperity of the country has extended its influence to Life Insurance, as indicated by the large increase in the Premium Income and Assets of the Company.

The gross income of the Company shows a satisfying increase over previous years, and the addition of $1,377.28 to the assets is especially noteworthy, the total assets having risen to $1,060,600.80, exclusive of guarantee capital.
 The security for Policyholders, including Guarantee Capital, amounted to $1,060,600.80, and the liabilities for reserves and all outstanding claims $94,042.02, showing a surplus of $922,558.78. Executive of unpaid Guarantee Capital the surplus to Policyholders was $114,257.77.
 Annuities for $106,000, on forty-five lives, became claims through death, of which amount the Company was re-insured for $3,000. Including cash dividends and dividends applied to the reduction of premiums, $12,460.52, with annuities $2,572.97, the total payments to Policyholders amounted to $125,483.49.
 An endorsement in last report, the securing of the special Act of Incorporation from the Parliament of Canada, has greatly increased our investments in other provinces, much to the advantage of the Company.
 The investments of the Company have been carefully managed, and have yielded results considerably above the average results of all Companies doing business in Canada. Expenses have been kept within reasonable limits, while due effort has been made for new business. The chief officers and agents of the Company are entitled to much credit for their able representation of the Company's interest. The office staff have also proved faithful in the Company's service.
 The accompanying Certificate from the Auditors vouches for the correctness of the statements submitted herewith. All accounts, securities and vouchers have been examined by them.
 JAMES H. BEATTY, President. DAVID DEXTER, Managing Director.

AUDITOR'S REPORT.
 Gentlemen—We have made a careful audit of the books of your Company for the year ending 31st December, 1899, and have certified to their correctness. The securities have been inspected and compared with the ledger accounts and found to agree therewith.
 The financial position of your Company, as on 31st December, is indicated by the accompanying statement.
 Respectfully submitted,
 H. S. STEPHENS, SHERMAN E. TOWNSEND, Auditors.
 Hamilton, 1st March, 1900.

The Medical Director, Dr. A. Woolverton, presented an interesting report of which one of the most gratifying features to Shareholders and Policyholders alike was the item showing the death rate for the year to have been the lowest experienced by the Company in the past ten years.
 An account of the portrait of the President, Mr. J. H. Beatty, by the well-known artist, Mr. J. W. L. Forster, was placed on the wall of the boardroom, as a token of the esteem in which Mr. Beatty is held by the Directors and Shareholders.
 The retiring Directors were re-elected, and at a subsequent meeting of the Board Mr. Beatty was re-elected President, Lieut.-Col. Kerne and Mr. T. H. Macpherson, M.P., Vice-Presidents.

Estimated Revenue and Expenditure Adopted at Saturday's Council Meeting.

EX-ALD. E.N.D. NALL BREATHES A SIGN OF RELIEF

When Council Passed the By-law Granting Additional Exemption to C. G. E. Co.—“His Task Had Been More Difficult Than Buller’s,” so He Said.

Town council met in special session Saturday night when there were present Mayor Hendry and Aldermen Otto, Weir, Lawson, Clinkinbeale, Denno, Corbett and Hooten.	Review Ptg. Co.	1 00
The most important measure dealt with was that of fixing the rates and providing for the levying of taxes for 1908 and it is pleasing to note that the majority of money goes in permanent improvements such as granolithic sidewalks, sewer construction, new bridges, etc., the rate still remains the same as that of the dollar, and the yearling rate is the same.	A. E. Menley	1 00
The work was exceedingly well done and the council proved highly satisfactory to all concerned, and goes to show that our civic fathers are legislating with a view to public economy, and also demonstrate that during the past year the citizenship of the Finance Committee has been held by an exceedingly capable, careful and energetic official Aid. The minutes of a two preceding meetings were read and confirmed.

A communication from the Separate School Board that they will require $3,765 for the current year was referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Robert Neil notified council that the paring wall of premises lately occupied by the late Wm. W. Brown & Matthews Co. Ltd.—recently destroyed by fire—is in danger of falling in upon his premises, in which case he would hold the town liable for damages.

Reference was made to the Town clerk Armstrong read a communication from Town Solicitor Edwards, in which he states that the town cannot interfere with private property. Had the report been made by an outside one and heading towards the street, then the town could be held responsible, but in this case they have no jurisdiction.

Brown, Love & Aylmer ..... 450 00
All of which is respectfully submitted.

The report was adopted as read.

Fire, Water and Light.

Ald. Davern presents the following—
Gardiner, T. and Logan
Committee has leave to report and recommend that the chairmen of this committee be authorized to purchase several pairs of running shoes for the Firemen and 30 pairs of Fire Boots.
All of which is respectfully submitted.
The report was adopted as read.

Court of Revision.

In the absence of Ald. Davern, Ald. Weir presented the following—
Gardiner, T. and Logan
Committee has leave to report and recommend as follows—1 in reference to the application of Mr. P. W. Heywood for the refund of $17 tion.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were referred to Finance Committee for certification thereof:

Wm. Butler, $5.56; Kingham Hardware Co., $1.20; Wm. Butler, $3.75; Le Bran & Veitch, $1.85.

REPORTS.

Finance Committee.

ALD. HANE presented the following report:

Gentlemen,—Your Finance Committee beg leave to report as follows:

1. We examined the Auditor's Report and recommend that it be printed as usual.
2. Your Committee recommended that the Victoria Park be left in the care of the Peterborough and Ashburham Horticultural Society and that the ground between the same and the Society, be sold at last year.
3. Your Committee have considered the estimated receipts and expenditures for this year, and they will be submitted to you with a view to authorizing the collection of rates for the same.
4. Your Committee recommend the payment of the following accounts:

Gos. Hutchings	75
F. Adams	10 50
Wm. Hetherington	4 50
Adam Hall	6 00

ALD. HANE said in effect in 1887, we recommended that the rates be referred to the Town Solicitor to investigate and collect from the proper party to not already properly collected, and if successful that the same be divided with Mr. Hetherington, who had been the collector of the rates for the refund of the amount of income taxes paid by him this Life Insurance Co. In 1888, and subsequent years recommended that no such refund be in the matter.

All of which is respectfully submitted. The report was adopted as read.

Legal Committee.

ALD. ROBERTSON presented the following:

Gentlemen,—Your Legal Committee beg leave to report that they concur with the Town Solicitor with reference to the suit entered against the town by Mrs. Mattie Hetherington for damages for falling on a sidewalk, and instructed the solicitor to defend the town.

All of which is respectfully submitted. The report was adopted as read.

Striking the Rate.

A by-law to fix the rate, to authorize the levy of a tax for the year 1891, and to adopt the same, was read, and passed of its several readings. The following tabulated statement gives the estimates upon which the rate of 12 mills on the dollar was struck:—

ORGANIZATION.—The Company was organized in 1897, and has since carried on its business without interruption. It had then a daily output of fifteen tons of dry pulp; later on the capacity of the mill was increased to thirty tons of dry pulp daily. Last spring, owing to the ready sale of the pulp, the Directors deemed it advisable still further to increase the production by adding three more grinders and a new-grinder-mill, with a capacity of fourteen thousand tons per annum. The Company paid a half yearly dividend at the rate of six per cent. per annum, the surplus profits over the dividend being spent on improvements and betterments.

There has never been a single share of the Capital of the Company on the market, and the new capital was entirely taken up by the original shareholders. Furthermore, the Company has a daily output of fifteen tons of dry pulp, and a greater capacity than the present one at a site only eight hundred feet distant. The new mill will have a capacity of twenty-eight thousand tons of pulp per annum, making the combined output of the two mills forty-two thousand tons of dry pulp per annum.

MILL SITE.—The mill is situated on the Chicoutimi River, near where it discharges into the Saguenay, and within the limits of the Town of Chicoutimi, which Town is the terminus on the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway, and the head of navigation. The Quebec and Ontario Navigation Company make Chicoutimi the terminus of their line from Niagara to the Atlantic.

WATER POWER.—The water power developed for present requirements is estimated at eight thousand horse power. The head of water is seventy-five feet; sixty cubic feet of water per second flow through the mill every minute, and this all the year round. The water is conducted to the mill by a steel flume, eleven feet six inches in diameter. In the penstock are five wheels, three of four inches, one of twenty-five inches and one of twenty inches. The Company possesses twenty-five thousand horse power. The water is clear, soft and free from all impurities. The river flows from Lake Huron which acts as a reservoir or settling pond; it flows for ten miles to the mill on the river bottom all the way. The wood is floated down the Saguenay River, where it is loaded on barges or rafts, and loaded large enough to store nine hundred thousand logs without any danger whatever.

SHIPPING FACILITIES.—The Quebec and Lake St. John Railway runs close to the mill site, and from the main line a switch runs to the mill itself. In the mill are three side tracks, which make shipping of the pulp after it is manufactured, and the receiving of the wood for manufacturing very convenient and cheap. An elevated cable truck line takes the pulp from the mill to the harbour wharf on the Saguenay River, where it is loaded on barges for re-floating on steamships, which come within four miles of the mill, on the Saguenay, at a point where there is a splendid harbour for steamships of any size.

WOOD.—The Company owns 25,000 acres of timber limits, well covered principally with Black Spruce and some White and Gray Spruce. The Black Spruce is especially good for ground wood pulp, and turns out one hundred and fifty pounds more dry pulp per cord than any other spruce. Besides this a great quantity of the wood required for years to come can be had from the forests in the neighbourhood. The Company has at present stored for water use one hundred and eighty-three thousand logs twelve feet long.

PRESENT MILL.—The present plant employs one hundred and fifty men night and day, the new plant added will employ four hundred and fifty men.

FIRE PROTECTION.—In the yard are three large hydrants giving a constant pressure of forty-five pounds. There are always one thousand feet of hose ready for use in case of necessity.

PULP TRADE.—The Company has an assured market in England and France for the whole of its output. The output for the year 1899 is all sold. Orders have already been received for two firms in England for the whole product for 1901.

DEWEY LIKES ATTENTIONS.

Lakewood, N.J., March 12.—Admiral and Mrs. Dewey are having a round of festivities since their arrival, for the benefit of their health. So many people are desirous of meeting the Admiral that he and Mrs. Dewey have decided to hold a reception in Lakewood Hotel this evening, to be followed by a ball.

DEAN CONSPIRATORS.

New York, March 12.—The case of James J. Kellogg, indicted for grand larceny in connection with the E. S. Dean swindle comes up to-day. This firm induced a number of "lambos" to deposit money with them for investment in stocks. Large dividends were paid. Finally there was a crash three years ago, and the books and all the money was found missing. The indictments followed.

DEBATE.

New York, March 12.—The third debate between Columbia University and the University of Chicago will be held at the Carnegie Music Hall to-night. Each side has won a previous contest. The subject at issue is, "Resolved, That National Regulation of Corporations Tending to Capitalistic Monopoly is Unwise and Inexpedient." Columbia has the affirmative and Chicago the negative. The judges are Carl Schurz, Albert Shaw, Editor of the American Monthly Review of Reviews, and James C. Carter, President of the New York Harvard Club. The Columbia speakers are Bernard M. L. Ernst, Melville, J. France and Loven W. Wood, with Ernest A. Cardozo as alternate. From Chicago, Frank H. Town, Aln. He is twenty-one, and has won several contests. France is twenty-one years old and lives in Brooklyn. Wood lives in Arvilla No. Dak. and prepared for Carleton College, Minnesota, at the public schools of Grand Forks, N. Dak., and the Carleton Academy. He represented his college in the Minnesota State oratorical contest in 1900.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING.

New York, March 12.—A meeting of the stockholders of the Consolidated Gas Company has been called for to-day to ratify the action of the trustees who some time ago issued debentures of the Company to the amount of $36,000,000 for the purchase of the entire capital stock of the New York Gas and Electric Light, Heat and Power Company. They took any such action these debentures without the knowledge of the stockholders and without their authority. There is much criticism of the trustees for not taking their stockholders into their confidence before they took any such radical step as the issuance of $36,000,000 worth of debenture bonds. It is thought, however, that the action will be ratified, as the net earnings of the newly equipped property are about 9 per cent. per annum.

CRUISER AT CIENFUEGOS.

Cienfuegos, March 12.—The cruiser New York is due to arrive here to-day. From here she goes to Havana.

BASEBALL PRACTICE.

St. Louis, March 12.—Manager "Pat" Haney and the rest of the St. Louis Baseball Team left for Hot Springs to-day, where they will do their training preliminary to the opening of the season.

ICE CARNIVAL.

Brooklyn, March 12.—The Speed Skating Carnival will take place at the Coney Island rink to-night. The entries for the many races will be well, while a number of special features serve to make the programme more than ordinarily attractive. In the two-mile relay event, Le Roy See, McDonald and Hornbeck all have shown in their expert racing. The snow-battle between Joe Vine and Gladwin will be for blood beyond question. Exhibitions by Blodgett, the trick cyclist, Miss Nellie Patterson, the clever woman skater, and jumping contests also lend interest to the carnival.

BANQUET.

Hartford, Conn., March 12.—The Hartford Business Men's Association will hold a banquet this evening at the Allgas House. A large gathering of business men is assured.

WILLIAMS' EXECUTION.

Trenton, N.J., March 12.—To-day is the day for the execution of Edward Williams, who on Feb. 9 was convicted of the murder of Minnie Eiseley. This will be the first hanging in the county since Wawita, who shot Prison Keeper Lippincott, was executed six years ago.

JOHN ERICSSON DAY.

Minneapolis, March 12.—Among the Swedish citizens of Minnesota this date has of late years come to be almost as generally observed as any national holiday on the calendar. It is John Ericsson day, the anniversary of the battle of the Monitor and the Merrimack, in which the little Yankee craft, designed and built by Ericsson, the great Swedish-American engineer, put to rout the ponderous Confederate gunboat. This day is being appropriately celebrated by the Swedish societies of the state, which will hold banquets this evening.

ANOTHER DEBATE.

Philadelphia, March 12.—The debate between the Universities of Pennsylvania and Michigan will take place at the Academy of Music tonight. The following subject has been chosen for the debate: "Resolved, That the formation of trusts should be opposed by legislation." Pennsylvania will defend the affirmative side while Michigan will uphold the negative side of the question.

IN MEMORY OF WILLIAM I.

Berlin, March 12.—The Emperor and Empress of Germany and their family commemorated the death of His Majesty's grandfather, Emperor William I to-day. It is the custom of the Emperor to each year visit the mausoleum and deposit a wreath upon it, and attend memorial service in the evening.

CLUB DINNER.

New York, March 12.—The West Side Republican Club will hold its annual dinner at Sherry's to-night which bids fair to be a complete success. Addresses will be made by speakers of national reputation. This club at a recent meeting adopted a resolution vigorously opposing the Porto Rican Tariff Bill.

MAHER-CONROY FIGHT.

Youngstown, O., March 12.—Peter Maher will meet Tom Conroy, the Troy heavyweight, at the Youngstown A. C. to-night. This battle was to have taken place on Feb. 28, but owing to an injury to Maher's right hand the bout was postponed until to-night.

SIX ROUNDS.

Chicago, March 12.—George Byers, of Boston, will meet Frank Childs, of this city at the Star A. C. to-night. The bout will be of six rounds duration, and he winner will be matched against Billy Stiff.

THEY WISH TO SUBMIT.

London Times Says the Free States May Soon Succeed.

London, March 9.—The flight of the burghers from Poplar Grove, according to all accounts was wholly inglorious. A Times despatch from Poplar Grove under yesterday's date, goes so far as to assert that the Boers' rout was so complete that the submission of the Free State is being demanded by the burghers from their unwilling president, and considered that its submission would be made within a week. Probably the Boers' wisest course was flight, but it was most undignified and is certain to produce concentration at Bloemfontein. There is a growing outcry against any further identification of the Free State with Transvaal interests.

ORGANIZATION.—The Company was organized in 1897, and has since carried on its business without interruption. It had then a daily output of fifteen tons of dry pulp; later on the capacity of the mill was increased to thirty tons of dry pulp daily. Last spring, owing to the ready sale of the pulp, the directors decided it advisable still further to increase the production by adding three more grinders and a nine-grinder-mill, with a capacity of fourteen thousand tons per annum. The Company paid a half yearly dividend at the rate of six per cent. per annum, the surplus profits over the dividend being spent on improvements and betterments.

There has never been a single share of the Capital of the Company on the market, and the new capital was entirely taken up by the original shareholders. POSITION AS THE ONLY ISSUE.—The Company has to complete and equip another mill of greater capacity than the present one at a site only eight hundred feet distant. The new mill will have a capacity of twenty-eight thousand tons of pulp per annum, making the combined output of the two mills forty-two thousand tons of dry pulp per annum.

MILL SITE.—The mill is situated on the Chicoutimi River, near where it discharges into the Saguenay, and within the limits of the Town of Chicoutimi, which town is the terminus of the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway, and the head of navigation. The Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Company make Chicoutimi the terminus of their line from Niagara to the Atlantic.

The head of water is seventy-five feet, six cubic feet of water passes through the mill every minute, and this all the year round. The water is conducted to the mill by a steel flume, eleven feet six inches in diameter. In the penstock are five wheels, three of forty inches, one of twenty-five inches and one of twenty inches. The Company possesses twenty-five thousand horse power. The water is clear, soft and free from all impurities. The river flows from Lake Knappton which acts as a reservoir or settling pond, it flows for ten miles to the mill on the rock bottom all the way. The wood is floated down the Chicoutimi River right to the mill where there is a pond large enough to store nine hundred thousand logs without any danger whatever.

SHIPPING FACILITIES.—The Quebec and Lake St. John Railway runs close to the mill site, and from the main line a switch runs to the mill itself. In the mill are three small tracks, which make shipping of the pulp after it is manufactured, and the receiving of the wood for manufacturing very convenient and cheap. An elevated cable railway has taken the pulp from the mill to the harbour wharf on the Saguenay River, where it is loaded on barges for re-loading on steamships, which come within four miles of the mill, on the Saguenay, at a point where there is a splendid harbour for steamships of any size.

WOOD.—The Company owns 28,500 acres of timber limits, well covered principally with Black Spruce and some White and Gray Spruce. The Black Spruce is especially good for graining wood pulp, and turns out one hundred and fifty pounds of dry pulp per cord, than any other species. Besides this a great quantity of the wood required for years to come can be had from the farmers in the neighbourhood. The Company has at present stored for winter use one hundred and eighty-three thousand logs twelve feet long.

PRESENT MILL.—The present plant employs one hundred and fifty men night and day, the new plant added will employ four hundred and fifty men.

PLANT PRODUCTION.—In the yard are three large hydrants giving a constant pressure of forty-five pounds. There are always one thousand feet of hose ready for use in case of necessity.

LIGHT AND HEAT.—The mill is lighted throughout by electricity generated on the premises. Heat for the buildings is also generated from the waste bark of the pulp wood.

PULP TRADE.—The Company has an assured market in England and France for the whole of its output. The output for this year (1908) is all sold, offers for the whole of the output for the year 1909 are all sold, offers for the whole of the output for the year 1910 are all sold.

A Short of the Day

...As the Curtain Fell...

BY MRS. GEN. GEORGE E. PICKETT (Lafayette Corbett Pickett.)

I looked at him furtively as he stood with an air of graceful repose, his head half turned aside. I had always wondered how a man like that would die. He had called always for his own enjoyment the best of everything, of every kind and degree, and amused them around him, thus called on as to suffer their sum and debts. Instead of their tedious particularities. He put his life on the coast of impulse. When he did well he shared, what he did ill he reckoned not of the power of will was sublime. Let him be adjudged by his best moments.

I don't think I am married on the subject of death. Man of my profession are out on usually. We learn to make it as a necessary part of life that a man should die. It did go to my heart, though, to tell this man the truth. I should not have felt more criminally guilty had it been my fate to strike the blow that would deprive him of all his power and this life. He seemed to have more of it than anybody else. It was chiefly a life of that nature which gave him the impression that his power would elude to it with depressing tenacity because it is all he has.

He was regarding me carefully as if he might be a more lucky-on at a little drama in which he had no personal interest.

"What is it, doctor? Am you going to tell me that I'm used up, and can't go to the embassy ball tomorrow evening?"

You needn't take the trouble, for I'm to dance with the peerless Pauline, and not even my reverence for you will keep me away."

"I was not thinking of the ball."

"I'm glad of it, for I'd be sorry to be absent you or to be lacking in duty."

I leaned back and looked at him. What a magnificent specimen of manhood he was! I had never been tempted to wish I were a woman it would have been worth it to have seen him in his prime.

I saw stillness. Courtney bending, his head to his partner in the wall or the promenade and looking at her from the radiant depths of his violet gray eyes.

"Oh, I see, you want to send me carting over Europe to restore my constitution, shattered by too close attention to my arduous duties."

"No, it isn't that, either."

"Then you want me to give up cigars and champagne and poken and well, Tucker, excuse me, old man, but what I don't like about you medical fellows is the air of extreme virtue you put on when a fellow gets in a hole. As if you were never known to indulge in any small vices yourself. One who doesn't know anything stronger than draughts from the deep wells of science, and if you see a cigar and a bottle standing together you wonder a knot which was the right and which was the wrong."

There was something appealingly awful to me in the sight of this magnificent-looking fellow sitting so calmly opposite me, all unconscious of what I must tell him, taking on his merry, careless, insouciant way his lead astray before seemed so deliciously pleasant to me, as something far away from my own life of toil and responsibility. I took a strong hold of my nerves and tried to speak with professional calmness.

"Are your business affairs straight?"

"Business affairs? Why, man! I have had any. If I had I suppose they would be as crooked as the career of a politician. I have a lawyer, I believe, firewater."

Yes, that's the name. I suppose he takes all his water and gives me the rest. I never took the trouble to ask him up. I've a nephew or cousin or something of the kind—I don't know just what—who will inherit my property if there's any left after I'm through with it, but there will be a lot of it. A lot of it and a merry one—the brigadier's mother-in-law, and I can tell you living up to it is not an unenviable process."

"A short life and a merry one," I repeated, shaken out of all possibility of professional equanimity by his dandy. "My God, Courtney, must I tell you how short it will be?"

He leaned indolently back in his chair, the mean, half smile with which he had commiserated the fate of his heir yet lingering about his lips.

"What do you say, physician, for if I don't tell you the truth, you will not tell me the truth. It is not fashionable now, even for ministers, to compete with them in that line. I often think how fortunate it is that we have the blessing of physicians. Were it not for them telling the truth would become a lost art."

"Courtney, I have loved you like a brother since the first day I ever saw you. Knowing that, you may perhaps imagine how hard it is for me to tell you that you have not many more days—yes, I am afraid not many more hours—yet to live."

I have seen men face death bravely, but I never saw anything else so magnificent as the momentary struggle and the swift victory of the man whose smile had not yet died away from his lips. He stood and stood erect, the superb light of him towering above me, his tumbling billows of chestnut hair gleaming amber in the light, his brilliant mischievous twinkling eyes shining down at me.

"Thank you, Tucker. Thank you, but say, old man, don't you think you might have been a little more generous—days? Well, I'll have to begin to take out of my time, won't I? The next few hours I have decided upon the most judicious disposal of. The new opera takes three hours of course, you will go with me? I was going to the club to get some of the set, but I'll take just you instead. After the play, we'll have the finest supper you ever saw, you have made life so short I can't afford to forego any of its pleasures. You will go?"

"Of course. Would I let go such a matter? Mignone is the star of the place, she is the star of the stage—the star of the world. She does in a time wilderness and a great crowd to draw crowds and a perfectly blanketing lamp comes along with a torch and finds her. Striking, isn't it? You cannot refuse me. Remember you are my physician and are responsible for me. I shall feel like the Chinese emperor of a New York railroad king, going out attended by my physician."

I yielded. What could I have done better? If I had refused to go, he would have asked me out else, and I fancied I was a safer companion for him than any of the club fellows.

The play had begun when we entered Courtney's box.

"I am indebted to you for the escape from the preliminary explanation," he said, when the curtain went down. "Always cut them when you can. It is a great advantage to understand the play without explanation. It's because the play isn't good for anything, in which case it doesn't pay to waste time on it. On the other hand, imagination, in which case it doesn't pay to waste time on it."

A soft, clear voice rippled musically across the air filled with fragrances and radiant with light. With the gleam of brilliant jewels, singing something, I don't know, what, for I was too attending to the stage. The brief and tragic drama at my side was sufficient to absorb my thoughts. Courtney fixed his eyes curiously on the singer with a rapid expression of delight. He turned forward in an attitude of tense eagerness until the song ceased. Then he leaned back and looked at me with an expression of incredulous reproach.

"Tucker, I wish you had not killed me so soon," he murmured with that fascinating shadow of a lip. "I should like to live to love her—yes, to love Mignone. Say, old man, do give me more time."

I looked toward the stage and saw a slender, athletic form, swaying slightly like a reed in a summer breeze, a pale, small face lit up by wide, deep eyes, that seemed to gaze away out into the world, beyond the sweep of human thought to the utmost rim of imagination. The pathetic face was framed in by drifts of soft hair like a cloud wreath rolling away after a storm. For a moment I looked at her, then turned away to Courtney. What mattered one actress more or less to me?

Of the play I saw only what was reflected in Courtney's face and I think it was not so much the play that I saw as the changeful dawn of a strange, new day to which his soul was awakening. What a wondrously brilliant beauty it made his face, and I wished that with this beautiful birth, life, too, could come.

While I was watching him, all unconscious of the play, I was startled by his suddenly rising and springing from the box to the stage. At the same time I became aware of a thrill of horror that swept over the audience. I had just time before the curtain went down to see that the light draperies of the actress had flamed up suddenly and that Courtney was holding her in his arms, crushing out the flames.

When I got behind the scenes the flames were extinguished and the girl, frightened, but unhurt, was kneeling down and holding Courtney's head in her arms. There was the same light in her face, bent close to his, that I had seen on his own when he first heard her. His eyes were upturned to hers with a mute appeal, which she must have understood, for she tenderly and lovingly bent over and kissed him on the lips.

As the curtain fell on the last scene of the drama of his life stillness Courtney's spirit, with all the breath of the bloom of the year in his life of Mignone, crossed over the river to that untimely shore where the heart of the springtime and the soul of the summer is in all the days of years.

with a torch and finds her. Striking, isn't it? You cannot refuse me. Remember you are my physician and are responsible for me. I shall feel like the Chinese emperor of a New York railroad king, going out attended by my physician."

I yielded. What could I have done better? If I had refused to go, he would have asked me out else, and I fancied I was a safer companion for him than any of the club fellows.

The play had begun when we entered Courtney's box.

"I am indebted to you for the escape from the preliminary explanation," he said, when the curtain went down. "Always cut them when you can. It is a great advantage to understand the play without explanation. It's because the play isn't good for anything, in which case it doesn't pay to waste time on it. On the other hand, imagination, in which case it doesn't pay to waste time on it."

A soft, clear voice rippled musically across the air filled with fragrances and radiant with light. With the gleam of brilliant jewels, singing something, I don't know, what, for I was too attending to the stage. The brief and tragic drama at my side was sufficient to absorb my thoughts. ## GEN. FRENCH'S CAVALRY OCCUPY BLOEMFONTEIN.

In Lobbies of the House of Commons Rumors of Mafeking's Relief Were in Circulation.

SALISBURY'S REPLY MEETS WITH APPROBATION.

General Joubert Has Arrived at Pretoria to With the Government—
The Cape Mounted Police Have Reoccupied Barkley
East—The War Loan Over-subscribed.

Herschel, Cape Colony, March 13.
The Cape Mounted Police have re-occupied Barkley East.

London, March 13.—Midnight.
In the lobbies of the House of Commons rumors that Mafeking had been relieved were in circulation this evening but they still lack confirmation.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Michael Hicks-Beach announced that the war loan had been over-subscribed ten times, the applications numbering 1800. The House at a late hour adopted the vote of money and men embraced in the army proposals of Mr. Wyndham.

Alhwal North, Cape Colony, by courier to Burgersdorp, via Stormberg Junction, March 13.

General Buller's forces arrived here Sunday. The Boers had retired the previous night, taking up a position four miles beyond the Orange River where General Buller attacked and drove them back, securing the position after a sharp engagement.

Cape Town, evening, March 13.
Gen. French has arrived at Bloemfontein.

Pretoria, Saturday, March 10.—Vis
Lorenso Marques, March 12.

General Joubert has arrived here to consult the Government. Rumors of peace overtures are in the air. All attention is directed towards the British advance on Bloemfontein but the federalists are still confident of being able to check it.

London, Monday, March 5. Via
Lorenso Marques, March 12.

Trouble is expected between Chief Okegona and Chief Umogase in British Zululand. The Boers are anxious that the chiefs should quarrel and they are prepared to support the former as also the Swazi Queen. The Zulu king, however, upholds Umogase.

The women at Pieter Kief Lager are lamenting over the heavy losses around Ladysmith.

London, March 14.
Nothing can be said of the advance on Bloemfontein beyond Lord Roberts' own despatches. Nothing more has been permitted to come through.

Lord Roberts' message may mean either that the Boers have cut the railway to the north or that the British cavalry have done so. The Boers may make another fight, but there is little doubt that Lord Roberts will occupy Bloemfontein to-day (Wednesday). The Boers retiring from Orange River will find themselves between two British armies, and their guns are almost bound to fall into the hands of the British, while the occupation of the capital of the Free State will strain the alliance of the two republics to the utmost.

The Government will not allow the Kruger-Steyn matter to influence in any way their determination not to spare any effort to prosecute the war. There will be no diminution of measures calculated to maintain the full efficiency of the field force, and whatever reinforcements previously considered advisable will be still sent out.

Lord Salisbury's reply meets with unanimous approval among Conservatives, and it is the universal opinion that the Boers by their extravagant claims and casting tone meant to influence foreign powers, have again overreached themselves as they did by the ultimatum.

London, March 14.
The Daily Mail has the following despatches from Kimberley, dated Tuesday, March 13.—Lord Methuen occupied Peka on Sunday without opposition. He left a garrison there and returned here.

London, March 14.
Winston Churchill writes to the Morning Post from Durban protesting against the cruel treatment of General Cronje. He adds—"The stern decision not to exchange prisoners will undoubtedly accelerate the end of the war, but it will prove very hard and perhaps even dangerous for the British prisoners in Pretoria."

"There is abundant evidence that the Boers are becoming more cruel and the war will enter a darker phase. It is very doubtful if the Boer Government will be able to control the wild passions of the exasperated ruffians forming the main part of the Boer forces in the event of a siege of Pretoria and the position of the British prisoners would then become precarious.

"I have visited the dam which the Boers began on Klip River, below Ladysmith. If it had been completed it would have submerged 'Intombi Camp,' where there were over 2,000 sick."

JOUBERT AT GLENCOE.

Ladysmith, March 12.—The main body of the enemy is in position on the Bitterberg range north of Ladysmith. General Joubert is at Glencoe. There is reason to believe that few Boers are at Dundee, though the place is well fortified.

GEN. WHITE REACHES DURBAN.

Durban, March 12.—General Sir George Stewart White arrived here and embarked upon a transport for East London.

MAFEEKING SAFE MARCH 6th.

Ladysmith, March 13.—A despatch received by a South African firm in London, dated Mafeking, March 6, via Ladysmith, March 9, says "All well out town still besieged."

FRENCH COMMANDS STATION.

Ladysmith, March 13.—The War Office has received a despatch from Lord Roberts announcing that after a fight with the Boers the French reached Bloemfontein last evening and occupied two hills close to the railway station.

RAILWAY CUT TO THE SOUTH.

Ladysmith, March 13.—The War Office has received the following additional despatch from Lord Roberts at Venters Vlei, dated March 12.
"Our march was again unopposed. We are now about eighteen miles from Bloemfontein. The cavalry division in advance the railway six miles south of Bloemfontein. There were 321 men wounded and about 60 or 70 were killed or are missing."

"Col. Umphrey has died of his wounds. Lieut. Pratt, of the Essex regiment was wounded severely. The wounds are as a rule more serious than usual owing to the expanding bullets which are freely used by the Boers."

ROBERTS FOLLOWING RAPIDLY.

Ladysmith, March 13.—Lord Roberts' despatches from Venters Vlei at 5.20 o'clock this morning are as follows: "I directed General French if there was time before dark to seize the railway station at Bloemfontein and thus secure the rolling stock. At midnight I received a report from him that after considerable opposition he had been able to occupy two hills close to the railway station which commands Bloemfontein."

"A brother of President Steyn has been made a prisoner. The telegraphic line leading northward has been cut and the railway broken up."

"I am now starting with the third cavalry brigade, which I called up from the seventh division near Peka on Tuesday, and the mounted infantry to reinforce the cavalry division. The rest of the force will follow as quickly as possible."

GERMANY'S REPLY TO KRUGER.

No Intervention Unless both Parties to the War Desire it.

Berlin, March 13.—It is semi-officially announced that when the Orange Free State and the Transvaal addressed to a number of the larger and smaller states a request for friendly mediation, the German Government replied that it would willingly participate provided the essential condition of such mediation were present, namely, the certainty that both belligerents desired it.

ENDURANCE OF BRITISH TROOPS.

Russian Attaché Writes in Praise of Their Fine Work.

London, March 13.—The Russian military attaché with Lord Roberts has cabled to the Czar that the attack and endurance of the British troops are such as no Russian officer has any conception of.

ABSOLUTE SURRENDER.

Only Terms on Which England Will Listen to Peace Proposals.

EFFORTS TO PROMOTE PEACE.

United States Submits Boer Proposals to Britain, But Does Not Venture on Advice.

New York, March 13.—That the eyes of the world are turned toward the United States as the one power that will at least make an effort to mediate between Great Britain and the South African Republics is evidenced by the many special telegrams to the morning papers.

The Herald's Washington correspondent declares positively that the first step has already been taken by President McKinley. He says "Upon the receipt yesterday of a despatch from Consul Hay containing the Boer appeal, it was immediately communicated to London, and it is anticipated that the British Government, which has been expecting such proposals, will be able to give an immediate answer."

The Administration has been stating that it would decline to use its good offices in the interests of peace unless it has changed its attitude to the extent of laying before the British Government the proposals which United States Consul Hay received from Presidents Kruger and Steyn. It is understood that Mr. Hay reports having attended the conference when Presidents Kruger and Steyn appealed to all the nations to use their good offices in the interests of peace, but it is stated that he received a special communication relative to the proposals that should be made, the Transvaal attempt to retain the independence of the Transvaal could be considered for a moment by the British Government.

COMFORTING TELEGRAMS.

London, March 13.—A number of cablegrams have been received from Mafeking, indicating belief of the speedy relief of the place. The indications are that Col. Plumer was at Ladysmith March 9, and it is only 57 miles thence to Mafeking, definite news should be speedily forthcoming.

KITCHENER AT KIMBERLEY.

Difficulties of Transport Service in Probably the Cause.

London, March 13.—The presence of Lord Kitchener in Kimberley excites much comment in military circles, and is explained in various ways. One reason is that Col. Plumer was at Ladysmith March 9, and it is only 57 miles thence to Mafeking, definite news should be speedily forthcoming.

MCKINLEY WILL YIELD TO SENATE.

The President Feels Compelled to Accept Its Amendments to the Treaty.

Washington, March 13.—The ratification by the Senate of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty as amended by the Committee of Foreign Relations will probably occur, although there is a danger of its rejection by the British Government. Knowing that Lord Pauncefote had advised his Government against the acceptance of the amendment the Administration is apprehensive that this recommendation will be adopted especially in view of the adverse comments upon the new provision published by Lord Salisbury's telegram.

The prompt restoration of order in the poor white district around Peka, where the City Imperial Volunteers have been under fire. Another explanation is the organization of a relief column for Mafeking, and still another is the exception difficulty of the transport service for Lord Roberts' army of 50,000 men. Lord Kitchener is reported to have made extensive changes in the transport service. He is also supplementing the ox and mule teams with a military railway, which is under rapid construction across the veldt. The success of the transport service is of vital importance to the future operation of Lord Roberts' army, and this explains the absence of his chief of staff from headquarters at a critical stage of the campaign.

SALISBURY WILL DECLINE.

He Will Not Accept the Mediation of the U. S.

London, March 13.—The United States Government at the request of President Steyn and President Kruger, has submitted to the British Government proposals for mediation. Lord Salisbury has declined to accept the mediation of the U. S.

FRANCE WON'T PULL THE CHSTNUTS.

And a Wholesome Fear of Burnt Fingers Restrains Russia from it Also.

Paris, March 13.—The Associated Press has secured from a responsible mouthpiece of the French Government the following exposition of France's attitude in the matter of intervention in the Anglo-Transvaal war, which is said to have been solicited by President Kruger:

"We believe it is true the Transvaal has sent a request to the powers for their intervention, though up to this morning President Kruger's message has not reached us. As far as France is concerned, she certainly will not take the initiative in offering England any assistance, nor will Russia, for the dual alliance is naturally working together in this question. We feel that in the present excited state of public feeling in England, and especially as regards ourselves, any step taken by the United States as the next best friend of England would be the best channel through which to appeal for peace. It is believed, however, that the Administration did not commit itself, leaving to Great Britain to determine, without representation on the part of the President, whether it should accept or reject the proposal of the Transvaal in the interest of peace."

Montagu White, in a signed Washington telegram to the World, says: "I have already expressed the desirability of a friendly neutral, preferably the United States mediating in order to bring this deplorable South African tragedy to a peaceful termination. It is absolutely indispensable that a third power should be a party to a settlement in order to give a basis of permanency thereto. There is no much jealousy in conflict with local patriotism, an others has been so much treaty-breaking in the past that South Africa needs more than anything else a lasting peace. There is also the danger of the destruction of Johannesburg, which will involve a loss of $150,000,000, or the entire amount of the British war loan. This I imagine, will be a strategic necessity, as the Boers could not defend it, nor could they allow it to remain as a base for military operations against Pretoria."

offered to the British Government its services as intermediary with the view of bringing about peace in South Africa. Lord Salisbury has not yet replied, but there is little doubt that he will decline the United States good offices. He will do so, however, in terms as cordial and polite as those in which the offer was couched.

IMPORTANT CAPTURE POSSIBLE.

London Critics Think Roberts will Seize Supplies and Prisoners.

London, March 13.—Lord Roberts' actual entry into the Orange Free State capital seems likely to be delayed until to-morrow or late to-day. The occupation, the London critics believe will bring the British important captures of supplies, if not of prisoners. However, the Boers may make a strenuous resistance until Lord Roberts' main army catches up with the cavalry.

Maude Gonne Talks a Lot of Rubbish in Chicago.

Chicago, March 13.—Holding up a tightly clenched fist, the jewels on her fingers flashing in the glare of a lamp, her body swaying as she leaned forward in her chair, Miss Maude Gonne, the "Irish Joan of Arc," claimed Ireland will soon be free. The young woman was addressing a small party of friends and admirers last night at the home of Mrs. Mary Corkey, 285 Canal street, soon after her arrival in Chicago at 9 o'clock p.m. Miss Gonne, on her arrival from Omaha, was met at the Northwestern station by John T. Keating, president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and driven to the home of Mrs. Corkey, where she will be entertained during her brief visit in Chicago. Tonight she will make an address at the Hibernian celebration and pro-Boer meeting at Central Music hall.

Is Not Prepared to Assent to the Independence of Either the Free State or Transvaal.

SANCIMONIOUS APPEAL FROM BOTH PRESIDENTS.

The Belligerents Should Ask Themselves Dispassionately as in the Sight of God's Throne Why They Are Fighting and If the Devastation is Justified.

London, March 13.—A parliamentary paper, containing the telegram sent to the British Government by the Presidents of the South African Republic and the Orange Free State and Great Britain's reply thereto, was issued this afternoon. It first gives the telegram sent by the Presidents to the Marquis of Salisbury, as follows:

"Bloemfontein, March 5.—The blood and tears of thousands who have suffered by this war, and the prospect of all moral and economic ruin wherewith South Africa is threatened, make it necessary for both belligerents to ask themselves dispassionately, and as in the sight of the Throne God, for what they are fighting, and whether the aim of each justifies all this appalling misery, and devastation. With this object, and in view of the assertions of various British statesmen to the effect that this was a war begun and being carried on with the set purpose of undermining Her Majesty's authority in South Africa, and of setting up an administration over all of South Africa, independent of Her Majesty's Government, we consider it our duty to solemnly declare that this war was undertaken solely as a Defensive Measure."

To maintain the threatened independence of the South African Republic, and to secure and maintain the incontestable independence of both republics, and to obtain the assurance that those of Her Majesty's subjects who have taken part with us in this war shall suffer no harm whatever in person or property, on these conditions, built on the past, desirous of seeing peace re-established in South Africa, while, if Her Majesty's Government is determined to destroy the independence of the republics, there is nothing left to us and to our people but to persevere to the end in the course already begun. In spite of the overwhelming pre-eminence of the British Empire, we are confident that God, who lighted the inextinguishable fire of love of freedom in the hearts of our selves and of our fathers,

Will Not Forgive Us.

and will accomplish His work in us and in our descendants. We hesitate to make this declaration earlier to your Excellency, as we feared that as long as the advantage was always on our side, and as long as our forces held defensive positions far within Her Majesty's colonies, such a declaration might hurt the feelings and honor of the British people. But now that the prestige of the British Empire may be considered to be assured by the capture of one of our forces by Her Majesty's troops, and that we have thereby been forced to evacuate other positions which our forces had occupied, this difficulty is over, and we can no longer hesitate to clearly inform you of our intention to persevere to the end, in the whole civilized world, why we are fighting and on what conditions we are ready to restore peace."

Salisbury's Reply.

The Marquis of Salisbury to the Presidents of the South African Republic and Orange Free State—

"Four honors make some observations of a negative character, upon the claims with which these preparations were made. I do not think it necessary to discuss the questions you have raised. But the result of these preparations, carried on with great secrecy, has been that the British Empire has been compelled to which has entailed upon the Empire a costly war and the loss of thousands of precious lives. This great calamity has been the penalty Great Britain has suffered for having of recent years neglected the evidence of the two republics. In view to the use to which the two republics have put the position which was given them and the calamities they have inflicted on the British Empire, Her Majesty's Government can only answer Your Honors' telegram by saying they are not prepared to assent to the independence of either of the South African Republic or the Orange Free State."

"Foreign Office, March 11.—I have the honor to acknowledge your Honors' telegram, dated March 5th, from Bloemfontein, of which the purport is principally to demand that Her Majesty's Government shall recognize the incontestable independence of the South African Republic and Free State 'as sovereign international states' and to offer on those terms to bring the war to a conclusion."

"In the beginning of October last peace existed between Her Majesty and the two Republics under conventions which then were in existence. A discussion had been pending for some months between Her Majesty's Government and the South African Republic, of which the object was to obtain redress for certain very serious grievances under which the British residents in South Africa were suffering. In the course of these negotiations the South African Republic had, to the knowledge of Her Majesty's Government, made considerable amendments, and the latter had, consequently, taken steps to provide corresponding reinforcements of the British garrisons at Cape Town and in Natal.

"No infringement of the rights guaranteed by the conventions had up to that point taken place on the British side. Suddenly, at two days' notice, the South African Republic, after issuing an insulting ultimatum, declared war upon Her Majesty, and the Orange Free State, with whom they had had not even been any discussion, took a similar step. Her Majesty's dominions were immediately invaded by the two republics. Hosts were laid to the route within the British frontier, a large portion of two colonies was overrun, with great destruction of property and life, and the republics claimed to treat the inhabitants of extensive portions of Her Majesty's dominions as in those dominions. In anticipation of these operations, the South African Republic had been accumulating for many years military stores on an enormous scale, which, by their character, could only have been intended for use against Great Britain."

"Your honors make some observations of a negative character, upon the claims with which these preparations were made. I do not think it necessary to discuss the questions you have raised. But the result of these preparations, carried on with great secrecy, has been that the British Empire has been compelled to

BRITISH FLAG IS NOW FLOATING OVER ORANGE FREE STATE CAPITAL!

GEN. ROBERTS GIVEN THE KEYS OF BLOEMFONTEIN

The Formal Surrender of Free State Capital by The Mayor and Other Officials.

PRESIDENT STEYN AND FIGHTING BURGHERS FLEE.

Kruger Says the British Will Never Reach Pretoria, and the Boers Will Only Cease Fighting With Death—Roberts Has Headquarters at President's House.

London, March 14.—The following is the text of Lord Roberts' despatch to the War Office announcing the occupation of Bloemfontein—Bloemfontein, Tuesday, March 13, 8 p. m.—By the help of God and by the bravery of Her Majesty's soldiers, the troops under my command have taken possession of Bloemfontein. The British flag is now flying over the Presidency evacuated last evening. Mr. Steyn, late President of the Orange Free State; Mr. Prinsloo, member of that late executive Government, the Mayor, the Secretary to late Government, the Landrost and other officials met me with the keys of the public offices. The enemy have withdrawn from the neighborhood and all seems quiet. The inhabitants of Bloemfontein gave the troops a cordial welcome.

The above despatch, though dated Tuesday, was not received at the War Office until 7.30 p.m. Wednesday. It was made public a few minutes before nine o'clock. The delay is attributed to the field telegraph not being connected with Bloemfontein on Tuesday evening. Extra papers are already out on the streets and night crowds of London are singing patriotic songs and engaging in demonstrations.

Pretoria, Monday, March 13.—Via London, Tuesday, March 13. Lord Salisbury's reply to President Kruger and Steyn causes bitter disappointment, and State Secretary Beit says it means that the war will have to be fought to the bitter end.

Cape Town, March 14.—The British troops under Lord Methuen have returned to Okimberly from the occupation of Bloemfontein, Orange Free State. Guns and 75,000 rounds of ammunition were seized and a strong garrison was left to guard the town. Six Boers were captured there on a charge of treason. Nearly all the residents were wearing mourning as the British command lost 300 men at the battle of Belmont.

London, March 15.—A despatch to the Daily Chronicle from Bloemfontein, dated Tuesday evening, March 13, says: "Bloemfontein surrendered at 10 o'clock. It was occupied at noon. President Steyn with a majority of the fighting burghers has fled northward. Gen. French was within five miles of the place Monday afternoon. He sent a summons into the town threatening to bombard unless it surrendered by four o'clock Tuesday. A white flag was hoisted Tuesday morning and a deputation of the town council with Mayor Kellner, came out to meet Lord Roberts at Spitzkop, five miles south of the town, making a formal surrender of the place.

Lord Roberts made a state entry at noon. He received a tremendous ovation. After visiting the public buildings he went to the official residence of the president, followed by a cheering crowd who waved a British flag and sang the British national anthem. They were now in a condition of free and unfettered sentiment.

On Monday afternoon previous to the surrender, there had been a little sniping and shelling but the enemy then retired.

Lord Roberts has his headquarters at the President's house and there are many of the British wounded in the hospital.

The railway has not been injured. New York, March 14.—The Evening Journal prints the following from President Kruger: "Pretoria, March 14.—8 p.m., via London, March 14.—10 a.m.—The burghers will only cease fighting with death. Our forces are retreating in good order to our first line of defense on our own soil. The hotel campaign was longer in our favor than we expected. The British will never reach Pretoria. The burghers, Steyn, Joubert and myself as well as all the others are united. There are no differences. God help us. (Signed) KRUGER."

Dublin, March 14.—Mr. William Redmond announces that he will resign his seat in the council as a result of the passage of the resolution to present an address of welcome to the Queen.

MINES ARE NOT FLOODED.—A Despatch Contradicts Reports of Damage to Johannesburg Mines.

London, March 14.—A private despatch from Johannesburg has been received in London, dated Saturday, March 10, contradicting the reports that the mines there are flooded and the machinery broken, and asserting that all is well.

TO RELIEVE MAFKING.—Colonel Plummer Now Within Forty Miles of That Place.

Cape Town, March 14.—Colonel Plummer is now within forty miles of Mafeking. Colonel Plummer has already dispersed several Boer police posts and is actively pushing his advance southward.

GATACRE SECURES BRIDGE.—The General Secures Possession of Wagon Bridge, Orange River.

London, March 14.—The report that Gen. Gatacre has secured possession of the Wagon bridge over the Orange River, after a hot artillery fire, is confirmed, and as the advance guard, while artillery, has been strongly reinforced an easy entrance into the Free State of Bechuanaland has been provided for. Gen. Gatacre is having continuous gun practice with the enemy's rear guard at Norval's Point, and Gen. Warren's division has also embarked on transports either for East London or for Port Elizabeth.

THEY KILLED THE WOUNDED.—Evidence to Prove that Boers Killed the Wounded at Kimberley.

London, March 14.—The Cape Times claims to have secured evidence to prove that British wounded at Kimberley were killed by Boers. Col. Scott-Turner among others.

According to the Cape Times, when, on the morning after the fight, an ambulance went out under a flag of truce to bring in the wounded it found no wounded, but only twenty-one bodies which had been laid out by the Boers, only a few of whom had not been riddled through in two instances there was positive evidence of recently inflicted wounds. The British doctors were not permitted to approach, but Capt. Henderson, of the Kimberley Light Horse, who speaks Dutch, asked Commandant DeBoer why the bodies had so many wounds. DeBoer replied that the men were so badly hurt that it was impossible to see in the falling light whether a man was dead or alive and because he was wounded, so he gave orders that his men were to keep up a continuous fire on all allies in order to prevent the position being rushed.

KITCHENER AT KIMBERLEY.—Difficulties of Transport Service in Probably the Cause.

London, March 14.—The presence of Lord Kitchener at Kimberley excites much comment in military circles, and is explained in various ways. One reason assigned for it is the necessity for the prompt restoration of order in the poor white district around Prieska, where the City Imperial Volunteers have been under fire. Another explanation is the organization of a relief column for Mafeking, and still another is the exception difficulty of the transport service for Lord Roberts' army of 50,000 men. Lord Kitchener is reported to have made extensive changes in the transport service. He is also supplementing the ox and mule teams with military railways, which is under rapid construction across the veldt. The success of the transport service is of vital importance to the future operations of Lord Roberts' army, and this explains the absence of his chief of staff from headquarters at a critical stage of the campaign.

ROMANUCOFF AT MAFKING.—Lady Sarah Wilson Describes Several Attacks by the Boers.

London, March 14.—Lady Sarah Wilson writes the London Daily Mail from Mafeking, under date of March 6, by native runner to London, March 6, as follows:

THE RUSSIAN BEAR'S INTENTIONS

Are Anticipated by Great Britain, the United States, and Germany, Who Despatch War Vessels.

New York, March 14.—The Journal and Advertiser says to-day that both England and the United States will send warships to Chinese waters.

"The British China fleet is being strengthened," says a London cable to this paper. "The Government is taking precautions to meet Russia in the far east. The cruiser Argonaut has been ordered in commission and despatched immediately to Chinese waters and the terrible has been ordered to proceed to the same from Barbans. These are the finest and most powerful cruisers in the navy."

A special from Washington reads: "The German Ambassador, Dr. Von Holleben, had a long conference with acting Secretary of State Hill, in which the latter was presumably informed that a demonstration in China might be expected from Russia shortly."

"On Saturday, March 3, the three gunboats of the Chinese squadron in the Yellow Sea, about a mile from the town for three hours, killing one and wounding two colonials."

"On Monday, March 5, they made a determined attack, owing to a misunderstanding, the colonials evacuated the fort, most trench. This the Boers occupied, but reserves were called up and the trench was recaptured with a rush."

"We had no casualties."

"The Boers continue very active, and a large Col. Baden-Powell and the garrison very heavily to prevent them from encroaching on our lines. Since Commandant Symman returned from the north the siege has been prosecuted with renewed vigor."

THE KEYNOTE OF THE EMPIRE'S SONG.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Speech Struck a Responsive Chord in Great Britain.

London, March 14.—The contents bill of the afternoon papers in the streets make a show of heavy lines, such as "Impassioned speech by Canadian Premier and Canadian loyalty demonstrated." The speech of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is much discussed. Even the few who oppose the British government's policy admit this speech is a weighty justification for the war.

Moreover, considered as perhaps an unwitting sequel of George Wyndham's speech in Parliament here on Monday, Sir Wilfrid Laurier's pronouncement may, it is suggested, be the forerunner in the course of time, of momentous changes in the administration of the Empire. It is felt especially that the speech cannot fail to have a marked effect upon the opinion of the United States, which the British Ministers are watching with somewhat anxious care just now.

Sir Wilfrid's reference to compulsion in regard to future auxiliary contributions from the colonies exactly represents the feelings of the British Ministry. Lord Salisbury and his colleagues are, above all things, anxious not to lead the colonies along the line of Imperial co-operation at a quicker pace than they themselves desire.

Light on American Politics.—The Globe Says an Alliance with the U.S. is Impossible.

London, March 14.—Regarding the United States offer of mediation, which Lord Salisbury declined, the Globe says "The incident is of interest only in the light it throws on American politics."

ONE MORE BLOW AT POOR FINLAND.

No High Finnish Officer to be Allowed Hereafter at the Capital of Russia.

Berlin, March 14.—The Cologne Gazette announces that the Czar has abolished the rule which provided that district governors of Finland should take a special oath upon entering the Russian State service. This oath was framed on the basis of Finland's status as a Grand Duchy, and its abolition has crushingly impressed the Finns. At the same time notice was given that the powers of local governors and the Senate would be considerably curtailed. Lieut. General Procopie, Assistant Minister of State for Finland at St. Petersburg, has resigned, and the post has been abolished. Hereafter, no high Finnish officer will directly represent the interests of Finland at the Court of St. Petersburg.

Republicans and Democrats alike are always prepared to risk the friendship of England in the party game. We may preserve amicable relations with the United States, and it is to be hoped we shall always do so, but an alliance is impossible. We were brought up to the verge of war four years ago for the sake of Mr. Cleveland's re-election and never have we been brought up to the verge of war again for the sake of Mr. Cleveland's re-election.

FREE STATES MISTRUSTED.—They Will Surrender Rather Than See Bloemfontein Shelled.

Venter's View, March 12.—The news of the Boer defeat of the 7th last, was with-held from the Boers until last week ago.

ADVANCING ON MAFKING.—Colonel Plummer is now Sixty Miles Away from Baden-Powell.

Buluwayo, March 14.—Colonel Plummer occupied Lobatse on Tuesday, March 5, without opposition, a small party of Boers retreating. The railway line was torn up, and the bridge damaged, but the repairs will not take long, since they are already affected to within two miles of Lobatse. It is believed that only a single bridge has been destroyed southward, and that the railway is intact to within five miles of Mafeking.

Col. Plummer has warned the Boers at Lobatse that he will not be responsible for the natives attack, then while they persist in raiding Linchwe's country. Linchwe has already captured six Boer wagons, 100 horses and killed several of the enemy.

BRABANT AT ALLWAL NORTH.

Stormberg Junction, March 14.—By a forced march the Boers were surprised and Allwal North was occupied by Brabant on Sunday. Severe fighting followed across the river, resulting in the occupation by the British of a tenable position. The enemy is still holding some hills four miles beyond the river, but their larger was retreating after heavy shelling. The British captured several prisoners and a wagon load of ammunition. The enemy shelled the bridge freely. British casualties were about 20. The treatment of the English in Allwal North was far from generous. Ladies were seized and taken to the Boer camp. The Boer bombardment is just beginning again.

BOERS WILL CARRY ON WAR TO THE BITTER END

Salisbury's Unbending Reply Kindles Courage of Desperation in Hearts of Boers.

FREE STATE CAPITAL REMOVED TO KROONSTAD.

A Despatch From Cape Town Says Cronje Sails for the Island of St. Helena on March 15th—London Newspapers Support Salisbury's Firm Attitude.

London, March 14.—According to the despatch of President Kruger and Steyn the Boers intend to carry on the war to the bitter end. In a telegram which Lord Salisbury answered with such meanness they say, "If Her Majesty's Government is determined to destroy the independence of the republic there is nothing left to us but to persevere to the end in the course already begun."

In other words the Boers have announced that if Great Britain intends to annex the republic they will fight to the end. Lord Salisbury in his reply distinctly stated that such was the intention of Her Majesty's Government. Therefore the Boers will continue the war and the only when at the last extremity, the Boers will be forced to accept a deputation to Europe with the object of interesting the powers to the point of intervention is also another indication that though recognizing the in-avoidable end of the conflict, they desire to take the means of desperate men to avert it. Neither is the suspicion wanting that President Kruger's shrewdness has led him to recognize that the declaration of a policy of conquest by England would render the war a war of the people and the defence of their homes and hearths against the invader. The continuation of the war is therefore not yet in sight.

BOER CAPITAL REMOVED.—Pretoria, March 13.—A despatch from Bloemfontein says that in view of the military situation the seat of the Government may be removed to Kroonstad.

Kroonstad is 120 miles north of Bloemfontein and on the Bloemfontein-Pretoria line. It is fifty miles north of Winburg and 40 miles north of the Vaal and Zand Rivers, a strong defensive position which the Boers are likely to take up after the occupation of Bloemfontein. This line would in fact act as a bulwark for the protection of the city. From Kroonstad there is a network of ready retreat over the Vaal to Eersig by railway.

CRONJE FOR ST. HELENA.—Report from Cape Town Says that He Sails on March 15.

London, March 14.—Everything is quiet in Natal, while from Herchel comes the statement that the total collapse of the insurgent colonists is imminent.

Gen. Cronje, according to a Cape Town special, sails for St. Helena on March 15, accompanied by all the Boer dignitaries.

Mr. Cecil Rhodes is suffering from catarrh of the stomach and is unable to sail for England.

Lord Salisbury's reply to the Boer President's peace overtures.

THE ENGLISH NEWSPAPERS.—They Support Lord Salisbury With Great Unanimity.

London, March 14.—The Standard, a Ministerial organ says: "As a declaration of the British policy, Lord Salisbury's reply to the President's peace overtures is a masterpiece of the general opinion of Great Britain and the Empire. It is hard to treat with an unscrupulous appeal which ignores the palpable realities of the situation. As neither of the Presidents is supposed to be deficient in intelligence, the only explanation possible is that they are less concerned to persuade the British Government than to supply some sort of specious material for the propaganda conducted in their behalf in neutral States. But the appeal is a sheer waste of labor. No responsible statesman can pretend that there is in the President's telegram the slightest basis for negotiation or that it could be regarded as a preliminary to overtures of peace. For intervention or mediation by any outside State there is no room."

For Foreign Consumption.—The Morning Post declares that the President's proposals were manufactured by Lord Salisbury's outspoken reply, it could hardly be considered less than an insult for any power to intervene in behalf of a nation which has endeavored to raise the sympathy of Europe by the publication of the false.

The Daily Chronicle says that the President's worse enemies could not have anticipated the full extent of their demands or the audacity of the telegram in which they are framed. When President Kruger reads the correspondence he will feel thankful that he did not compromise himself with a case that is now resolved into the publication of the false. The Boer report of a battle.

Think We are Fools.—The Daily News says: "The War may have convinced President Kruger that the British are not cowards after all, but, apparently, if his proposals are serious, it has left him with the impression that we are fools. Unhappily there is little sign in the despatch of any real desire for peace. If it is a bid for foreign intervention we do not believe for a moment that it will be successful."

The Daily Telegraph says: "Such a preposterous despatch takes one's breath away; yet Lord Salisbury with that infinite patience and endurance which characterizes our attitude towards the republic, has felt constrained to make a formal reply. It is the only possible response to the insolent demands of the two men who led the Republic to their destruction. Boers are impudant."

The Times interprets the President's despatch as intended to lay the foundation for applications for intervention.

"This, it says, 'may be inferred, not only from the curious mixture of subterfuge, cynicism and impudence in the despatch itself, but also from the premonition with which its repudiation was followed by the despatch of a peace deputation to Europe. The deputation is starting on a bootless errand.'"

London, March 13.—The war loan bill passed its second reading in the House of Commons to-day by a vote of 268 to 21. The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that the war loan had been over-subscribed ten times, the applications numbering 18,000.

'AN APPEAL TO VICTORIA.—Of Russia Intercedes Her Majesty to Make Peace.

Chicago, March 14.—The Record publishes the following from St. Petersburg:—

On the highest authority your correspondent learns that his Majesty the Czar has recently despatched by special courier, a private autograph letter to Queen Victoria, beseeching her Majesty to make peace with the Boers. This action, the same informant declares, is taken by pre-arrangement with Kaiser Wilhelm, of Germany, who has also addressed to his grandfather an autograph message of the same tenor.

In informed circles here there is no suspicion that Russia will commit itself to any official interference in the Boer's behalf. The powers do not take kindly to resolve, categorized intervention or mediation. Great Britain will have a free hand without molestation to finish the South African war as it may choose, notwithstanding the pity felt for the Boers by the Czar, the Imperial family and Russians generally. It is generally feared, however, that England will end by wallowing up the Transvaal and the Orange Free State.

Could Not Have the Boers.—It is doubted here if the Boers could be saved by any humane and serious intervention by the United States. The Czar himself, much as he admires the United States, is understood to believe that Great Britain would never receive any American proposals looking for peace, and it is generally thought that such proposals would be foredoomed to failure unless the great European powers backed them up.

Ministers and courtiers here believe that Queen Victoria in the weakness of old age has been misled by the Colonial Secretary's gag and that she will be found little inclined to make peace, especially now, when her people are joyful, hopeful and even proud in consequence of Gen. Cronje's fatal surrender.

In Russian court, military and civil circles as well as among the best informed journalists, war between Great Britain and France in the near future is regarded as unavoidable.

BOER REPORT OF A BATTLE.—Commandant Delany Praises Himself and His Men as Heroes.

Pretoria, March 12.—Commandant Delany's report of the fight at Drakenstein on Saturday says: "The British were estimated to number 4,000 men. Their first assault was repulsed. The second assault was made on the hills to the left of our position. These hills were of great strategic importance. Appreciating this, I and three hundred men defended the position from 9 o'clock in the morning until sundown. The burghers fought like heroes and three times repulsed masses of the British, who kept relieving their tired men. Every attempt to storm was defeated. At sundown there was not fifty yards between us. The British lost heavily. We accurate returns of our losses are available."

ORGANIZATION.—The Company was organized in 1897, and has since carried on its business without interruption. It had then a daily output of fifteen tons of dry pulp; later on the capacity of the mill was increased to thirty tons of dry pulp daily. Last spring, owing to the ready sale of the pulp, the directors considered it advisable to further increase the production by adding two more grinders and a fine-grinder mill, with a capacity of fourteen thousand tons per annum. The Company paid a half yearly dividend at the rate of six per cent. per annum, the surplus profits over the dividend being spent on improvements and betterments.

There has never been a single share of the Capital of the Company on the market, and the new capital was entirely taken up by the original shareholders. PULP OUTPUT.—The Company has to complete and equip another mill of greater capacity than the present one at a site only eight hundred feet distant. The new mill will have a capacity of twenty-eight thousand tons of pulp per annum, equivalent to the combined output of the two mills forty-two thousand tons of dry pulp per annum. MILL SITE.—The mill is situated on the Chicoutimi River, near where it discharges into the Saguenay, and within the limits of the Town of Chicoutimi, which town is the terminus of the Quebec and Lake St. John railway, and the head of navigation. The mill is situated on the Saguenay River, and the head of navigation. The mill is situated on the Saguenay River, and the head of navigation.

WATER POWER.—The water power developed for power requirements is estimated at eight thousand horse power. The mill is situated on the Saguenay River, and the head of navigation. The mill is situated on the Saguenay River, and the head of navigation. The mill is situated on the Saguenay River, and the head of navigation. The mill is situated on the Saguenay River, and the head of navigation.

SHIPPING FACILITIES.—The Quebec and Lake St. John Railway runs close to the mill site, and from the main line a switch runs to the mill itself. In the mill are three large wharves, which are used for loading and unloading of pulp, and the receiving of the wood for manufacturing very convenient and cheap. An elevated cable track leads from the mill to the harbour wharf on the Saguenay River, where it is loaded on barges for re-loading on steamships, which come within four miles of the mill, on the Saguenay, at a point where there is a splendid harbour for steamships of any size.

WOOD.—The Company owns 25,000 acres of timber limits, well covered principally with Black Spruce and some White and Gray Spruce. The Black Spruce is especially good for ground wood pulp, and turns out one hundred and fifty pounds of dry pulp per cord, whereas any other spruce, besides this great quantity of the wood required for years to come can be had from the farmers in the neighbourhood. The Company has at present stored for winter use one hundred and fifty-three thousand logs twelve feet long.

PRESSURE MILL.—The present plant employs one hundred and fifty men night and day, the new plant added will employ four hundred and fifty men.

PILE PRODUCTION.—In the yard are three large hydraulic cranes giving a constant pressure of forty-five pounds. There are always one thousand feet of logs ready for use in case of necessity.

LIGHT AND HEAT.—The mill is lighted throughout by electricity generated on the premises. Heat for the buildings is also generated from the waste heat of the pulp.

FUEL TRADE.—The Company has an assured market in England and France for the whole of its output. The output for this year (1905) is all sold. Orders have already been received from two firms in England for the whole product for 1906.

DEBTORS TO CHANCE.

BY ELIZABETH PHILIP TRAIN.

It was a famous "scoop." Jean Merriam sat like a graven image while the eugenic of excitement chased up and down her spine at the thought of what this magnificent item would mean to her in the way of copy. She scarcely dared breathe for fear of provoking caution and consequently silence in her neighbors. She was a newspaper woman, 35 years old, who had been thrown on her own resources at 20, and worked like a horse ever since, making hardly any more perceptible headway in her profession than the poor beast at his dull task. The ranks are so overcrowded, and if there is indeed room at the top, one needs an occasional boost to get there.

She had been in a state of almost complete discouragement when she took her seat in the library at night, a couple of gaudily-dressed young women, who apparently saw nothing in her to interest them. Amusements were recently as scarce as white blackbirds and she had not displayed her usual skill in interviewing. It had not been necessary for the chief to hint this to her, as he had done. She knew herself when her tact and ingenuity were at a low ebb, and further more, she was quite well aware of what the cause of the falling off was.

If only Rosalie Kennel had not moved into the same lodging-house with her! Then some other person would have come in the morning in response to her cry for help when her school term had expired on that memorable day and set fire to her gown, or else—well, or else by now, she should have settled for herself the Great Perseus. The alternative, she concluded with a sigh, which, might have been preferable to the event that had played havoc with her work, engaging the interest she should have brought to it, in behalf of a man who seemed to have made of his life even a poorer success than she had made of hers.

How could she concentrate her attention upon purely indifferent and impermanent subjects when every throw of her brain and heart was being kept occupied by an engrossing love, sympathy, appreciation for a single individual with whom poor affairs editors and subscribers had no concern? How could she spare from that haunting dread of a possibly violent and voluntary termination of Kennel's increasing discouragement and despondency, which had of late been consuming her, even a pretence of interest in outside matters?

Engaged in the same profession, the two had much in common. Over how many a cup of tea in her shabby little apartment had they discussed in union over the remorseless requirements of editors, and commiserated each other upon their common lack of that keen scent for news which is of such consequence to the reporter.

And now, quite by accident, she had come upon an exceptional bit of intelligence which would be a "best" of the biggest sort, and for which any paper in New York would pay the price of a year's living. Nay, more, having once glimpsed such a story, her value to the office would be another matter.

She would be recognized as a reporter of enterprise and consequence and advanced accordingly. Exclusive information such as this she had gained was a matter of such price that she could in imagination see the black headlines glaring forth from the front page of the Universe.

Chance had seated her beside two make-up engaged in the service of Henry W. Vanderlip, whose daughter Eugenie was at that time the greatest heiress in New York—one of the greatest in the world. Both women were French, one the personal attendant of Miss Vanderlip, speaking a foreign tongue, they probably deemed it safe to discuss privately private matters pertaining to their employers, which would have only been discovered surreptitiously by them.

Indeed, the great fact disclosed by the one to the other, under pledge of professional secrecy and amplified by many details, that of Eugenie Vanderlip's recently consummated betrothal to the marquis of Avonville, had already been gleaned by personal observation of the indiscreet. Not the slightest hint of the engagement had as yet publicly transpired. According to the maid, it was not to be disclosed until the arrival of the marquis in New York, some two or three weeks hence. It was the wish of the family to spring the announcement upon an unexpected society. It became the immediate intention of Jean Merriam to furnish the surprise.

her summons indicated the fact of no previous warning, she softly pushed open the door and entered, with the intention of leaving a note of invitation upon the mantle.

But the room was not unattended. A man standing before an empty fireplace turned a quick white face upon her at the sound of the opening door. Something in his upraised hand flashed with the dull glitter of metal as he dropped his arm, and a heavy thud as of a weighty object striking the hearth beneath the grate fell continuously on her ears, as the arm made a quick backward movement.

For an instant the room again before her, a deadly nausea turned her sick and faint, her limbs nearly gave way beneath her. Then she smiled and went forward nonchalantly, with a gay laugh.

"You didn't hear me knock, I suppose," she said, in a wonderfully steady voice. "Well, I did, all the same. Perhaps it wasn't very loud—I really don't know. You see I'm so excited I hardly know what I'm about. I've got such an awfully good thing for you—an out and out scoop. What do you think? Eugenie Vanderlip is engaged to the marquis of Avonville! Fact, I assure you, and the best part of it is that out a living soul on the continent outside the family knows of it, but just you and I. Sit down, sit down, my friend, and scribble. I'll give you all the data as you go along—that is, all I've got, and it's considerable.

She got him finally into the spirit of the thing and seated at the table with a blotting tag before him and a pen in his hand. Her excitement and volubility had bewitched him. Although his muscles twitched and his hand shook, his color had grown more natural and he appeared to follow her with interest. His eyes were no longer the hunted look of a desperate man. They had more the appearance of sanity. He appeared to be upon the point of taking down her dictation when he paused and turned a suspicious gaze upon her.

"Why?" he asked doubtfully, like one who has been proffered something for which he has had an almost insane craving and yet distrusts his right to accept it. "Why do you give me this find, Miss Merriam? It is in your line; why don't you use it yourself?"

The girl drew in her breath as one does when contemplating a desperate plunge. Mortal diseases demand powerful remedies. Through her face was crimsoned her eyes rested steadily on his. "Because," said she, in a brave full tone, "I love a man with all my heart, and I cannot bring myself to writing publicly of the possible love of another woman."

Kennel dropped his pen, threw out his hand and caught her.

"You knew I was about to chuck it?" he asked, with a look toward the hearth. Her strong fingers twined themselves about his.

"I'm glad you did chuck it," she replied.

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike.
Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absent-minded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shelved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems:
Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?
Why is a man absent-minded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length.
The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

These messages are conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in communities, the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as man generally is an animal who usually refuses to live the life opened out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forsooth by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopuslike brain cell is a living little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is the life laid down by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now, the object of this "strike" is simply to avoid overwork, for each tiny cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure
this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in these patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupefied, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now cease working, and the man sleeps like one dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken,
the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Geniuses are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and, singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England for example, Cromwell was a hypocondriac and had visions, Dean Swift inherited insanity and was himself not a little mad, Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley," Charles Lamb went crazy, Johnson was another hypocondriac, Coleridge was a morbid maniac, Milton was of a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (modern ideas of madness are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity as depicted or, to phrase it more softly, induced disturbance of the mental equilibrium.

The remaining problem is absent-mindedness. This is produced by a temporary disjunction of certain groups of cells. A man becomes so absorbed in his study of some particular subject and lends his whole mind to thought that the hard thinking disorganizes the groups of cells employed in the process of reflection, their tentacles being turned all one way, to the detriment of mental action generally, and so the man with the tentacles of his brain cells turned in one direction gazes along the streets lost to all observation or mental inception and does all manner of queer things because he is not conscious of what he is doing.

extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold, the laying bare the crust of this haunted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and besides to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advances of the Dutch and their in turn resisting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony.
Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctively Dutch architecture still remain, but faded in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a historical sketch of incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr.
Wymble Flemming, an Afrikaner whose authority upon South African matters is world-wide acknowledged.
This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having travelled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of interest, including more of the important scenes of battle and graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.
Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world;
a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals lend an air of peace and tranquillity, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.
Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred million of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uit-landers" whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

This great work is published in narrow form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times.

another page of this issue.

GEN. LORD METHUEN PRAISES THE ENEMY

The General Has Never Served in a War Where There Was Less Vindicative Feeling.

GEN. GATACRE OCCUPIED BETHUL YESTERDAY.

Col. Pole-Garew With Two Thousand Men Has Gone to Join Hands With Clements and Gatacre—Mr. Wessels Has Gone to Solicit Sympathy.

Cape Town, March 15. Lord Methuen, speaking at the town hall, Kimberley to-day said: "Although some of the enemy were guilty of disgraceful tricks we must remember that their army is not organized with the same discipline as our own. I never wish to meet a braver general than Cronje and have never served in a war where there was less vindictive feeling between the two armies than in this one."

London, March 15. The War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts:

Bloemfontein, March 15.—5.55 p.m. General Gatacre crossed the Orange River and occupied Bethul this morning.

Col. Pole-Garew with two thousand men of the guards brigade, two guns and a small body of mounted infantry left here in three trains this morning to join hands with General Gatacre and General Clements. He had passed Bethul at 4.40 p.m. with out meeting opposition, having been able to supply from his troops engine drivers, firemen, fitters, moulders, smiths, carpenters, etc.

London, March 15. The Standard has the following despatch from Bloemfontein dated Thursday March 15:

The civil authorities here definitely made up their mind to surrender on Monday. A stormy meeting was held, presided over by Mr. Steyn, whom Mr. Fraser denounced as a coward, charging him with a want of enough moral courage to accept the situation. The late President, was however, not to be persuaded and when the meeting broke up he left for the north. The occupation was extremely orderly and well managed. The spectacle was most impressive when the sixth division marched through in grand style, notwithstanding, that, like the rest of the army, it had covered forty miles in twenty-seven hours. Numbers of the burghers are surrendering their arms, many have fled to their homes. Others are trekking to the east or to the north with their cattle and goods. During the last few days the inhabitants of Bloemfontein had been in deadly fear of the violence of the Transvaal, and consequently the city resembled rather a beleaguered town, than a captured town. Mr. Wessels, President of the Raad has gone to England to solicit public sympathy and to plead for the independence of the Free State.

London, March 15.—A. M. Events are moving in the South African campaign in a speedy and satisfactory manner both from the military and political points of view. It could hardly have been expected by the most sanguine that they would take a turn so favorable. It appears that when Major Weston cut the railway north of Bloemfontein he thereby intercepted Gen. Joubert who far from having retired from the campaign was then coming northward with 2000 men presumably to superintend the defence. Elaborate defence works three miles long had been prepared outside the town. The Boers left no wounded in the trench on in Bloemfontein.

TO FIRM UP THE BOERS.
Salisbury's Uncompromising Reply will be Used to Urge Resistance.
Chicago, March 15.—The Record has the following cable from London:—Little doubt is entertained, except by the ultra-optimists, that President Kruger and Steyn will use Lord Salisbury's uncompromising reply to fire the Boer heart against the alleged "oppression" with the result of greatly stiffening the campaign. The burghers are likely to be told that now that they see their liberties are at stake, and they must preserve their country against the invaders or accept the ruin of British dominion. It cannot be doubted that these appeals will sink deeply into the minds of the Boers of both republics and will stir them to extraordinary endeavor.

It is generally expected that Lord Roberts, before he hauls down the Union Jack at Johannesburg and Pretoria, will be compelled to fight more savage battles than any in which he has yet been engaged.

PEACE DELEGATION SAILS.
Messrs. Fischer and Wolmarans Have Left for Europe.
London, March 15.—Mr. Fischer, Orange Free State Secretary and Mr. Wolmarans, of the Transvaal Executive Council, sailed for Europe to-day by the German steamer Kaiser, as a deputation to obtain European intervention. The constitution of the Boer peace deputation is little short of an insult to Great Britain and the Uitlanders. Fischer is, next to President Kruger, the most responsible for the war. Wolmarans is one of the most reactionary Krugers.

HE DID IT IN A MONTH.
Great Things Accomplished by Roberts Since February 9.
London, March 15.—The first half of the campaign is over. Lord Roberts arrived at Maseru River on February 9. He entered Bloemfontein on March 15. Thus, in a little over a month, he has effected the raising of the Union Jack at Bloemfontein, the capture of General Cronje's forces, and the holding of the British flag in the capital of the Free State. All this has been accomplished in a comparatively trifling loss. It is small wonder that he is in the hero of the hour in England. All the newspapers eulogize him and congratulate the country. They talk of the Free State as having passed out of existence and as being now one of the shadows of history.

IN A STRONG POSITION.
Boers Have Been Located in Biggarsburg Range.
Lady Smith, March 15.—The Boers have been located in several strong positions near the junction of the Drakensberg and the Biggarsburg ranges. They have heavy guns in position on Pekaarskop, at Bladskop, and in the Impati Mountains, as well as at Olifants Farm, near Camdeboo Pass. General Hunter now commands a division. Both men and horses of the first column have completely recovered, and are now in the pink of condition. The reconstruction of the railway from Lady Smith to Dundee is progressing rapidly.

GENEROUS CONTRIBUTION.
New York Gentlemen Send One Thousand Dollars to the Patriotic Fund.
Ottawa, March 15.—Dr. Seward Webb, of New York, is forwarding $1000 as a contribution from himself and Mrs. Webb to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, stating that both Mrs. Webb and he, like very many Americans, admire the bravery and loyalty of the Canadian troops, and says that they are sure that there are very many hearts in the United States that beat in sympathy for England and her colonies, and express their best wishes for English and Canadian success, and a speedy termination of the war.

LEISTERS LEAVE HALIFAX.
March 15th the Departure of Their Departure for England.
Halifax, N.S., March 15.—The Leisters Regiment are under orders to sail for England from this harbor on March 15th by the Dominion line steamer Vancouver. When the Leisters march out of the harbor the Canadian militia enrolled for one year will march in.

IN PEACE PREPARE FOR WAR.
That Seems to be the Present Tendency of Affairs in France.
Paris, March 15.—The Journal des Debats says:—"Let France learn that the best way to preserve peace is to prepare for war. The stronger our colonial defence, the less likely is England to attack us. There are plenty of English jingoes who would welcome war with France."

La Liberté says that the statements made in the London press of alleged French military plans are fantastic, and evidently written by some one unfamiliar with French army matters, who consulted some old military almanac. The officer said to be at the head of the army to invade England has long since been retired.

CANADIANS MAKE A VALUABLE SEIZURE.

Capture Enemy's Locomotives at Bloemfontein and Win the Appreciation of Lord Roberts.

Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, March 15.—The Canadian troops, together with the other sections of the North Division of Lord Roberts' army, are encamped to-day at Launberg, four miles south of the city of Bloemfontein. The remainder of the entire British army at this point encamped on the town, while Lord Roberts himself, with a portion of his headquarters staff, occupies the house lately the residence of President Steyn, in Bloemfontein.

The British troops made their entry into Bloemfontein yesterday morning. The cavalry, under Gen. French, had first seized the railway stations and a number of the houses on the outskirts, thus effectually surrounding the town. No serious resistance was offered by the Boers, and the landroost and other officials came out to meet the British, bearing flags of truce and tendering to Lord Roberts the keys of the town.

The Free Staters seem quite resigned, and even appeared to be relieved that, it was the British who had entered the town.

The capture of the locomotives by the Canadians was, therefore, a considerable feat, and has received the appreciative recognition of the General Commanding.

Our next move is not known, but we expect to start northward, on the march towards Pretoria, without delay. The rapidly with which things have moved since Lord Roberts took command leads to the assurance that no time will be wasted here.

load of troops and horses arrived this morning at 2.30, second train load arrived at 3.15 and the third at 5.30. Each train consisted of 22 cars, and was drawn by two engines. The journey down from Montreal was very pleasant and though the rate of travel was necessarily slow the ovations at the principal stations relieved the trip of all tediousness. The reception the troops got at Bloemfontein is a sample of the others. The Mayor and city authorities met the officers and men at the depot and presented Lieut.-Col. Steele with an illuminated address and valuable silken flag. The gift, which is a very valuable and appropriate one, was graciously accepted and suitably acknowledged.

WILL FIGHT TO THE END.
Indignation Cause in Pretoria by Salisbury.
Pretoria, March 15.—Lord Salisbury's reply has been received and a Boer refutation of the British contention is under consideration. It will deny that any annexation has been made, and it will declare that any occupation of British territory was merely strategic. It will express the determination of the two Republics to fight to the end.

MILITARY GOVERNOR.
Major-General Pettman will act as Such at Bloemfontein.
London, March 15.—A despatch to the Daily Mail from Bloemfontein says:—"Major-General Pettman has been appointed military Governor of Bloemfontein. Lord Roberts and his staff have ridden through the town and been everywhere cheered. The British National Anthem is enthusiastically sung by the population. The shops are gladly opening, and there is general rejoicing."

WARREN'S DIVISION RETURNS.
It is Disembarked and Sent Back to Northern Natal.
London, March 15.—The Central News' correspondent at Durban, dated his despatch March 14, afternoon, made the surprising statement that General Warren's division, which had

South African dominion will kindly with a like devotion to the British flag."

The Standard, another Government organ, says that the war has shown us that the colonies have won the strongest claim to the privileges of the Empire, by volunteering to assume its burdens. When such words as those which the Canadian House of Commons applauded to the echo were spoken, more than ever we were convinced that the Imperial Government have no option but to carry the operations in South Africa to a definite and final settlement.

public to fight to the finish. Lord Salisbury's declaration of the British determination not to acknowledge the independence of the Boer republic has caused a fierce outburst of resentment on the part of the federal and African-der people.

The people now believe implicitly that Great Britain has embarked upon a war of conquest.

State Secretary Raits says the reply means that the war will have to be fought to the bitter end.

HIS RIVAL REMAINED.
While President Steyn Fled from Bloemfontein without the Keys.

Bloemfontein, March 15.—The composition of the deputation which surrendered the capital is noteworthy. Mr. Fraser is Mr. Steyn's rival for the Presidency, though an elected member of the executive Council, of which the landroost is an ex-officio member. The fact that these officials did not flee with President Steyn, is interpreted as a possible indication of a conflict in the Government with reference to the question of continuing the war.

ARE FALLING BACK ON PRETORIA.
All the Boer Commandos Retreating Northward as the British Advance.

Bloemfontein, March 15.—Steyn and the rest of his Government officials arrived to-day at Kroonstad. Scouts report all Boer commandos falling back to the north along the line of the railroad to Pretoria.

The Free State capital passed into English hands at noon on Tuesday. The remnant of the population mostly of British or Scottish origin, gave Lord Roberts an enthusiastic welcome. The Union Jack is now flying from the official residence vacated by President Steyn last night.

Gen. French, as usual, was the first to arrive. Within five miles of the city on Monday, he sent a message threatening to bombard unless the city was immediately surrendered. He allowed the Free Staters till 6 o'clock Tuesday morning to decide. The result of his demand was the speedy evacuation of the place by every Boer, including Steyn himself, who appears to have got clear away.

Promptly next morning the white flag fluttered from the nearest Boer outposts, and a deputation from the Town Council, headed by Fraser, a Scotchman, who was Steyn's opponent at the last Presidential election, and Kallner, Mayor of the town, came out to meet the British troops.

A large British flag headed the procession. The surrender of the keys to the President's residence and other official buildings was the signal for great cheering. Lord Roberts made his formal entry at noon, at once taking possession, in the name of Queen Victoria, of the public buildings and Steyn's official residence, where he has already established his headquarters.

Many British wounded were discovered in that building, their condition being a signal testimony to the Boer care and attention.

"THE KING IS DEAD, GOD SAVE THE KING!"

The Burghers of Bloemfontein Wave British Flags and Welcome Their Conqueror.

STEYN'S POLITICAL RIVAL GIVES UP THE TOWN.

Lord Roberts Immediately Stopped Looting in Bloemfontein, Thereby Showing That He Intends to Adopt a Policy of Justice and Conciliation.

London, March 15.—Bloemfontein has fallen. The Union Jack now flies over territory which a month ago knew it not. Another province has been added to the dominions of the Queen. Lord Roberts has entered the Free State capital in state, after receiving the keys of the public buildings from humble officials. The rapid and decisive manner in which the Boers have bounded from their midst all who dared to breathe loyalty to Britain, have famously waved the British flag, sung the British national song and cheered with well-simulated pleasure the advent of their conqueror. And these, forthwith, are the men who have been lauded as descendants of the Dutch war-fighters of old and the patriots who drove Alva from the Netherlands. President Steyn, deigning to surrender when he had no power of resistance, has fled to Kroonstad, 120 miles to the north, while Fraser, his rival, hoping doubtless to ingratiate himself with the coming power, remained behind to head the deputation which delivered the town to the enemy.

Lord Roberts indicates in unmistakable terms that the Government of the Free State has been superseded and no longer rules. His reference to the late President and the late Government may be fittingly placed side by side with the declaration of Lord Salisbury that Britain had too long "acquiesced" in the existence of the two Republics. There is no doubt that the British flag will remain over Bloemfontein so long as the British Empire exists. This both Roberts and Salisbury have taken pains to indicate.

The capitulation of the Free State capital is important strategically, morally and politically. In the first place it encloses in a net the Boers who have been opposing Clements, Gatacre and Abrant on the Orange River, for the British will now take steps to cut them off the north, while the river and the generals' mailed effectively bar their escape to the south. So that either hundreds of them will be captured or compelled to scatter to all points of the compass. Moreover, Clements, Gatacre and Abrant, who have already joined hands north of the Orange River, will now press forward, occupy the bridges, repair the lines from Cape Colony which converge upon Bloemfontein, and in a short time effect a junction with Roberts at that place, thus giving him several thousand additional troops and a new line of communication direct to Pretoria and through Bloemfontein.

The moral and political effects of the occupation will doubtless be seen in the collapse of the Free State and the instilling of doubt into the minds of the Transvaal burghers.

Meanwhile the disappointed portions of the Boer forces have fallen back to the north, where most of them that have not gone back to their farms will probably make their next stand, south of their new capital and behind the Vet and Zand rivers, afterwards falling back to the north. An interval will probably elapse for British organization and for establishing connection with the Orange River forces before an advance is made northward.

The fact that General Roberts immediately stopped looting in Bloemfontein indicates clearly that he intends to adopt a policy of justice and conciliation and not one of repression which it goes without saying that in the war indemnity will be a large sum to recoup loyalties in Cape Colony whose property has been confiscated or destroyed.

ROBERTS FROWNED ON LOOTING.
He Will Treat the People of the Free State With Justice.

London, March 15.—At precisely 1.30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon a Union Jack, specially made for this purpose by Lady Roberts, was hoisted over the Presidency of Bloemfontein amidst the acclamations of the commander-in-chief's battalions, in which curiously enough, the Orange Free State burghers appear to have joined with remarkable heartiness.

The opposition to the entry of the British troops into the capital was significant. Boers were found occupying a range of hills south of the place, but a few shells drove them off, and at 10 in the morning some newspaper correspondents entered the town, found Mr. Fraser and other officials and guided them to where Lord Roberts stood on the top of a hill, waiting for them. An spokesman, Mr. Fraser asked protection for life and property and surrendered the keys.

A Long Cavalcade.
Lord Roberts, accompanied by his staff, rode at the head of a cavalcade a mile long to the Presidency, receiving an ovation throughout the route, consisting in a remarkable demonstration at the market square. Reaching the Government buildings, Lord Roberts took possession of the city in the name of the Queen, and then rode to the Presidency, where the core of looting the Union Jack ended forever, according to opinion here, the Boer Government of the Free State.

During his progress through the town Lord Roberts stopped and ordered the removal of the war in South Africa, gave a formal pledge that British would not take advantage of England's complications for a further Asiatic advance. The English Zeitung declares that this information is authentic.

CEAR WON'T INTERFERE.
Emperor Nicholas Promised to Give England a Free Hand.
Berlin, March 15.—The Weekly Reviewer of the Kreuz Zeitung, says that Emperor Nicholas, at the beginning of the war in South Africa, gave a formal pledge that Russia would not take advantage of England's complications for a further Asiatic advance. The English Zeitung declares that this information is authentic.

REFUSED TO FIGHT.
Transvaal Boers Threaten to Turn Their Guns on the Town if Peace Offer is Not Accepted.
Cape Town, March 15.—The Transvaal Boers at Bloemfontein threaten to turn their guns on the town, if the peace advances refused to fight, but the threat was unavailing. The war party feel that the Boers are now working the Free State railroad.

ADMIRERS BRITISH COURAGE.
Rushed Koppes and Entrenchments Fearfully.
Pretoria, March 15.—Before returning to the front to-day, General Joubert said to a press representative: "The courage of the British soldiers is beyond question. They rushed the Koppes and entrenchments in a fearless manner, but were not a match for the Mafeking, which simply mowed them down."

REITZ ADMITS THE DEFEAT.
Transvaal Secretary Does Not Attempt to Conceal Loss of Bloemfontein.
Pretoria, March 15.—State Secretary Reitz posted to-day the following announcement:—"Yesterday Bloemfontein was occupied by the British after the burghers had retired in a northerly direction. The seat of Government of the Free State has already been transferred to Kroonstad."

CLEMENTS JOINS GEN. GATACRE.
The Two British Forces at Orange River United.
Bethul Bridge Camp, March 15.—General Clements' brigade has effected a junction with General Gatacre's troops at Burgersdorp. A patrol left to-day for Aliwal North, to join hands with Gen. Brabant.

Mr. Halford Gives the World a Broad Hint in Judging a Question.
London, March 15.—In the House of Commons to-day, replying to Mr. Wm. Redmond, who asked whether the Government of the United States had offered its good offices to Her Majesty's Government with the view of bringing about peace in South Africa, Mr. Halford said that Her Majesty's Government would not accept the intervention in the settlement of South African affairs.

Emperor Nicholas Promised to Give England a Free Hand.
Berlin, March 15.—The Weekly Reviewer of the Kreuz Zeitung, says that Emperor Nicholas, at the beginning of the war in South Africa, gave a formal pledge that Russia would not take advantage of England's complications for a further Asiatic advance. The English Zeitung declares that this information is authentic.

THE BOERS MUST FIGHT FAIR.

In language that leaves no doubt as to the meaning, Lord Roberts, now at Bloemfontein, positively notified President Kruger and Steyn that the sanctity of the white flag had been violated by the Boers in the presence and that if another outrage of the kind were perpetrated he would direct his officers to wholly disregard that flag in future. Literally interpreted, this is a threat of war without quarter, but it is fully justified, in referring to the finding of explosive bullets among Kruger's stores, on the Modder river, Lord Roberts says — "Such treachery of the recognized usages of war and of the Geneva convention are a disgrace to any civilized power."

Lord Roberts puts an official stamp upon the charges often made hitherto that the Boers have been in the habit of raising in their trenches and holding up their hands to induce the British soldiers to leave their cover so that hidden Dutch sharpshooters could "smile" them. "One of the crimes punishable with death, under the United States army regulations as well as that of other countries is that of firing upon the bearer of a flag of truce. If President Kruger takes spiritless advice on this point, he will incorporate just such a clause in the code for the guidance of the Transvaal warriors. Otherwise, he may never have a chance to treat into Central Africa, as he now proposes in the event of defeat, or to go to St. Helena. He may be shot as an outlaw."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

A Hamilton man has died as a result of his careless shovelling snow. It is a tale that the average Peterborough citizen carefully guards against.

What a whitewash that Kitchener is. One day at Arundel scolding the Boers out of Cape Colony, and the next pulling champagne cork along with Boer and Cecil Rhodes in Kimberley.

If there was anything else needed to discourage the Boers the announcement that Great Britain proposes to send over 25,000 more soldiers ought to do it.

In the meantime Paul Kruger wraps his whiskers around him and refuses to be comforted.

The most cheerful bit of news we have seen for some time comes from the Detroit Tribune, which declares that England need not worry about the defense of Canada, as under the Monroe doctrine, "it is pretty evident that the United States are substantially committed to the defense of Canada, against any assailant whatever." This is, of course extremely risky, but is really more alarming than language of another kind. When the boat manufacturer takes the rabbit under its protection it's a blue look out for the rabbit.

It is a good thing, apparently, for Hon. Thomas Greenway, that no more by-elections are due up to the prairie provinces.

From Mr. Greenway's standpoint those beautiful Plains look as homely as a collection of Boer hoppers.

Lord Roberts' message will serve as a down reminder to the Boers that next time they fire on a white flag they should be sure Boer isn't watching them through a spy glass.

The general in charge of the Boers at present is Gen. Buller. — Windsor Record.

John Robinson's threat to resign from the Dublin city council if an address of welcome to the Queen is passed, leads us to believe that there is no salary attached to a Dublin councilship.

A refugee who was at Kersbach says that bitterness almost to the point of hostility exists between the colonial troops and the Free States of that district.

BOSS.

Boss is a kind of cow.
She dreams beneath the apple bough
And swings her tail and rings her bell
While roaming up and down the dale.

I see her through the pasture haze
Eat all the pretty daisy stars.
Then gently toss her head on high
To watch the clouds that dot the sky.

When night makes all the meadow black,
She lets the chickens on her back Fall fast asleep, and sleep until
The sun comes peeping o'er the hill.

THOSE BOER LADIES.

By Middle Life They Are Almost Too Fat to Walk.

The Boer woman is very little like the trim, handsome Dutchwoman of her ancestral Holland. She is a widow pretty. Her complexion is her principal charm, and she guards this carefully whenever she goes out. She is never seen outdoors without a great peaked bonnet on her head, her visits to church being made behind an almost oriental seclusion of veils. This is necessary to preserve the pink and white of her skin, for the climate would otherwise soon tan it to the color of sole leather. Her eyes are small and set close together, and her features are irregular. Her cheeks are broad and flat, and her hair is naturally light in color, although time and weather soon bleach it from its early straw color. At a very early age she loses all her teeth, for she is constantly chewing sweet cakes and confectionery.

A European woman would replace the molar that nature has deprived her of with well mounted works of art, but the Boer woman does not do this. She thinks it would be impious thus to try to duplicate the work of the Creator. Her figure is thick and almost waistless. While still a young woman she begins to grow fat, and by the time middle life is reached she is often so unwieldy that the only exercise she is able to take is to waddle clumsily from one armchair to another. She is clad in a loose, scantily made gown, devoid of trimming and apparently waistless. The day garments of the Boers are also their night clothes, so the gown is generally wrinkled.

Aggravation of the offense. "You are charged, young man," the magistrate said, not unkindly, "with scolding the complaining witness near by out of his senses by putting him through some mock ceremony of initiation. I can make allowance for exuberance of spirits among college students, but sometimes this exuberance is carried too far."

"It was this way, your honor," exclaimed the youth who appeared to be the spokesman—"we were out for a little lark, and we caught a Jay."

"The fine will be $2 and costs each," said his honor, his face hardening—Chicago Tribune.

A Race With the Boer. The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 600 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had set a short time before.

CHURCH AND CHURCHMEN

The old "Second church" in Boston celebrated its two hundred and fiftieth anniversary recently.

The Universalist church reports 1,008 members and 47,471 families, an increase of about 1,200 families over last year. The Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale will not occupy the pulpit of his church in Boston again until spring. Dr. Lyman Abbott will be the supply for the month of January.

Rabbi Emanuel Schreiber of Youngstown, O., who has been chosen rabbi of the Emanuel synagogue of Chicago, is 45 years old and a native of Austria. He is a doctor of the Royal college of Vienna and has written a number of religious works.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Glassware should be washed in warm water with a dash of soap powder, rinsed off in clear, warm water and polished with soft linen towels.

Hot or cold water cans or jugs should be turned upside down when not in use, so that they can drain and dry thoroughly. If left damp, they will rust inside and be spoiled, because rust eats holes in the metal.

For dishwashing kerosene oil has been found to form an emulsion with the grease, so that a few drops of kerosene dropped into cold or tepid water will keep knife handles from being injured, as in the case where soap and hot water are used.

His "Dear Old Jim." "Corbett is my friend and benefactor," says Mr. Joffrey. "I was once his sparring partner, and he treated me as a gentleman. Hence I have gladly agreed to fight him as a return for favors. I am bound by all the ties of friendship and gratitude to give him a chance to fight me as a return for favors. Mr. Joffrey will reward his old patron and benefactor by beating him into pulp and knocking his head off. One can fancy him saying, as he puts his terrible right into his friend's ribs, 'Dear old Jim'—Kansas City Star.

The Billing and Coasting. Uncle George—You do not appear to think it necessary to spend so much time at home as you did when you were first married. Suppose the billing and coasting are all over now. Harry—There doesn't seem to be much of a let up in the billing, and, as for the coasting, I am dreadfully afraid of it. It is sure to mean a new hat or a new gown or a new something.—Boston Transcript.

HE WASHED DISHES.

The Hard Job One Boy Had All the Way to Europe.

The girls who have complained in various keys because they had dishes to wash may be glad to hear of a young man who can look at the matter through their eyes, perhaps more so. He had shipped as "boy" on a cattle steamer for Europe because he wanted to move as much as possible on his transportation, and-but the rest of the story sounds better in his own words:

"About 4:30 in the morning I was awakened and told to go to work. I hastily dressed, for the first and last time on board, for during the rest of the voyage I took care not to undress. It seemed scarcely worth while. I arrived on deck and found the steward waiting for me. He showed me into the pantry, introduced me to 'Pants,' as the pantryman was called, and told me that my chief duty during the voyage would be to wash dishes.

"There was already a large pile of dirty dishes waiting to be washed, and I rolled up my sleeves, fixed the hot water and began to work. I had these almost done when another and larger lot was brought in from the dining room. This proved to be the daily grammar. I no longer had one pile washed than others were brought in, and I was never done. I don't think I ever saw so many dishes before in my life, and I hope I never shall again. There were 60 passengers aboard besides the crew, and six meals were served each day. From the dishes that came out to be washed, I think that each passenger must have used at least six plates at a meal."

Destroying the Point.

Every one knows the man who is notorious for so telling a story as to destroy its point. An English nobleman, Lord F., was noted for his success in this ruinous of the prosperity of a story. The author of "Collections and Recollections" exhibits a specimen of his lordship's peculiar art.

Thirty years ago two large houses were built at Albert Gate, London, the site and cost of which seemed likely to prohibit tenants from living there. A was christened them "Maita and Gibraltar" because they can never be taken.

Lord F. thought this an excellent joke and ran round the town, saying to every friend he met:

"I say, do you know what they call these houses at Albert Gate? They call them Maita and Gibraltar because they can never be taken. Isn't it awfully good?"

Some one told Lord F. the old story, "Why was the elephant the last animal to get into the ark?" to which the answer is, "Because he had to pack his trunk."

Lord F. asked the riddle of the next friend he met and gave as the answer, "Because he had to pack his portmanteau."

We Read the News.

Mr. Tuffs of Los Angeles was playing golf with a friend. When he drove from the third driving ground, he asked the ball boy and sent it away to one side. It stopped in front of a grating over, and Tuffs came up just in time to see it disappear into the hole. When his opponent had made his stroke, Tuffs uttered the cry and, with many sound thrashes of his club, drove the ball to the third hole. There he made his stroke and the ball, nearly before he, announced that he had made the hole in two strokes. His opponent calmly finished the hole in seven and claimed the hole.

"But I made it in two," protested Tuffs cheerfully.

"No, you didn't," declared the other. "You made it in 20. You hit that cow 25 times, for I counted every stroke," and Tuffs conceded the hole.—San Francisco Argonaut.

To make paper fireproof nothing more is necessary than to saturate the paper in a strong solution of alum water, and when thoroughly dry it will resist the action of flame.

SOME QUEER DREAMS.

VISIONS THAT RESULTED IN THE CAPTURE OF CRIMINALS.

Marvelous Manifestations That Resulted in the Capture of Criminals and Which Prove That Truth is Stranger Than Fiction.

A very remarkable instance of the tracing of a criminal by means of a dream occurred in St. Louis. A woman named Mary Thornton was detained in custody for a month, charged with the murder of her husband. A week or so after her arrest she requested to see one of the prison officials and told him she had dreamed that an individual named George Ray had murdered her spouse, giving the official at the same time full details of the tragedy as witnessed in her vision. The man Ray was not suspected at the time, but the prison authorities were so much impressed by the woman's obvious earnestness that a search was at once made for him.

After some delay he was traced and charged with the crime, the details of the same as seen in the dream being rehearsed to him. Overcome with astonishment, he then and there confessed that he had committed the crime. Curiously enough, the woman had only met the murderer once and believed him to be on the very best of terms with her husband.

Almost as remarkable was the case of a woman named Drew, who dreamed one night that her husband, a retired sailor, had been murdered by a peddler at a Gravesend tavern, where the said husband was in the habit of putting up when visiting the town in question. The first news that awaited her upon rising in the morning was that her spouse had been assassinated at the very tavern she had seen in her extraordinary vision, whereupon she burst into hysterical tears and cried out that her dream had come true.

She calmed down somewhat after a few hours and then handed the police officials an exact description of the peddler of the vision, giving a minute account of his dress, which included a blue coat of a very peculiar pattern. Marvelous as the fact may appear, a man wearing such a coat and following the occupation of a peddler was discovered two days later at an inn some six miles from Gravesend, and, on being faced with the crime, he at once admitted that he was guilty and that robbery had been the motive of the outrage. He was hanged soon afterward, his doom having been brought about by the slimy evidence of a woman's dream.

Women as dreamers seem more successful than men, but a rather peculiar instance of a crime being traced by a vision and in which the dreamer was a member of the male sex comes from Rennes, in France. A worthy merchant, having quitted his office one Saturday evening, proceeded home to dinner and after enjoying a substantial meal lay down on the couch and fell into a light sleep. A very vivid dream then came to him wherein he saw two men of the burglar type engaged in rifling the safe in his office, and so much impressed was he by the vision that he resolved, upon awakening, to at once go to the office and see that everything was under lock and key. His amusement may be imagined when, on arriving there, he discovered the door forced and a burglary in progress. To summon a couple of gardenermen was the work of an instant, and five minutes later the thieves, who proved to be notorious housebreakers, were on their way to the police depot, where the prosecutor told his extraordinary story. In view of the fact that the safe contained valuables to the extent of some thousands of pounds, the dream in question proved a very fortunate one for the dreamer.

How to explain these marvelous manifestations, which prove once more that truth is stranger than fiction, is a task beyond the ingenuity of man to compass. Perhaps the theory of telepathy may have something to do with the mysterious business, but even that theory would appear rather inadequate in such cases as the aforementioned.

A skillful forger who moved in the highest circles of society was once detected by the agency of a dream. The affair occurred in Boston and caused the greatest excitement of the time. The forger, a young man of eight or nine and twenty, had become acquainted with a rich publisher, at whose house he became a constant guest. One day the publisher's bankers discovered that some one was forging their client's signature to various large checks, and two detectives were at once instructed to look out for the culprit.

Their efforts proved useless, but one evening the publisher's youngest daughter, a little girl of 11, dreamed that she saw a man whom she described as "like Mr. Blank," the visitor to whom reference has been made, sitting in a room in Maine street copying her father's signature. The child's dream was communicated to the police, who, though inclined to ridicule the name of the gentleman in question, watched, with the result that his lodgings were raided and a complete plant for the making of bank notes found there. It then transpired that he was a man who was wanted for manifold forgeries throughout the United States and he was sent to prison for a very long term.

Strange, very strange, but none the less true, and proving once more that, as Huxley remarked, "There are wiser things in heaven and earth, than our dreams are of in your philosophy."

PETERBOROUGH

He's blowing with all his might and can barely stir the recording hand from zero. There's many a big, healthy looking man who is weak in the lungs. Probably half of two-thirds of his lung surface barely knows the contact of oxygen. He's the kind of man, who, when a cough attacks him, goes galloping down the road toward consumption. Many such a man has found strength and healing for weak lungs and tissues lacerated by coughing and drained by hemorrhages, in the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The healing power of this medicine in pulmonary diseases seems little short of marvelous at times, so extreme are the conditions which it cures. The "Discovery" contains no alcohol, and no narcotics.

"When I started to take your 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mr. A. F. Novotny of New York, N. Y., Box 147, "I had a regular consumptive cough, of which I was afraid, and everybody cautioned me and warned me, saying it was a losing fight rapidly, was very pale and had no appetite whatever. Now my condition is changed entirely. I do not cough at all, have gained eight pounds in weight, my appetite is enormous. I can recommend your medicine to everybody who may be in need of the same, as it is a sure cure."

The Architect.

One must wonder why it really is that so little is said or thought about architecture, the grandest, the mother, of all arts, a great, a most useful, science, one in which a greater revolution has lately taken place and in which more progress has been made, with more stupendous results, than in any other, remarks a writer in The International Magazine.

Was it not Richelieu who, paraphrasing an ancient writer, said: "If it is veritability you seek, go to architecture. He must be an artist, or an architect, or they will crumble into trouble; a lawyer, or he will get his patrons into trouble; a doctor, or his buildings will be hygienically unfit to live in; and, last, but not least, he must be a gentleman, or we will have nothing to do with him."

Time to Give Up.

An Iowa judge recently related an amusing incident that had occurred in his court when a colored man was brought up for some petty offense. The charge was read, and as the statement of the state of Iowa against John Jones" was read in a loud voice the colored man's eyes bulged nearly out of their sockets and he seemed overcome with terror and astonishment. When he was asked if he had anything to say or pleaded guilty or not guilty, he gasped out:

"Well, yo' honah, ef de whole state of Iowa is agin dis ole pure niggah I as gwine to give up right now."

Great Great Pioneers.

The Boer is the ideal pioneer. From the days of the great trek, in 1837, and even before that he opened up country hitherto unexplored by a white man. A great deal of fuss has been made of mighty travelers, English and foreign, who have traversed Africa, to the east and west, in search of new lands and with no small need of fame to themselves, but there was scarcely one of the old vortrekkers and hunters of the forties and fifties who did not accomplish feats of endurance, pluck and lengthy travel which were ten times as trying.—London Mail.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

The Hamilton Smoker.

The smoker given by the non-commissioned officers of the 5th Battalion in their rooms last night was very successful affair. A good programme was presented and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

Apprentices Wanted.

We want a good, smart boy to learn press work at the Times press department. Won't have to deliver papers or run messages. Apply at once.

Death at Selwyn.

The death of Miss Pearl Northey, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Boyce, of Selwyn, took place on Sunday evening last at seven o'clock. Deceased has been ill for some months, suffering from consumption. She was beloved among a large circle of friends and was in her fifteenth year at the time of her death. The funeral took place on Tuesday of this week to the Lakeside burying ground.

J. J. LUNDY'S OFFICE.

Is temporarily located at No. 375 Water street, Opposite Mechanics' Institute.

Canadian Patents.

E. G. Siggars, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D.C., U.S.A., reports the following patents granted by the U.S. Patent Office, March 6, 1900, to inventors residing in the Dominion of Canada. He will mail copy of specifications and drawings of any patent for 10 cents. Postage stamps will not be accepted.

D. Collins, Inwood, signal apparatus for railways; R. B. Dixon, Toronto, rotary engine; F. Laporte and O. P. Bonnard, Montreal, Acetylene gas generator; F. W. Magee, London, Gas burner.

A Good Suggestion.

Our esteemed fellow townsman, Mr. W. M. Moore, made a suggestion to one of our local evening contemporaries that is worthy of favorable consideration. Mr. Moore proposes that on tomorrow, which will be St. Patrick's Day, flags be hoisted in honor of the brave Irish troops who have fought so heroically in South Africa. It is a capital idea. We cannot lavish too much regard on the brave men comprising the Irish Brigade, Irish Fusiliers and the Royal Irish Regiment. Let every man, woman and child who has a flag, hang it out to-morrow morning.

A Generous Donation.

The following appears in yesterday's Globe under the head of "Subscriptions to the Patriotic Fund":

"Mr. Peter Hamilton of the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company of Peterborough writes:—Enclosed please find the sum of $50 as an expression of sympathy on behalf of the firm and the employees in connection therewith for those depending upon the Canadian soldiers who are assisting in showing to the world that Canadians appreciate the great benefits they derive through the protection extended to them by their connection with the British Empire."

HOW IS THIS?

Plans and Figures Regarding the Building of Cement Sidewalks.

The Good Roads movement is having its effect upon the towns and villages in the direction of more permanent pavements and cement is being largely used. At present the cost appears to vary very much, and while in some towns the pavements have been costly yet in others the cost has been exceedingly moderate. Barries has managed remarkably well, as the following letter from the Town Clerk to a Hamilton citizen indicates:—

At the request of ex-Mayor Wells I give you the following figures of cost herein:

Cement walk on High street, length 557 feet 4 inches, 4 feet wide, old plank walk removed, grading, excavating and filling in with gravel to a depth of about six inches as a foundation or bed for concrete and cement finish. We used gravel with cement for concrete and cement coats. We have gravel pits, consequently there was no cost except for hauling of same.

Worsley street, length 1,048 feet 4 inches, width 4 feet.

Collier street, length 2,106 feet, width 5 feet.

The two latter had been laid with asphalt. The asphalt was removed and very little filling or grading was required.

Quantities of Star brand cement used on different walks was as follows: High, 551-2 barrels; Worsley, 553-4; Collier, 2081-4, at $2.80 per barrel.

Total cost of above, $1,383.77—1,082 per square foot average.

High street walk cost per square foot about 10-8 cents.

Worsley walk cost per square foot, 8 cents.

Collier walk cost per square foot, 7-5 cents.

The work was done under the supervision of Harry Einar, of Toronto, and has withstood the frost thus far.

E. DONNELLY, City Treasurer.

P.S.—The work was done by ordinary laborers except one man who had helped put down some cement walk here previously.—E.D.

The Matthews Company.

As announced in the Times already the George Matthews Company are preparing to erect a large addition to their packing house. The new addition will be of brick, 40 feet by 80 feet, and four stories in height. It will be slaughter house and fertilizer department and will be equipped with the most modern machinery. The capacity of the concern will be 10 pigs per minute, or 600 per hour. The addition is being erected in order to allow modern equipment to be put in, so that with the other improvements and additions just made the company will have a modern establishment throughout.

Mistaken Identity.

There is a distinguished looking gentleman in town for the past few days, and considerable curiosity exists as to his identity. He makes his headquarters at Messrs. Goselin & Rasse's meat market, wears a black silk hat and talks with a slight French accent. He does not look unlike Mr. Tenise Guerin, who has been so long identified with Messrs. Winch Bros. in the meat business. A gentleman told the Times yesterday that the individual was none other than the party referred to, who was winning a wager made by Mr. Alex. McMillan, the popular hatter. The chances are that Tenise will grow to like the swell head piece, and refuse to lay it aside when the time of probation is up. Quite a number mistook him for the President of the Lime Juice Club.

A Young Life Closed.

It is with regret the Times is obliged to chronicle the death of Patrick Joseph, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. McManus, of town, which occurred after a long and painful illness. The lad, who was ten years of age, was a very bright and promising boy. Last fall while playing football in the school grounds with some companions he seized the ball and was running away quickly when he came into collision with a tree, striking his forehead violently. A severe illness followed from which he partially recovered. A short time since blood poisoning developed. The lad endured a severe illness of twenty-one weeks before death came. He was a great favorite among his schoolmates. The funeral takes place this afternoon at 2 p. m. from the family residence, 284 Murray street.

Sunday School Rally.

A meeting of special interest to all those interested in Sabbath work will be held this evening in the T.M.C.A. hall. All scholars, teachers and friends of the school are urged to attend. The evening will open at 7.30 with a song service conducted by Rev. D. O. Cromley. Interesting addresses will also be given by the President of the County Association, Dr. Harrison, and Rev. Messrs. Murray and Armstrong. An offering for expenses will also be taken up.

Police Court Notes.

Jim Farley, who had spent the night in the cells, appeared at the police court yesterday morning, charged with being drunk. He was allowed to go.

Alf. Vankoughnet was fined $1 and $5.39 costs for kicking up a row in a Chinese laundry a few days ago. He was allowed ten days to pay the fine, or otherwise he will go on the hill for 10 days.

Knotty Problems.

Editor Morning Times:

Sir,—Kindly answer the following questions through your paper and oblige several who would like to know:

1.—What percentage of the population of the Transvaal were Britishers?

2.—How many of them are now in the field with the British troops?

READER.

Reply.—The Times has no data upon which to answer this question. In 1895 the population of the Orange Free State was 267,564, of whom 71,711 were whites and 195,853 natives. The population of the Transvaal at the last census was 476,000, of whom 225,000 were whites, and of these whites about 71 per cent were of foreign origin. At the same time these figures were compiled the total number of voters in the Transvaal was only 17,000, tending to show how exceedingly exclusive the franchise was. As for the number of Uilianders in the field with the British troops, there are several bodies like the Kaffrarian rifle, Imperial Light Infantry and others which are almost entirely composed of Uilianders, who are also enlisted in large numbers in the other colonial forces. To answer your question with any degree of satisfaction we would have to take a census of all the local colonial troops in South Africa.—Ed. Times.

Cape News.

Editor Morning Times:

Sir.—1. Are the glowing reports of the gold finds of Cape Nome false, or exaggerations and advertising schemes of transportation companies? 2. What is the climate and length of the seasons? 3. What capital would you consider necessary for one going there? 4. Are there any mining laws?

SUBSCRIBER.

Reply.—1. No doubt there has been some exaggeration about the finds, but there is no question about large quantities of gold having been found in the Cape Nome district, and hundreds of people are there now and thousands are preparing to go. 2. The summer season is short, about two months. The climate is cold, the winter often extending to 50 degrees below zero. 3. Not less than $500, and as much more as any one can get. 4. Yes. The mining laws of the United States govern. A person intending to go there should provide himself with heavy winter clothing, heavy felt boots, heavy mittens and cap and a gold miner's outfit, especially one for placer mining. One should be in perfect health at time of starting.—Ed. Times.

CUT out this coupon and bring or send it with 15c. in silver to the Peterborough Department of the Times, and get Part 8 of "Glimpses of South Africa, in Peace and in War." See announcement in this issue.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

A diphtheria patient was taken to the hospital yesterday.

Many of the Stony Lake cottagers are getting in their yearly supply of ice.

Mr. A. J. Graham, of Lindsay, formerly of town, is opening a branch cloth store at Fenelon Falls.

The boy war amongst local dealers has nothing to do with the Boer war, although names are synonymous.

Miss Eva Booth went up to Lindsay yesterday, she holds the "Scarlet Thread" service there this evening.

Emily township Council visited Toronto on Wednesday on business in connection with the re-building of Cowan's bridge.

A man named Wallruff, employed in Carlew's lumber camp, near Bobcaygeon, had his leg badly crushed on Tuesday between a heavy load of logs and a fallen tree.

A patriotic bazaar will be held on Friday evening, March 23rd, at the residence of Aldermen, T. H. G. Deane, No. 238 Park street. The affair was organized by Misses Lexa Deane, Vieta Hunter, Maggie Macdonald, Irene Parks and Hazel Sanderson. A large attendance is expected. A number of articles of fancy work will be exposed for sale and refreshments are to be served. The doors will be open at 7 p. m.

FUNERALS.

Mrs. (Dr.) Tolland, of Omemo, was in town yesterday.

Mr. W. G. Scott, of the Gill Soap Company, was in town yesterday and gave the Times a call.

Word was received from Mr. Dickson Davidson yesterday to the effect that he was just entering the mountains in Montana. He expected to reach Vancouver by Sunday.

Mr. Alf. Jackson, representing the Dominion Brewery Company, Toronto, was in town yesterday on his way west. Mr. Jackson finds no trouble in disposing of the fine brands of ales and porters of his company, and reports business good.

The Middle of the Road.

The citizens are still sticking to the middle of the road. Ex-Alderman Langford, who was at the head of the committee of the Council which had charge of the building of the new walk last year, has quit using the sidewalks, and has taken to the road like an ordinary highwayman. Town Engineer Hay, who is solely responsible for the grades of the sidewalks, is also seen occasionally in the middle of the road. They are probably right, for any one who would venture to use the low-down sidewalks is liable to break his neck getting down on to them in many places.

CLEVER, BUT SOULLESS.

See Woman's New Way in Which to Pay Social Debt.

"I don't know much of the ways of fashionable people," said a young physician not long ago, "for I am not in society, but if many society women are like one I know here in town I think I'm safer to be out of it. It was not this season, but it wasn't so long ago but that plenty of people can remember the circumstances. I had among my patients an elderly woman who lived with the daughter's family. The daughter lived, if not beyond her means, at least up to the very edge, went out a great deal and was entertained a great deal.

The mother fell sick with a complaint which I knew would prove fatal. I did not inform the family till one day the daughter asked me to tell her frankly what her mother's condition was and just how long she could live. I told her that the old lady could not possibly last more than a fortnight. She begged me not to let anybody know how serious the case was. She didn't want her young daughters distressed, she said.

"Of course I told nobody, and just a week after that I read in the papers that Mrs. Dash, the daughter of my dying patient, had sent out invitations for a large dancing party, to be given on an evening a fortnight away. My patient did not live as long as I had expected. The day after she died I read in the papers that 'owing to the sudden death of her mother Mrs. Dash had been compelled to recall her invitations.'"

"She had never intended to give a ball. She could not have afforded it, and she 'bluffed.' I have cold chills every time I see her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

AN EXCITING LIFE.

Why the Chicago Girl's Brown Hair Turned Golden.

"Turn gray?" snarled his wife. "Wouldn't it be so bad if that was all it done. It's decent and respectable to have gray hair, but when it comes to making a poor young fellow turn yellow just on account of the excitement on how these cars are run on stilts on how people there when I say it's a sin to be rich big cities. I'm a-goin' right out to 'Lina Jane's house, of I kin over find it, an stay right in it till we leave Chicago."

"How do you know it makes people's hair turn gray?" asked Uncle Eben. "I ain't never heard tell of anything of that kind."

"Well, I see it with my own eyes—leastwise I see it turn brown again after the poor dears was rented all summer in the country. You know them four gals what staid all summer over at Cousin Ellen's? When they first come, they'd big brown eyes an' fair complexions an' right yaller hair. Party soon every one of 'em's hair begin to get streaked in spots, an' before the summer was gone they all had rich brown hair. Then I saw one of 'em what made their hair turn brown, an' she said it was all her own, but that the excite life she'd been livin' in Chicago, where she had to act in a theater every night, made it turn yaller. Poor thing! She looked so much better at the end of the summer that I hate to think of her comin' back to this great, wicked city."—Chicago Journal.

TAKING THE REINS.

The world's record for fastest clipping of a horse in 14 minutes.

Arlington, 2:23, has trotted in 2:14 on a half mile track and may be Gold Leaf's first 2:10 performer.

Blaskey Hero, 2:21, the Pacific coast veteran, is being driven on the roads at San Francisco by General Shafter.

J. Sutherland has bought 50 acres from A. H. Bernal at Pleasanton, Cal., and will build a track. He will also erect a large training barn and some 40 box stalls.

M. B. Wheeler, Cresco, Ia., reports a new record of 2:23 for his pacer Fitzgould, by Black, 2:15, and that he was timed in 2:17 in a race at Charles City, Ia., over a poor track.

The latest device to encourage high stepping in coach horses is a glass worn like goggles, the crystals being so formed that the ground appears nearer than it is. It is said to work all right.

A horse show will be held next year under the auspices of the French government in connection with the Franco-British exhibition. Twelve prizes, worth $2,500, will be offered for American harness horses.

Artie, 2:23, and Abby Kelly, 2:24, are two more new ones for Pilot Medicine reported by D. D. Streeter of Kalamazoo, Mich., former owner of Peter the Grey (4:37), the star of the family.

Porter Berry, Pratt, Ill., reports that his stallion Bantam, by Indicator, 2:23, son of Gold Dust, was the free for all at Grayville, Ill., in September in straight heats, reducing his record to 2:15.

F. D. Spotswood of Harrodsburg, Ky., has a year-old trotting filly by Baron Wilke, dam by Netherbow, that is a good phenomenon. Oct. 1, after a very brief preparation, she trotted a three-quarter track in 2:29 and Oct. 24 turned the same track in 2:15; last half in 1:09.—Horse Review.

NATIONAL WAR LOAN.

Issue of Loan £30,000,000 Sterling at 2-3-4 Per Cent.

National war loan issue of loan of thirty millions, bearing interest at 2-3-4 per cent. per annum, to be redeemed at par on the 5th April, 1910, price of issue fixed by H. M. Treasury at 98 10s per cent. The Governor and Company of the Bank of England give notice that they are authorized to receive applications for this loan, which will take the form either of inscribed stock or of bonds to bearer at the option of the subscribers.

The interest at 2-3-4 per cent. per annum and the capital will be a charge on the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Bank of England and at the Bank of Ireland. Dividends will be paid quarterly in the same manner and on the same dates as the dividends on Consols; the first dividend, a full three months' dividend, will be paid on the 5th of July, and the second dividend also a full three months' dividend on the 5th of October.

The loan will be paid on the 5th April, 1910.

Applications, which must be accompanied by a deposit of 12 per cent., will be received at the chief cashier's office, Bank of England, and may be forwarded to that bank either directly or through the medium of any banker or stock broker in the United Kingdom. The list will be closed on or before Thursday, the 15th March, 1900. In case of partial allotment the balance of the amount paid as deposit will be applied towards the payment of the first instalment, should there be a surplus after making that payment, such surplus will be refunded by cheque.

The dates on which the further payments will be required are as follows:—25 10s per cent. on Monday, 25th March, 1900; 15 10s per cent. on Monday, 9th April, 1900; 10 per cent. on Thursday, 10th May, 1900; 10 per cent. on Friday, 8th June, 1900; 10 per cent. on Tuesday, 19th July, 1900; 10 per cent. on Thursday, 8th August, 1900; 10 per cent. on Friday, 7th September, 1900; 10 per cent. on Monday, 8th October, 1900, 10 per cent. on Thursday, 8th November, 1900. This instalment may be paid in full on or after the 5th of April, 1900, under discount at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum.

In case of default in the payment of any instalment at its proper date, the deposit and the instalments previously paid will be liable to forfeiture.

Receipts certificates to bearer, with coupons attached for the dividends payable on the 5th July and 5th October, 1900, will be issued in exchange for the provisional receipts.

These scrip certificates to bearer can be inscribed, or in other words, can be converted into stock, as soon as they have been paid in full, or they may be exchanged for bonds to bearer after the 5th October, 1900.

Bonds to bearer will have quarterly coupons attached. The first coupon will be that of the dividend payable on the 5th January, 1901.

Inscribed stock will be convertible into bonds to bearer at any time after the 5th October next without payment of any fee, and bonds to bearer can be inscribed or, in other words, converted into stock, on payment of a fee of one shilling per bond.

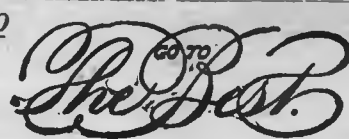

Applications must be for even hand sets of stock, but the stock once inscribed will be transferable in any sums which are multiples of a penny, as in Consols.

The bonds to bearer will be of the same denominations as in the case of Consols certificates to bearer, viz., £100, £50, £20, £10 and £5.

The inscribed stock is an investment authorized by the Trustee Act, 1902.

Applications must be on printed forms, which may be obtained at the Bank of England and the Bank of Ireland, or at any of their branches, at any of the principal banks of Messrs. Mullens, Marshall & Co., 4 Lombard street, London, E.C. 4, or of any of the principal stock brokers.

IT PAYS TO

THE CANADA BUSINESS COLLEGE CHATHAM, ONT.

Canada's greatest school of SHORTHAND and BUSINESS training, still holds a very strong lead over its competitors.

No more evidence of the claim is needed than the fact that, which shows how widely its faculty popular choice is patronized.

17 Cities, Towns and Villages in Canada, United States and Newfoundland represented in the winter dance of the year in date.

28 Countries in Ontario, six of the United States, together with five from Manitoba and Alberta, have sent their representatives. They came from the Atlantic on the east to the Pacific on the west. Distance gives no hindrance to those who are determined to attend the dance.

It is pleasant to an excellent time of year to make a start. Pupils are admitted at any time. For catalogue, address,

PRIOR TWO CENTS

HUNDREDS OF BOERS LAY DOWN THEIR ARMS

Burgers Refuse to Attend a Council Meeting at Kroonstad Summoned by Steyn.

TWO BOER GENERALS RETURN TO THEIR FARMS.

Late Arrivals From Pretoria Say the Boers Themselves Now Admit That Their Case is Hopeless—Relief of Mafeking May be Announced Shortly.

London, March 16

Lord Roberts has sent the following despatch to the War Office:

Bloemfontein, March 16. General Clements crossed the Orange River yesterday. Repairs to the railway bridge at Norval's Point have commenced and it will shortly be ready for traffic. General Pole-Carew telegraphs his arrival at Springfontein so that Bloemfontein may be practically in rail connection with Cape Town. My proclamation is already having an excellent effect. Several hundred burgers have expressed their intention to surrender their arms and return to their occupations. The resident commissioner of Basutoland reports that 800 Boers lately arrived from Bloemfontein at a further contingent from Aliwal North was only waiting to know the terms of my proclamation to attend a council at Kroonstad to which President Steyn had summoned them.

London, March 17

The Daily Mail publishes an interview with Mr. Cecil Rhodes secured by Julian Ralph in the course of which Mr. Rhodes declares that there had been only 30,000 Boers in the field altogether and that the foreign mercenaries were only about 15,000. The numbers of the Boers, he said, had been exaggerated in order to explain the British reverses.

London, March 17

The Daily Mail has the following despatch from Lorenzo Marques, dated Friday, March 16: "Entrenching is proceeding on the Vaal River at Vaneyning. Late arrivals from Pretoria say that the Boers themselves now admit that their case is hopeless. Gen. Lucas Meyer refuses to fight again and has returned to his farm. General Botha has also returned and the burgers are going home by hundreds."

London, March 17

The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says: "The Boer prisoners, I learn, will be detained indefinitely on the transports and the Free State will perhaps be spared the trip to St. Helena."

London, March 17, 4.30 a.m.

With the railway communication to the Cape, Lord Roberts will within a very few days be in a position to begin the advance on Pretoria. His deep political intuition, combined with his bold strategy, is having the result desired in the southern sections of the Orange Free State, which are rapidly coming down. Mafeking is now the only point for anxiety, and as it is known that a force has left Kimberley, its relief may be announced before many days pass. The efficiency of the relieving column is heightened by the fact that it is partly composed of regulars.

Bloemfontein, March 17

It is safe to say that the Boers have completely collapsed in the Free State south of this point. The British cavalry patrols going as far as the Modder River, have found no sign of the enemy. The bridge is untouched. Altogether 600 Boers have come in here to surrender.

Bothalia, Orange Free State, March 16th.

Gen. Gatacre on arrival here found that all the Boers had fled. The town was nearly deserted, the Dutch having trekked on hearing of the surrender of Bloemfontein. It is believed the Boers retired in the direction of Dewet's camp. The telegraph is open to Springfontein. It is understood here that President Kruger, two days ago, ordered the Orange Free State to the South African Republic.

WEAK REPLY FROM RETZ

To the Telegram From Lord Salisbury—All Doubt Removed.

Pretoria, March 16.—Secretary Retz's repudiation of Lord Salisbury's arguments in reply to the Bloemfontein joint note was issued to-day. Mr. Retz says—

"The British Government, after the Bloemfontein conference, endeavored to enforce by threats certain changes in the internal government of the Transvaal Republic, contrary to the London convention. They also imported troops in great numbers, and broke off negotiations, with a threat to take their own means to remove the grievances of their subjects."

"After watching a fortnight, while an army corps was prepared and the reserves were being called out by the British, President Steyn asked the reason of these proceedings. Sir Alfred Milner refused to reply. Meanwhile Mr. Chamberlain in his speeches showed the world that England had decided on war. Accordingly, the Transvaal Government addressed to the British Government a demand for the removal of their troops, as otherwise it would accept the presence of the troops as a declaration of war. This was not necessarily intended as a message of war."

"Concerning the armaments, Mr. Retz says: 'These were bought openly in England and in Europe, and the High Commissioner boasted full knowledge of them at the Bloemfontein conference, and also full descriptions of these armaments were found among the officers' papers at Dundee. Both the army and the ultimatum were protective measures, subsequent to the raid and to the discovery through concealed cables, that British Ministers were implicated in the attempt to fish away the independence of the Republic. Now all doubt is removed by Lord Salisbury's telegram. The burgers must fight for their national existence, trusting that God will defend the right.'"

ROBERTS IN BLOEMFONTEIN.

Free Staters Well Satisfied with His Rule.

London, March 16.—Not only has General Roberts captured Bloemfontein, but by the gallantry of a handful of engineers, drawn from the force of general Kitchener, he was able to cross all the rolling stretch of the railway running through Bloemfontein, including twenty-six engines and numerous cars. This coup is one of immense importance, for it renders a thousand times more easy subsequent operations in the Free State. The first result of the capture was seen on the day following the seizure of the Free State capital, when General Pole-Carew with the battalions of Guards and the 1st Life Guards, sent by train to the south with the intention of effecting a junction with Gatacre and Clements north of the Orange River and at the same time cutting off the Boers defending the bridge, who are now in a perilous position with small chance of escape. Almost simultaneously with the departure of these troops General Gatacre surprised the Boers defending the bridge, who were now in a perilous position with small chance of escape. Almost simultaneously with the departure of these troops General Gatacre surprised the Boers defending the bridge, who were now in a perilous position with small chance of escape.

Meanwhile there is every indication that the burgers of the Free State are tired of the war and that some of them may lay down their arms, though the more extreme ones will doubtless join the Transvaal commandos and resist as long as they do. The tendency towards moderation and conciliation which Lord Roberts is displaying seems to guarantee this result and it is already reported that many burgers have already laid down their arms. So soon as the British Commander-in-Chief issues a proclamation offering amnesty to those who will surrender, which will probably be before long, it is certain that a general collapse of Free State resistance will take place through the northern districts, where Joubert and his commandos from Natal are collecting to oppose the onward march of the British, will probably, perforce, hold out until the war has passed over them.

The forward movement will not, in all probability, take place until the southern part of the Free State has been occupied and a junction effected with the Orange River.

IT WAS PEACEFUL.

Scenes at Surrender of Bloemfontein.

Newspaper Man Kater First.

Bloemfontein, March 16.—Just before the surrender of the town Gen. French sent out scouts to feel their way toward the town perceiving which the correspondents of the Sydney Herald and the London Daily News, with one other, galloped forward and entered the town, which were on every-day aspect. The people were out shopping or for morning walks, and at first the three newspaper men were regarded as townsmen. When later it became known that they were the first runners of the British army they were greeted cordially and conducted to a club, where they met Mr. Fraser of the Executive Council, the Mayor and other officials. These they persuaded to take carriages and go to meet Lord Roberts.

The party drove out of the city the British cavalry were closing around like a tight net. The deputation soon arrived opposite the house where Lord Roberts were standing, and this correspondent rode forward and had the honor of announcing to the commander-in-chief that Bloemfontein would surrender.

A little later the deputation began to approach, and Lord Roberts went forward to meet them. The scene was picturesque in the extreme. A few yards away the guns of a battery pointed their grim mouths toward the late position of the Boers, while the tiny staff of Bloemfontein shone in the distance.

After salutes had been exchanged a member of the deputation stepped forward and declared that the town being without defenses, wished to surrender, hoping that Lord Roberts would protect life and property. He replied that, provided there was no opposition, he would undertake to guarantee the security of both.

The interview was very cordial and without a sign of solemnity. It struck this correspondent that the deputation seemed relieved by the presence of the British troops. Lord Roberts notified the deputation of his intention of entering the town in state and they withdrew to inform the towns people.

The British found in the town most of their convoy which the Boers captured at the Riet River. They also secured the dynamite magazine, two wagon loads of Mauser ammunition and much railroad plant and bridging material and many prisoners. Numbers of burgers surrendered their arms.

Many had already fled for their homes and numbers are trekking east and north with their cattle and goods. Seven wounded British officers and sixty wounded men were found in the hospital.

Included in the number were several members of the Suffolk Regiment. Business has been resumed and all the barricades have been removed from the shops.

PRO-BOER GATHERINGS.

Disruption in the Imperial House Over the Recent Disturbances.

London, March 16.—In the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Balfour, replying to Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Opposition leader, who asked whether, in view of the numerous recent disturbances connected with peaceable meetings called to discuss South African affairs or directed against the persons of property of individuals because of their opinions, the Government would cause an inquiry as to fact and by whom the disturbances were organized and what steps would be taken to prevent their recurrence. Mr. Balfour said that every case of disturbance had been examined, and that the demonstrations appeared to be spontaneous. He added that the Government felt the responsibility with those who called the meetings in the heat of public feeling. They should be careful lest they set more than human nature could give.

The reply was regarded as unsatisfactory, and Sir Robert T. Reid, Liberal, moved an adjournment with the view of raising a question on the motion.

Sir William Vernon-Harcourt, Liberal, supported the motion to adjourn. He declared that Mr. Balfour's answer discouraged the right of public meeting.

Lord Fitzmaurice, Liberal member for the northern division of Wiltshire, suggested the Government could withhold the police grants in the districts where the police did not do their duty, and Mr. George Barclay, Conservative member for North Leinster, observed that those who held the meetings in question were "a parcel of semi-traitors and a handful of agitators."

He added that he was disgusted at the lack of feeling in the country, referring to the attempts to break up these meetings.

Mr. Henry Campbell-Bannerman said he thought the Government should have used all its influence in favor of free speech, and expressed regret at the fact that no more satisfaction was given.

Mr. Balfour re-iterated that protesters were not justified in forcing their ideas which, though possibly all right, were not agreeable to the majority of the nation. He denied that he had said anything inconsistent with the principles of free speech, and asserted the Government would do its best to see that the right of free speech in every legitimate form was safeguarded in every part of Her Majesty's dominions.

BOERS SURPRISED BY GATACRE.

He Now Occupies a Position on the North of the River.

Cape Town, March 16.—When Gen. Gatacre forced the passage of the Orange River at Bothalia yesterday morning he surprised the Boers. The British troops occupy a position on the north bank of the river with little opposition, and are now building a pontoon bridge.

CECIL RHODES ON FEDERATION.

We Must First Have Some Years of Crown Colony Government.

Cape Town, March 15.—In an interview published in the Cape Argus, Mr. Cecil Rhodes is quoted as saying: "I feel strongly that we cannot have peace in South Africa so long as we have in the Republic a rallying point for disloyalty and disaffection. To go further, I do not think we can safely federate till we have had some years of Crown Colony Government. Personally I have done with the Hund."

AGAINST WESTERN REBELS.

General Buller is Skirmishing West of the Railway.

Karrevind, March 14.—Gen. Buller's force from Orange River Station is skirmishing in western rebel districts, and had one man wounded. Several casualties are reported among the enemy. The City Imperial Volunteers cyclist corps has done great work.

IS PRESIDENT STEYN WILLING TO SURRENDER?

Lord Roberts Visits the Jail at Bloemfontein and Releases Four Prisoners Who Had Refused to Fight Against The British—New Officials.

Bloemfontein, Tuesday, March 13.—An army of 12,000 to 15,000 men, which is expected to replace the forces of Lord Roberts at Bloemfontein, as he pushes northward.

Just where the Boers will attempt to oppose that march is an important question, but it cannot be easily answered until General Joubert is more definitely located.

Mafeking Holding Out.

Further news has reached the outside world from Mafeking, dated Friday, March 9, showing that though the garrison was in hard straits, they were buoyed up by the knowledge that their plucky fight was appreciated at home.

CAPTURED THE ROLLING STOCK.

Boers Were Prevented from Removing Engines and Cars.

London, March 16.—The correspondent of the Daily News at Bloemfontein reports that the cutting of the track by Major Wood, who got behind the Boer lines, interrupted Gen. Joubert's intended advance northward on Tuesday. The move of Major Wood prevented the Boers from moving the engines and cars from Bloemfontein northward. Many engines were captured and General Roberts is enabled to use the captured rolling stock in his further operations.

STEYN RALLING BOERS.

But His Troops are Rapidly Disappearing from the Field.

London, March 16.—President Steyn since his arrival at Kroonstad is issuing counter proclamations and striving to rally his troops to the defense of the republic, but unless all signs fail his forces are rapidly disappearing from the field. The old order of government has lost its political centre with the surrender of the capital, and a new order of administration has been created under the British flag. Apparently Lord Roberts' main work during the next fortnight will be one of pacification and elaboration of order. He has paymasters who will buy supplies for his army of 50,000 men, and he also has disciplinarians who will enforce respect for private property. With gold to pay out and with soldiers under rigorous discipline Lord Roberts is likely to prove a successful politician in Bloemfontein.

NEWS FROM MAPEKING.

Garrison Still Holds Out Steadily on March Ninth.

London, March 16.—Further news has reached the outside world from Mafeking, dated Friday, March 9, showing that though the garrison was in hard straits they were buoyed up by the knowledge that their plucky fight was appreciated at home.

REJOICING IN CAPE COLONY.

Occupation of Bloemfontein was Celebrated by Joyful Salutes.

Cape Town, March 16.—There was great rejoicing throughout the colony upon the receipt of the news that Bloemfontein had been occupied by the British. The first intimation of the fact at Port Elizabeth was the firing of 21 guns at 11 o'clock in the evening. The inhabitants hastened to the streets and carried the Mayor to their doors to the town hall where a demonstration was made. To-day will be observed as a general holiday.

General Gatacre is holding Bothalia, and the whole line of the railroad north of Bloemfontein is now in the hands of the British. Gen. Brabant's column having crossed the Orange river, after a forced march at Aliwal North on Sunday, and

Gen. Clement's column being across at Varsity, the three columns will form an army of 12,000 to 15,000 men, which is expected to replace the forces of Lord Roberts at Bloemfontein, as he pushes northward.

Just where the Boers will attempt to oppose that march is an important question, but it cannot be easily answered until General Joubert is more definitely located.

 Present and only Issue of Bonds, $50,000

These bonds are payable to bearer and of the following denominations:—

Four Hundred Bonds of $500 each.

—AND—

Five Hundred Bonds of $100 each.

The above Company are issuing bonds to the amount of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually. Both principal and interest are payable at the Head Office of the Bank of Montreal, in the City of Montreal, and the principal is payable thirty years after the date of issue, redeemable, nevertheless, at the option of the Company, at the end of the first five years, by the Company giving notice to that effect in two daily newspapers published in Montreal three months previous to the expiration of the first five years, and without any premium or indemnity whatever to the bondholders.

DIRECTORS OF THE COMPANY.

 JOSEPH GAGNON, Merchant, Chicoutimi. J. B. A. DUBUC, Manager, Chicoutimi.
 DOCTOR J. A. COUTURE, Quebec.

ORGANIZATION.—The Company was organized in 1897, and has since carried on its business without interruption. It had then a daily output of fifteen tons of dry pulp; later on the capacity of the mill was increased to thirty tons of dry pulp daily. Last year, owing to the ready sale of the pulp, the Directors deemed it advisable still further to increase the production by adding three more grinders and a size-grinder-mill, with a capacity of fourteen thousand tons per annum. The Company paid a half yearly dividend at the rate of six per cent. per annum, the surplus profits over the dividend being spent on improvements and betterments.

There has never been a single share of the Capital of the Company on the market, and the new capital was entirely taken up by the original shareholders. FUTURE OF THIS MOND ISSUE.—The Company has to complete and equip another mill of greater capacity than the present one at a site only eight hundred feet distant. The new mill will have a capacity of twenty-eight thousand tons of pulp per annum, making the combined output of the two mills forty-two thousand tons of dry pulp per annum.

MILL SITE.—The mill is situated on the Chicoutimi River, near where it discharges into the Saguenay and within the limits of the Town of Chicoutimi, which Town is the terminus of the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway, and the head of navigation. The Chicoutimi and Ontario Navigation Company makes Chicoutimi the terminus of their line from Niagara to the Atlantic.

WATER POWER.—The water power developed for present requirements is estimated at eight thousand horse power. The head of water is seventy-five feet; sixty cubic feet of water passes through the mill every minute, and this all the year round. The water is conducted to the mill by a steel flume, eleven feet six inches in diameter. In the penstock are five wheels, three of forty inches, one of twenty-five inches and one of twenty inches. The Company possesses twenty-five thousand horse power. The water is clear, soft and free from all impurities. The river flows from Lake Kemouni which acts as a reservoir or settling pond; it flows for ten miles to the mill on its rocky bottom all the way. The wood is floated down the Chicoutimi River right to the mill where there is a good large enough to store nine hundred thousand logs without any danger whatever.

SHIPPING FACILITIES.—The Quebec and Lake St. John Railway runs close to the mill site, and from the main line a branch runs to the mill itself. In the mill are three saw tracks, which make shipping of the pulp after it is manufactured, and the receiving of the wood for manufacturing very convenient and cheap. An elevated cable trolley line takes the pulp from the mill to the harbour wharf on the Saguenay River, where it is loaded on barges for reloading on steamships. Which come within four miles of the mill, on the Saguenay, at a point where there is a splendid harbour for steamships of any size.

WOOD.—The Company owns 25,000 acres of timber limits, well covered principally with Black Spruce and some White and Gray Spruce. The black spruce is especially good for ground wood pulp, and turns out one hundred and fifty pounds more dry pulp per cord than any other spruce. Besides this a great quantity of the wood required for years to come can be had from the farmers in the neighbourhood. The Company has at present stored for winter use one hundred and eighty-three thousand logs twelve feet long.

PRESENT MILL.—The present plant employs one hundred and fifty men night and day, the new plant added will employ four hundred and fifty men.

FIRE PROTECTION.—In the yard are three large hydrants giving a constant pressure of forty-five pounds. There are always one thousand feet of hose ready for use in case of necessity.

FULL TRADE.—The Company has an assured market in England and France for the whole of its output. The output for this year (1899) is all sold. Orders have already been received from two firms in England for the whole product for 1901.

SHAVING ACCIDENTS.

THE BARBER DISCUSSES THEM WITH THE MAN IN HIS CHAIR.

Chances to Cut Throats That Are Not Often Taken Advantage Of—Narrow Escapes From Serious Mishaps—A Father's Dream.

The man in the chair sat up quickly and looked carefully at the barber, who was feeling the edge of the razor with one finger. The barber smiled to reassure his customer and said:

"It seems a queer question, I know, but it is a wonder to me that there are not a number of people killed in that way every year. It would be the easiest thing in the world for the barber as he wielded his razor to make one sweep with it and sever the jugular vein, and you would be dead almost on the instant. Suppose, for instance, that the barber should go insane. There would be nothing to prevent his doing such a thing, and you would have no warning nor any opportunity to save yourself.

"There is always a chance of a serious accident happening to the man in the chair. I have seen a number of such accidents and have a horror of even nicking the man I am shaving. In fact, such an occurrence makes me feel out of sorts for the rest of the day. It was only a few days ago that I almost had an accident that gave me a great fright and completely unnerved me. I was shaving a young man, and in passing from one side of the chair to the other a button of my waistcoat caught in his hair. It pulled and he moved his head suddenly just as I went to put the blade to his face. I came within an ace of slashing him, and only a quick jump back saved him. The perspiration stood out on me, and I had to call one of the other men to finish shaving my customer.

"But the worst accident I ever saw in a barber shop occurred while I was working in a small town in the west. One of the patrons of the place was a business man whose 8-year-old daughter was lying at the point of death. Her father put in most of his time at her bedside. One afternoon while she was asleep he came in here to get shaved. He was so exhausted through lack of sleep that he fell asleep immediately after he had taken his seat in the chair next to the one behind which I was at work.

"He dreamed that some one had come into the place to tell him that his child had died. With a cry of alarm he started up just as the barber laid the razor against his neck. Into the flesh it sank. He was not yet thoroughly awake, and as he imagined that some one was holding him back from his child he threw out his hand to free himself, and his fingers closed over the blade of the razor. So dazed was he that he could not realize what had happened, but sat there in the chair, with the blood streaming from his throat and fingers.

"The man who had done the cutting was the first to act, although he had groined. He hurried for a doctor while we stanchied the flow of blood the best we knew how. Even as the doctor was at work sewing up the wounds a messenger came to say that the little girl had died suddenly in the greatest agony, calling for her father just before she died. He was under the influence of ether at the time and did not know, but afterward, when he heard of the circumstances attending her death, he insisted that he had heard her call as he lay there asleep in the chair and that it was her cry that had caused him to make his sudden movement.

"For years after the accident he continued to share in the same shop where it had occurred, and it was never mentioned. He carried a reminder of it for the remainder of his life. In addition to the scar on his throat, the fingers of his right hand were all drawn up and useless.

"Sudden movements while in the barber's chair are always apt to be attended with serious results, and I could recall dozens of instances where it has been only the merest chance that has prevented serious if not fatal mishaps. Nine times out of ten where the person getting shaved receives a nick and lays the blame on the barber he should thank the wielder of the razor that it was so warm. The probabilities are that it was quick action by the barber that prevented a bad cut. A slight nick often would have been a case for the doctor or coroner were it not for the watchfulness of the barber. Here yesterday I happened to draw blood from a young fellow's face near his ear, and he made a great fuss about it, until I showed him that it was only the sudden withdrawal of the razor which resulted in the slight nick that prevented him losing a good part of his ear. Then he was grateful and thankful to me, besides promising to be more careful in the future.

"But there are other ways the barber has of getting even," continued the little barber after relating one side of his shaving a man. He can inflict injuries that will make his victim decidedly uncomfortable, and at the same time the latter will not be aware of what is being done." What the barber meant by this last remark his victim did not ask.—New York Sun.

A Clever Canine.

The dog "Sport," owned by Mr. Dickson W. Jewett, that performed at the smother held by the non-com. officers of the 57th Battalion on Thursday evening last, was a revelation to all present. Sport certainly is a clever dog and carried the audience by storm. Although nine years old, he is still in the ring, and fortuitously has few superiors. Sport made the hit of the evening.

Mr. Walter Stocker yesterday received a letter conveying to him the sad news of the death of his father, Mr. John Stocker, which took place at his home, Rawdon, Leinster, Ireland, on Feb. 26th. He was 70 years of age. He was for thirty-five years head gardener in a large establishment there. Friends of Mr. Stocker will sympathize sincerely with him in his sad event.

Sabbath School Convention.

The County Sabbath School convention opened last evening in the Y.M.C.A. Hall. There was a fair attendance. The meeting opened at 7.30 with a song service by Rev. Mr. Cross. Interesting addresses were delivered by Dr. Harrison, of Keweenaw, President of the County Association; Rev. Messrs. Shorey, Armitage, and others.

A Fine Investment.

Mr. Harold Jarvis was in fine voice, but not the least pleasure of the evening, from a highly musical standpoint, was that of the elegant Stanley piano used by Mr. Rogers. To such good effect. This instrument is well and appreciatively known among musicians, and a product of Peterborough which cannot be too highly spoken of from a musical standpoint. The rich sonorous tone and the handsome appearance of the instrument warranted the highest praise.

A Sudden Death.

A very sudden death occurred at Havens on Saturday night, when John Alexander Stewart, a young man in the flower of manhood, expired at the Graham House, from a paralytic stroke. The deceased was a very robust young man, had a previous attack in December last, while working at the Belmont gold mines. He recovered soon after and was apparently in good health. Last week he attended D. T. Young's sale, and while proceeding towards called in at the Graham House to get warm. After sitting in a chair for a few minutes his body became rigid and it was at once apparent that he had a severe stroke. Medical aid was called in but no relief could be given and he passed away the border about six o'clock on Saturday evening.

A SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

Annual Report of the London Life Insurance Company.

We congratulate the General Manager and Directors of the London Life Insurance Company on the result of the year's operations. The strong financial position attained by this progressive Canadian Company is one that reflects credit on the management. The net receipts for the year 1899 were $368,146.36, being an increase of $28,977.11 over the previous year. The sum of $47,967.11 was paid to policy-holders or their heirs. The assets of the Company were increased by $168,243.34, being now $775,423.33.

The Company's interests are looked after by Mr. George Lee, who has charge of Peterborough district, whose office is at 335 Water street. Mr. Alex Campbell is the agent in Peterborough, while Mr. W. F. Begley, is the Lindsey representative.

This being the quarter century of the Company's organization, the occasion was celebrated in London by a three-days' convention, at the head office, of prominent agents, etc., of the Company. Representatives of the Company were present from Winnipeg, Manitoba, in the west, and Halifax, Nova Scotia, in the east, and from all the cities and principal towns in Ontario. A number of interesting and instructive papers on topics pertaining to the business of life insurance were read and discussed. The Free Press says that after the holding of the annual meeting a "musical" and "at home" was tendered the visiting agents, by the Directors and Officers of the Company. A most enjoyable evening was spent, which terminated with an oyster supper and the hearty singing of "God Save the Queen."

HIGH CLASS CONCERT.

Standing Room at a Premium in the Opera House Last Night.

Last night the large opera house was crowded to the doors, every seat being taken in advance.

The following programme was admirably rendered, and very much appreciated by the large audience. Encores being called for in every case.

The following was the programme rendered:

Cello—Simple Aveu—Thome. Mr. Hahn.
Recitation—"Bobs"—Rudyard Kipling. Miss Alexander.
Vocal—"Out of the Depths"—Mr. Jarvis.
Recitation—"Wee Tey Table"—Shan Bullock. Miss Alexander.
Cello—Serenade Badine—Gabrielle Marie. Mr. Hahn.
Vocal—"I am Wearin' awa Jean"—Footie. Mr. Jarvis.
Recitation—"Coming of the Bagpipes"—Morford. Miss Alexander.
Cello—Gavotte—Popper. Mr. Hahn.
Recitation—Selected. Miss Alexander.
Vocal—"Her Little Patch of Red"—(Patriotic)—Harrison. Mr. Jarvis.

Among the encores given were "Ordered to Sleep," "The Hobson Kins" and "Christmas" by Miss Jessie Alexander, "The Absent Minded Beggar," "Take the Muzzle of the Lion," by Mr. Harold Jarvis. Herr Paul Hahn charmed all present by his selections. Mr. Charles J. Rogers has given the public a treat in bringing to Peterborough such talent and he deserves great credit for his work.

A Voluntary Testimonial from Mr. Harold Jarvis.

Peterborough, March 14, '00
Gentlemen,—I desire to express the pleasure I feel in testifying to the excellent quality of your piano. The singing tone and volume is all that could be desired from a musician's standpoint.

Sincerely yours,

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

The Colts are asking the Examiner "Wot yer givin' us? They say that our up town contemporary ought to know that the game with Lindsey was really with the bank team; but some of the latter couldn't play, and a mixed team was brought together."

There is no reason why challenges issued unofficially to some reporter in Toronto should be accepted by the Colts. If the Whiffy team wants a game with the Colts why don't they write to the secretary of the club and find out if there is any chance of such a thing.

F.O.B. asks: What is an average pair in a game of poker?

This expression is usually applied to hands upon which a player stands an average chance of winning any pot which is not a jack. Some persons call them "average go-in-hands," and experts are about agreed that such a hand should be a pair of tens.

W.B. says: The second player from the dealer opens a jack pot and the next player to him is the only one that stays. When the dealer comes to draw he finds that he did not hold open ers. What should be done?

The player who comes in against him in good faith to play for the pot taken it. A jack pot once opened, even two, must be played for if there are two in it.

J.H.G. says: The dealer gives one player six cards before the draw. This player insists it is a misdeal.

If the player has not lifted his hand from the table and has not looked at any card of it, he can raise upon it new deal if he has not been made, or he may ask the dealer to withdraw the superior card. If he has lifted his hand or looked at any card in it, his hand is foul.

H.H. says: A held the ace, 2, 3, 4, 5 of hearts, while B held the Q, J, 10, 9. Which hands wins? A says his hands is ace high.

When a player uses the ace to form the bottom of a sequence it loses its rank as a high card, and a straight which has only five high cards, if it flush is ace high, but his flush will not beat B's hand.

C.E.K. asks if the dealer is not obliged to discard before he draws, just as the other players are.

According to the strict rules of the game he is, but it is a very common thing to ride the dealer to run off his own cards while he has the pack in hand, saying, "I want three," or what ever the number may be, discarding afterward. It was on account of this practice that the rule was made that if the dealer ran off more cards than he wanted he would have to take them even if it broke up his hand.

Seven-up G.T. says: In a game of seven-up between two players, there is not a card as high as a ten in either hand. Who scores the point for game, or is there no game out?

When it comes to a game out, a tie, or when there is no game out, the non-dealer scores game. The latter is a rare occurrence, but it is provided for in the laws.

Picnic, W.B. says: One of the decisions given two weeks ago is not in accord with the rules of the game as played in Peterborough and most therefore be wrong.

Players at Peterborough are at liberty to make whatever rules they please for their own game, and many of them have introduced some very curious ones, but they would be foolish to be on them, because there are some people who know what makes a game a game.

The game did not originate in Peterborough.

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absent-minded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shelved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems:

Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absent-minded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in communities, the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as man generally is an animal who usually refuses to live the life spanned out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forthwith by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopuslike brain cell is a tiny little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is conducted by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now, the object of this "strike" is simply to avoid overwork, for each tiny cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in those patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupefied, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now come working, and the man sleeps like one dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken, the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Geniuses are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and, singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England for example, Cromwell was a hypochondriac and had visions, Dean Swift inherited insanity and was himself not a little mad. Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley," Charles Lamb went crazy, Johnson was a morbid maniac, Coleridge was a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (madness ideas of madness are largely formed on the descriptions evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity as depicted or, in phrase, it more softly, induced disturbance of the mental equilibrium.

The remaining problem is absent-mindedness. This is produced by a temporary disjunction of certain groups of cells. A man becomes so absorbed in his study of some particular subject and tends to lose the whole mind to thought that the hard thinking disorganizes the groups of cells employed in the process of reflection, their tentacles being turned all one way, to the detriment of mental action generally, and so the man with the tentacles of his brain cells turned in the one direction, pays no heed to the streets he is on, or to the manner of people he meets, and does all manner of queer things because he is not paying attention to his surroundings.

STANLEY.

One of Canada's most progressive and progressive pianos. Five pianos in all respects and produced under the guidance of an acknowledged expert, Mr. Frank Stanley.

The "Stanley" piano has made remarkable progress and is today regarded as amongst the most desirable and popular of Canada's musical products. Made by a company of unquestionable financial standing, and supported by one of the recognized experts in modern piano construction, the "Stanley" certainly has before it a most promising future. As a musical instrument, the "Stanley" piano possesses many features of merit. It combines the best characteristics of the Canadian product with those peculiar to the factories in the States, in which latter Mr. Charles Stanley served through a large share of his preparatory and early years in the industry. The "Stanley" tone is full and of admirable quality; the construction is conscientious and thorough; the case possesses a style and finish of peculiar beauty. Altogether the "Stanley" piano is designed to make a strong bid for permanent popularity and lasting fame. It has already gained the endorsement of many eminent pianists and critics and is in use in some of the foremost schools and institutions throughout the Dominion of Canada. In a commercial sense, too, the Stanley Piano Company, Ltd., is well equipped for a successful and progressive career. Its officers are men of ample capital, President A. L. Davis being one of the active citizens of the wide awake city of Peterborough, in which the main factory of the Stanley piano is located.—The Piano Buyer's Guide.

MAKING RELIEF FORCE IN A SHARP ENGAGEMENT

The British Succeed in Scattering the Enemy at Fourteen Streams.

BADEN-POWELL ARMS NATIVES FOR DEFENCE.

Deserters Have Come in at Belmont With a Maxim, a Nine-Pounder and Another Gun—Methuen Reached Warrenton in Time to Save a Bridge.

London, March 18.—The War Office received the following despatch from Field Marshal Roberts dated Bloemfontein, March 18: "The Guards Brigade returned yesterday from Norval's Point. Several burghers have laid down their arms to General Pole-Carew at Edenburg and elsewhere. The officer commanding at Belmont reports that some deserters have come in with a maxim, a nine-pounder and another gun. The nine-pounder has been brought into Colerberg. The cavalry brigade has gone to Thaba Naba in order to reassure the inhabitants of the district and to distribute copies of the proclamation to the Free State. These proclamations are being eagerly sought after. Lord Methuen reached Warrenton on March 18. He was in time to prevent the Deviation bridge from being completely destroyed and to secure the Point on the Vaal. The English mail was despatched from here by rail yesterday and tomorrow the regular railway service with Cape Town will be re-opened. Mafeking reports that all was well on March 6.

Cape Town, March 18.—The Mafeking relief column, Colonel Drummond and Peckham commanding, had a sharp engagement at Fourteen Streams. The British succeeded in driving the Boers off. They had only a few casualties.

Lubatie, March 10.—It is reported that Commandant Kloof with a command has left Herut for Mafeking. Commandant Schalks with one hundred and fifty men is threatening the railway near Aasvogel Kop north of Lubatie. A British patrol which reconnoitred within 14 miles of Mafeking found the railway unharmed and the telegraph wires untouched north of Plettenburg.

Lorenzo Marques March 15.—A despatch from Mafeking, dated Saturday, March 15, says: "The garrison is holding its own. We have heard numerous rumors that the siege will be raised, but so far this is not the case. We are paying away patiently on our ration tickets supplemented by the occasional capture of cattle. Our home made gun eventually bombarded the Boer trenches. Horrible stories are in circulation that the Boers are inflicting nameless tortures upon captured natives. These may not be true but they are tending to inflame native passions to such an extent that it may soon be impossible to hold the natives in check. Owing to the Boers having deliberately bombarded the native staff, which is full of women and children, Col. Baden-Powell has armed the natives, but he has only allowed them to act on the defensive, although they have claimed to be allowed to go out and attack, at the point of the assegai. They will be prevented as long as possible from inflicting reprisals on the Boers."

Pretoria, March 4th.—It is officially stated that the siege of Mafeking has been raised and the town relieved. The British soldiers have been removed from the model schools to new quarters on the outskirts of the town.

Bloemfontein, March 17.—Gen. Pole-Carew's force has returned from Springfontein, where a junction was effected with Gen. Gatacre. Gen. Pole-Carew also proceeded to Norval's Point, from which point he telegraphed to Gen. Clements that 800 Free State men had submitted at Edenburg.

Pretoria, March 18.—Major-General, the Chief of the Intelligence Department, announces that the Federal forces prior to the relief of Kimberley and Ladysmith were killed 677; wounded 2,131; sick and other disabilities, 1,000; and other disabilities, 1,000.

London, March 19.—A despatch to the Times from Ladysmith dated Sunday, March 18, says: "The advanced camp is on Sunday River, two miles north of Blomfontein. The Boers held two positions on the Blomfontein range, about ten miles north. The strongest is on the Newcastle road, where several guns have already been mounted and where they are digging extensive trenches. The second position, which is on the Dundee road, is not so strong.

SITUATION IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Foreign Conclusion that Transvaal Will Soon Stand Alone.

London, March 17.—The full effect of the occupation of Bloemfontein is rapidly making itself felt. The Boers of the Free State are already surrendering in large numbers and it is a foregone conclusion that before many days are passed the Transvaal will stand alone in the struggle. South of Bloemfontein the opposition to the British has disappeared, and General Pole-Carew, with two divisions of Guardsmen, has been able to proceed by train to Springfontein unopposed, and has already effected a junction with General Gatacre, advancing from Bethulie. The Boer under Commandant Oliver, who made some show of opposing General Brabant and his brigade of colonial mounted infantry across the river from Alwal North, have retreated, and this British force will doubtless at once follow General Gatacre to Springfontein. General Clements is busy engaged in repairing the railway bridge at Norval's Point, in a short time rain will be running direct from Cape Town, Port Elizabeth and East London to Bloemfontein, which will become of great value to General Roberts as an advanced base for a movement northward towards the Vaal, which forms the border of President Kruger's land. Gen. Gatacre's engineers are undoubtedly repairing the bridge at Bethulie, which will give the British a second line from the sea to the Orange River. So that southern Cape Colony and the Orange Free State south of the capital is in British hands, the last vestige of rebellion in the one and the opposition in the other having been stamped out. The accomplishment of these things will give General Roberts fully 10,000 additional men after deduction from the Orange River force a sufficient number of men to garrison the captured border towns.

The reconnaissance of General Dundonald's cavalry along the Drakensberg from Bantololand to De Beers Pass gives some indication of the plan of the British commander-in-chief, which is to effect a junction with Gen. Buller as soon as his own advance northward in the Free State shall have uncovered the passes sufficiently to allow the Natal force to march through them. The main objective is, of course, Van Rensselaer's Pass, which will give Roberts another line of communication into the Free State from Durban.

Late in the day a relief column is being organized at Kimberley by Lord Kitchener for the relief of Mafeking. With the severe fighting which the column is sure to encounter the siege of Mafeking may be raised in the next three weeks unless Colonel Plumer is able to perform the feat.

OLIVER HAS FALLEN BACK.—There is who Oppose Brabant Retreat During the Night. Alwal North, March 17.—Commandant Oliver evacuated his position on a hill in front of the British commanded by Brabant during the night. Several Boers of his force surrendered. Mr. Dewet, a member of the Cape Parliament, and his brother, have been arrested. Fifty rebels have surrendered their arms, and been dispatched to their homes. Most of them were heavily armed—armed by the Boers, who made promises of payment, which were never fulfilled.

ARE AT SPRINGFONTEIN.

Gatacre's Scouts Occupy Springfontein Followed by Main Body. Bethulie, March 16.—General Gatacre's scouts have occupied Springfontein. The country is clear of the enemy. The main column is following the route.

ENCOUNTERED THE ENEMY.

Dundonald's Cavalry Has a Small Skirmish With Boers.

Ladysmith, March 16.—Lord Dundonald's cavalry patrols reconnoitred the Free State border from Bantololand to De Beers Pass, where a slight skirmish occurred in which two British were wounded. The Boers were also encountered in strength at Van Rensselaer's Pass and Tlaser Pass.

GATACRE IS TO BLAME.

General Roberts on the Disaster at Bloemfontein.

London, March 18.—Lord Roberts is transmitting General Gatacre's report of the Bloemfontein disaster, given in his opinion.

THE HAY-PAUNCEFOTE CANAL TREATY AMENDED.

A Foolish Change Proposed by the United States Senate's Committee on Foreign Affairs.

SIR WILLIAM VAN HORNE'S GREAT RAILWAY SCHEME.

A Proposal on Foot to Buy Up All Railway Lines in Cuba and Extend Them as Far as Possible

Washington, D.C., March 18.—The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations has agreed to report an amendment to the Hay-Pauncefote canal treaty providing that the United States may take such measures to "defend" the canal as its safety may make necessary, except that it shall not "fortify" it. It is probable that the treaty will be ratified with this amendment, and it also seems probable that it will be accepted by Great Britain. Whether other nations, whose consent is necessary to neutralize the canal, will also agree is more doubtful. As a matter of fact, the United States seems to have overreached itself in this matter. To reserve the right to "defend" the canal is to give up all the advantages of neutralization and gain little or nothing in return. If the United States goes to war with any nation and takes measures to defend the canal, the other nations will of course be entitled to take measures to attack and capture it. Without fortifications it will become the prey of the strongest fleet, which is the object of the power. Of course, if the United States proposes to build a fleet which will rival any combination of the powers, it will be all right. Otherwise, no.

VAN HORNE'S MOVEMENTS.

Private letters received from Cuba report that Sir William Van Horne, formerly president of the Canadian Pacific railway and still chairman of its board of directors, has recently sailed from there to the United States, after having investigated the railway situation in the island. It is understood there that he proposes, in connection with the Bank of Montreal, to organize a syndicate to buy all the lines and extend them as rapidly as possible under the Fortaker act, it is not possible for any fresh corporations to be formed, but it is still possible for existing lines to be extended, and after a while the law will surely be repealed and there will be a chance to consolidate. This, it is understood, is Sir William's plan. He is also said to have been looking into the street railways of the island.

THE RAILWAY SITUATION.

The railway situation in this country has been greatly affected by the proposed competition of the Canadian canal in the carriage of wheat, etc., from the upper great lakes to the sea. With the new deep canal, it will be possible to carry grain from Chicago to Montreal at 8 cents a bushel with fair profit, so that unless some means are found to meet this sale on this side of the border, the United States may look to see its grain trade diverted to Canadian ports from New York and home cities. Accordingly, efforts are now being made to reduce rail rates as low as possible. Those from Chicago to New York have been reduced to less than 8 cents a bushel, in some cases as low as 6 cents. The railways east from Buffalo are also said to be trying to secure control of the large lake grain steamer so as to get control of the traffic by making lower rates than would be profitable by other routes. It may be taken as a fact that, in the near future, it will not be possible for the grain rates from Chicago to the sea by any route to be more than 6 cents a bushel, with other commodities in proportion.

MOUNTED RIFLES PAT.

Ottawa Government Files It at Seventy-five Cents a Day.

Ottawa, March 18.—The Government's decision to make the pay of the mounted rifles 75 cents a day instead of 60 cents has caused considerable satisfaction. The decision was to have a sliding scale of pay, and the new arrangement is received with favor. The pay of the first contingent is to be 50 cents a day, 25 cents from the Imperial treasury and 25 cents from the treasury of Canada. The mounted rifles pay is made up of 25 cents a day from the British Government and 17 cents from Canada. It is altogether likely that the pay of the men composing the Halifax garrison will be 50 cents a day.

HAS MAKING BEEN RELIEVED?

Persistent Report in London Which is Not Confirmed.

London, March 17.—It is persistently reiterated that Mafeking has been relieved, but the War Office has no information confirming the rumor.

GUARD ON LINE OF COMMUNICATION.

Canadians Will Not Participate in the Fighting Which Will Occur Soon.

Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, March 16.—The Canadian troops were this morning ordered to the outskirts of Bloemfontein, to guard the northern section of the line of railway between this point and Springfontein.

General Pole-Carew has arrived at Springfontein with detachment of mounted infantry, and will patrol the lower portion of the line between here and there. Thus the entire line of railway between Bloemfontein and Springfontein is now in British hands, and there is practically an all-rail communication between the late Free State capital and Cape Town. There are a number of reports to be made to the railway line between Bloemfontein and Springfontein, and the Canadians will be engaged in this work for some days. The despatch with which our men did similar work on the line of communication between De Aar and Kimberley has evidently impressed the

JOHN BULL DON'T LIKE UNCLE SAM'S MEDDLING

Peace Overtures of United States Have Sensibly Irritated Great Britain.

THE OFFER REPEATED MIGHT PROVE DANGEROUS.

The United States Contrasted With France—M. Delcasse, M. De Mad Wished, Could Have Gratified Most of the French Sentiment by Making Similar Offer.

London, March 17.—Between the lines of the spiritedly worded editorial comments on President McKinley's expression of willingness to aid in the restoration of peace between Great Britain and the Boer republic can be discerned many evidences of an inward irritation which it seems reasonable to suppose does not hesitate to outwardly express, while even members of the cabinet privately display plumes that of all the powers America should have contented to assume what one official designate was "the ungracious rule of engaging some form of interference," to which he added this expression—"England cannot help contrasting the perfect correctness of the attitude of openly unfriendly France with the offer of the United States, which, if it had come from a less disinterested source, could only have been regarded as an unfriendly act."

There is no doubt that the overtures of the United States, even though carefully worded, have sensibly irritated Great Britain as a whole, with official especially friendly to the United States express open regret at the opportunity offered to critics to compare the refusal of M. Delcasse, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, to gratify the hostile sentiment in France by making proposals to Lord Salisbury which were sure of rejection with what they termed the "interference" of Washington and which, though only tentative, and clothed in words of perfect friendliness and courtesy, came at an inopportune moment when the supreme self-sufficiency of the British Empire was the predominating feeling of the day.

Everywhere one hears expressions of satisfaction, that while the answer to the proposal was clothed in words of perfect courtesy, the language of Lord Salisbury in "brutalizing" and "President McKinley's proffer was so extremely definite as to kill all possibility of a repetition of the offer from any source, unless those proposing them are desirous of being recognized as openly antagonistic to this country. Emphasis is laid on the fact that Great Britain had declared at the outset her unwillingness to consent to any outside interference and, therefore, according to the well-established principle of international law, that the right of intervention is conditional on the willingness of both parties to the quarrel to accept the good offices of a mediating power, such interference was, in this case, outside the bounds of diplomatic possibilities and gave Lord Salisbury full justification for his "rejoinder courteous."

METHUEN SHIFTS RESPONSIBILITY.

He Blames Wauchops and Hughes-Hallet for Magerfontein.

London, March 18.—The London Gazette this morning publishes Gen. Lord Methuen's report of the action at Magerfontein, Dec. 10 and Dec. 11, dated from the Modder River, Feb. 11. After explaining the attitude of any attempt to flank 14,000 Boers, and arguing that a blow dealt at the Boer centre at Magerfontein would be more effective, describes how the Highland brigade was led to the point of assault after the late Major-General Andrew G. Wauchops had previously explained all he intended to do, and the particular part each battalion was expected to play, Lord Methuen then remarks:

"Two rifles accidentally went off, and the flashes from a lantern gave the enemy timely notice of the march." The report then proceeds to show Gen. Wauchops deployed his men too late, and, suddenly, the Boers poured in a heavy fire. Colonel Hughes-Hallet immediately ordered the Seaforth to charge, and the other columns followed suit. At this moment some one gave the word to retire, and part of the Black Watch rushed back through the ranks of the Seaforth. Colonel Hughes-Hallet ordered the latter to retire, and the Seaforth followed suit. The report then proceeds to show Gen. ### THE LEINSTEARS HONORED.

They Marched Through the Streets of Halifax to Mass.

Halifax, N.S., March 17.—St. Patrick's day was greeted with fine weather. The wearing of the green in general, flags and streamers are flying in countless numbers and the shop windows are decorated with the Irish colors. The Leinster regiment paraded the streets to early mass and were cheered all along the line of march by thousands. Flags are flying from local and Dominion Government buildings for the first time here. St. Patrick's day in honor of the brave Dublin Fusiliers and other Irish soldiers who fought so gallantly on Africa soil for the British flag.

GATACRE WAS NOT OPPOSED

He Entered Bethulie at the Invitation of the Inhabitants.

London, March 17.—General Gatacre's occupation of Bethulie was not opposed. He learned Thursday morning that the enemy were evacuating the town and he accordingly crossed the bridge which he had held for days with a strong reconnoitering force. The advance across the intervening open ground was not challenged. As the British approached the town a detachment of the inhabitants met them with a white flag, and intimated that no defense was intended. They said that the Boer forces had left the town during the night, moving it was understood in the direction of Swartkops.

under compulsion. Many hundreds of the Free State citizens wish to cheer, and submit. They will, no doubt, be strengthened in their resolution by the kindness and generosity Lord Roberts has shown towards the Boer prisoners, especially the wounded, and still more will they be moved when they come to know the fact, by accumulating evidence, that they have nothing to hope from European or American intervention.

PHIVAT HAYES WOUNDED.

Member of the Contingent from Mafeking Injured at Lifford.

London, March 17.—The Canadian wounded at Lifford on March 17th was private R. Hayes of "H" Company, 10th Battalion. Private O. Matheson, 10th Battalion, Canadian Artillery, who was with "H" Co., or Quebec Company, is seriously ill at Cape Town.

BOERS ARE VINDICTIVE.

They Burn Kaffir Kraals While Retreating from Natal.

Durban, March 17.—Kaffirs arriving here report that the Boers are manifesting a very vindictive spirit under defeat and that many kraals hitherto respected have been burned. The German ambulances attached to the Boer forces were found near Mader Spruit abandoned by the Boers. The physicians in charge were unable to move and were brought into camp, where the wounded were cured for. Transports were subsequently supplied and the ambulances were sent to the Boer lines.

CANADIAN ENGINEER AT WORK.

Giroard Will Put His System into Vogues and Four in Supply.

London, March 17.—The revolt of the Cape Dutch in the northeast corner have had its back broken, and it is likely General Kitchener will soon resume his place beside his chief.

The fact that the British troops in Natal and the Free State respectively brings no rest to the engineers and transport service. Giroard, the young Canadian officer, who rules as supreme over the railways, is now putting his system to the most severe test in an endeavor to pour supplies from Cape Town into Bloemfontein.

SCAVENGER OF THE WELT.

The Scavenger, which keeps the world clean.

Although the term "vulture" has been used for all time as a term of the vilest prophetic, no one who knows the bird, its appearance and its habits could doubt for a moment that it represents a depth of degradation which is barely conceivable.
And yet the vulture does a great deal of good in acting as the scavenger of the welt. But for his quick eye, his keen nose, and his power of flight, the world would be a far more filthy and dangerous place. Throughout South Africa is found the vulture. Go anywhere you like on the veldt, and you will find it. It is the probability of the vulture that the disease germs in the carcasses of dead oxen would be far more prolific and dangerous.

A farmer, or hunter, soon knows if any one or more of his oxen have been killed. He goes down to the spot, or sees the carcass, and he knows. The vulture

Hardly has the breath left the body of the poor ox than you may observe far away up in the sky a large black speck, then another and another and another, until there are 20 of them. Gradually they get larger and larger, circling round in ever diminishing circles all the while they descend. The vulture is the scavenger of the welt. It is the probability Whitaker's Predicament.

Whitaker held "Gill Hamilton" (Alderman in the House) in the highest esteem, and the letters that passed between them were really most delightful. Here is one of the series in The Ladies Home Journal that is truly characteristic of Whitaker. It was written in 1898:
"I must tell you something of my life. Last week the Amoskeag veterans from New Hampshire and a Massachusetts company, with military bands, came and paraded before our house and Governor Smith of New Hampshire and one or two officers called on me. When they left and I stepped out to see them civilly off, the men in epaulettes got up a grand military salute with music and three cheers and wind up with 'Was over a Quaker in such a predicament? I did, I fear, somewhat compromise myself by lifting, almost involuntarily, my hand to my hat.
But I resisted the temptation and only pulled my hat lower down over my brows
by way of testimony."

A QUEER SENSATION.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE HELD UP AT
THE POINT OF A REVOLVER.

Curious Phenomenon That Causes
Each Man in a Roomful to Believe That a Weapon is Pointed Straight at His Own Head.

"If you will take my word for a little experience I had recently, perhaps I can make clear to you how it is possible for three bad men to hold up a roomful of fairly brave men and get away easily with their money," said a merchant from the state of Washington who was a guest at the Lotus club one night recently. "I was in such a hold up not long ago, and I have ceased feeling as fellows who have been through similar experiences. I was one of 70 men who were held up in a big building hall, and as I am not a regular patron of such places I kept quiet about it at home. The gambling house is one of the best known in the west, and on the night of the hold up it was filled with a representative crowd. I saw several have disclosed the fact undoubtedly that many of the men present were armed.
No trouble in the present years has occurred in this place, and there was no reason to anticipate any. It was nearly midnight when the door opened and three men, masked and each holding two revolvers,
entered the room.

"Hands up, quick!" shouted the foremost man.

"I was sitting at a faro table when I heard this command, and as I looked up I found a revolver pointing straight at my head. When I compared notes with the other seventy men later, I found that each one had the same experience.

There were only six revolvers, and yet each man in the room was willing to swear that one of them was pointed at his head all the time. The crowd was simply paralyzed with fright. For two or three seconds not a man moved. Then over in one corner a Leadville sport brought his hand around to reach his hip pocket.

"Stop that or I'll shoot," said one of the masked men, covering him with his revolver. "Hands up, now; quick! We mean business."

It is easy to see in that room did hold his hands up. There was no hesitation then.
It was my first experience in that kind of game, but it was not until I was able to take my hands down that I realized
how tireless the operation was.

We stood, each man with his hands stretched high above his head, held up in a room on a busy street when an outcry was heard. The help at once. It was a pretty sure thing, however, that no one would make the outcry. The three masked men had eyes for every move, and their revolvers pointed all ways at once.

It is easy to see in that room did hold
his hands up. There was no hesitation then.
It was my first experience in that kind
of game, but it was not until I was able to take my hands down that I realized
how tireless the operation was.

"Now then, my friends here will require your assistance without your assistance," said the spokesman. "Do not move, because there are two dead shots behind you. Keep quiet, and it will soon be over."

It was a very cool piece of work. I can assure you. One of the three went straight down the row, taking each man's watch and money. He didn't get as much as he expected, and as near as we could estimate the haul was worth about $5,000. There was over $100,000 in the safe which the robbers overlooked.
When we had been cleared out, the spokesman said:

"Now, gentlemen, we are sorry to inconvenience you further, but we shall have to request you to stand just as you are for five minutes more. Don't cut the time short, or you will get hurt."

"The safe door opened at this instant, and we heard the order 'Stand up, Chinese, or you're a dead man!' It was one of our Chinese servants who was returning with a tray filled with drink.

He promptly dropped his tray, smashing
all the glasses and threw up his hands.
We heard no other sound for five minutes. Each man counted the seconds to make sure that he shouldn't cut down his hands ahead of time. The proprietor was the first man to move. As soon as he felt that he was safe he turned and found the robbers gone. He picked up a heavy chair and threw it through the window. It carried the sash with it, and the crash that followed attracted general attention in the street below.

The proprietor stuck his head out of the window and profusely shouted such details of the hold up as might put the people in the street on the track of the robbers. It was useless, however. The fellows waited out quietly, took all their masks and disappeared without leaving any clue.

We all piled out of the place to aid the search. When we found out that a chase was hopeless, most of us came back to the gambling room to try to find them. When we entered the place, we found the Chinese standing in the ruins of his glasses with his hands still above his head. The proprietor told him to take his hands down.
The Chinaman didn't do it, and two men who pulled his arms to his side had all they could do to hold him. He had looked in the big barrel of one of those small revolvers, and he hadn't forgotten it.

"Now this was an actual experience, and some of your New York papers had accounts of it. If I were mixed up in an affair of that sort again, I would raise my arms just as quickly. It was expedient and not a yellow streak that made that crowd act as it did."

My friend, the Alderman, said:
"In the Delaware water, England,
there is a species of fish called sandwich, which are never caught alive. They are said to frequent the deeper parts of the lake and are never met with in the rivers. One or two dead specimens of the breed which have been found in the lake are preserved as curiosities."

Further facts.
Though it is a common name, there are many such diversity of opinions and scientific particulars as to be able to produce almost any product known to man.

CHURCH AND CHURCHMEN

The old "Second church" in Boston celebrated its two hundred and fiftieth anniversary recently.

The Universalist church reports 1,008 parishes and 47,471 families, an increase of about 1,200 families over last year.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale will not occupy the pulpit of his church in Boston again until spring. Dr. Lyman Abbott will be the supply for the month of January.

Rabbi Emanuel Schreiber of Youngstown, O., who has been chosen rabbi of the Emanuel synagogue of Chicago, is 45 years old and a native of Austria. He is a doctor of the Royal college of Vienna and has written a number of religious works.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Glassware should be washed in warm water with a dash of soap powder, rinsed off in clear, warm water and polished with soft linen towels.

Hot or cold water cans or jugs should be turned upside down when not in use, so that they can drain and dry thoroughly. If left damp, they will rust inside and be spoiled, because rust eats holes in the metal.

For dishwashing kerosene oil has been found to form an emulsion with the grace, so that a few drops of kerosene dropped into cold or tepid water will keep knife handles from being injured, as in the case where soap and hot water are used.

Uncle "Zek" Watson was accustomed to seeing good sized squares of cup cake, "lemon cake and gingerbread on the summer table, and when he had his first plate of ice cream in a city restaurant he looked with some disfavor upon the macaroons and small sponge drops which accompanied it.

"How do you like it?" asked his niece, who was doing the honors of
the city for her uncle.

"The ice cream is first rate," said
Uncle "Zek." "I call it entry good.
But when you come to these things,"
he added, lifting one of the sponge
"lady fingers" and surveying it doubt-fully, "I presume to say they're all right enough, what there is of 'em,
but there isn't enough of 'em; just nothing but gape and swallow!"

When I consider what some doctors have done for the world and what they are doing, how they keep up our hope, awaken new courage and faith, soothe pain, give an ideal life to those whose homes are hard and cold, bind together distant ages and foreign lands, create new worlds of beauty, bring down truths from heaven, I give eternal thanks for this gift—James Prescott Clarke.

India Rubber Industry.
The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagoa is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted.
There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important source of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

(Incorporated by Letters Patent)

Authorized Capital, - - $1,000,000
 Subscribed and Paid-up - - 500,000
 Present and only Issue of Bonds, 250,000

These bonds are payable to bearer and of the following denominations:—

Four Hundred Bonds of $500 each.

—AND—

Five Hundred Bonds of $100 each.

The above Company are issuing bonds to the amount of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable semi-annually. Both principal and interest are payable at the Head Office of the Company, in the City of Montreal, and the principal is payable thirty years after the date of issue, redeemable, nevertheless, at the option of the Company, at the end of the first five years, by the Company giving notice to that effect in two daily newspapers published in Montreal three months previous to the expiration of the first five years, and without any premium or indemnity whatever to the bondholders.

PRINCIPAL SHAREHOLDERS.

NEMESSE GARNHEAU, M.L.A., Quebec. GANFARD LEMOINE, Quebec.
 JOSEPH GAGNON, Merchant, Chicoutimi. J. R. A. DUBUC, Manager, Chicoutimi.
 DOCTOR J. A. COUTURE, Quebec.

ORGANIZATION.—The Company was organized in 1897, and has since carried on its business without interruption. It had then a daily output of fifteen tons of dry pulp; later on the capacity of the mill was increased to thirty tons of dry pulp daily. Last spring, owing to the ready sale of the pulp, the Directors deemed it advisable still further to increase the production by adding two more grinders and a fine-grinder-mill, with a capacity of fourteen thousand tons per annum, and the Company paid a half yearly dividend at the rate of six per cent per annum, the surplus profits over the dividend being spent on improvements and betterments.

There has never been a single share of the Capital of the Company on the market, and the new capital was entirely taken up by the original shareholders. PURCHASE OF THE LANDS.—The Company has to complete and equip another mill of greater capacity than the present one at a site only eight hundred feet distant. The new mill will have a capacity of twenty-eight thousand tons of pulp per annum, making the combined output of the two mills forty-two thousand tons of dry pulp per annum.

MILL SITE.—The mill is situated on the Chicoutimi River, near where it discharges into the Saguenay, within the limits of the Town of Chicoutimi, which is the terminus of the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway, and the head of navigation. The Chicoutimi and Ontario Navigation Company make Chicoutimi the terminus of their line from Niagara to the Atlantic.

WATER POWER.—The water power developed in present requirements is estimated at eight thousand horse power. The head of water is seventy-five feet; sixty cubic feet of water passes through the mill every minute, and this all the year round. The water is conducted to the mill by a steel flume, eleven feet six inches in diameter. In the penstock are five wheels, three of forty inches, one of twenty-five inches and one of twenty inches. The Company possesses twenty-five thousand horse power. The water is clear, soft and free from all impurities. The river flows from Lake Kemouni which acts as a reservoir or settling pond; it flows for miles to the mill on its rocky bottom all the way. The wood in load on the Chicoutimi River right to the mill where there is a good landing enough to store nine hundred thousand logs without any danger whatever.

SHIPPING FACILITIES.—The Quebec and Lake St. John Railway runs close to the mill site, and from the main line a switch runs to the mill itself. In the mill are three side tracks, which make shipping of the pulp after it is manufactured, and the receiving of the wood for manufacturing very convenient and cheap. An elevated cable track line takes the pulp from the mill to the harbour wharf on the Saguenay River, where it is loaded on barges for re-loading on steamships, which come within four miles of the mill, on the Saguenay, at a point where there is a splendid harbour for steamships of any size.

WOOD.—The Company owns 33,000 acres of timber limits, well covered principally with Black Spruce and some White and Gray Spruce. The Black Spruce is especially good for ground wood pulp, and turns out one hundred and fifty pounds more dry pulp per cord than any other species. Besides this a great quantity of the wood required for years to come can be had from the farmers in the neighbourhood. The Company has at present stored for winter use one hundred and eighty-three thousand logs twelve feet long.

PRESENT MILL.—The present plant employs one hundred and fifty men night and day, the new plant will employ four hundred and fifty men.

FIRE PROTECTION.—In the yard are three large hydrants giving a constant pressure of forty-five pounds. There are always one thousand feet of hose ready for use in case of necessity.

PULP TRADE.—The Company has an assured market in England and France for the whole of its output. The output for this year (1899) is all sold. There have already been received from two firms in England for the whole product for 1899.

"Paper and Pulp," a paper devoted to these industries says—"The steamer Malaga, Captain Peters, which sailed from Chicoutimi, Friday, May 26th, 1899, had the largest cargo of wood pulp ever shipped in the world, the 32,700 bales weighed 4,712 long tons. The cargo of wood pulp was valued at $60,000."

The principal office of the Company is at Chicoutimi, with a branch office in Quebec.

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

Making Them Is a Very Dangerous Trade
 —Fertile That Boast the Manufacture of Nitroglycerine.

Nitroglycerine and its peculiarities are little known, even in localities where it is made. People generally give it a wide berth, and even a less number know how it is manufactured. Probably in no place in the United States is there such a great amount of the explosive used as in the Indiana oilfields, says The Philadelphia Press. Indiana has four nitroglycerine factories, and they are seldom visited by curious people.

The explosive is made from a composition of acids and glycerin. It is generally pale yellow in color, and quite colorless when pure. It is odorless, and has a sweet, pungent, aromatic flavor. If touched by one's tongue, or even brought into contact with the skin, it will produce a severe headache. A large tank, called an agitator, is where the fluid is mixed, and the mixture is composed of equal parts of nitric and sulphuric acids. Inside the tank are several paddles, like those of a churn, and it is here that the real danger exists. The paddles are put in operation and a steady stream of sweet glycerin is turned into a vat until 250 pounds are thoroughly mixed with the 1,500 pounds of acid. The chemicals coming in contact produce an intense heat, and in order to obviate the danger cold water is run through pipes encircling and running through the vat. At 85 degrees F. a red vapor, almost like fire, arises. If cutting off the supply of glycerin in the agitator does not lower the temperature, it is time to say farewell. Before 90 degrees are reached nothing but atoms of the structure and its contents are left.

Colonel William A. Myers, of Belvoir, N.Y., was the man who made and exploded the first round of nitroglycerine in an oil well. He built the first factory in the United States, near Titusville, Pa., in 1865. Up to that time powder had been used to torpedo oil wells. It was then that an explosive that could be discharged under water was found in nitroglycerine. Colonel Myers' father was a Philadelphia chemist and taught him how to make it.

The first oil torpedoes were on Colonel Miller's lease, near Titusville, and the charge consisted of only two and the charge consisted of only two pounds. Oil was worth $9 a barrel then, and a torpedo that would double the production of a well was worth almost what the maker chose to ask for it. Colonel Myers built 12 different factories in different parts of the oil regions from 1868 to 1888, when he retired from the business. Only one of the original factories stands intact to-day. Myers made several fortunes and spent his money like a prince, but, fortunately for him, he still has a snug sum laid by.

THE FRENCH PRESS.

Robert-minded Frenchmen think that undue attention has been paid in England to the obscure draftsman whose vulgarities have adorned the pages of the Parisian gutter press.—Philadelphia Record.

Considering all the abuse the English papers heaped upon France in the matter of Dreyfus, it is not surprising that the French papers should retaliate with unfavorable comments upon English policy.—Philadelphia Times.

The sort of cartooning to which Queen Victoria is being subjected in the comic papers of Paris is a reminder of the fact that there is no country in the world where that sort of journalism descends to such depths as in France. Its cleverness and keenness are impaired by coarseness and indecency.—Boston Herald.

TAKING THE REINS.

The world's record for fastest clipping of a horse is 14 minutes.
 Arlington, 2:27, has trotted in 2:14 on a half mile track and may be Gold Leaf's first 2:10 performer.

Bishop Hero, 2:21, the Pacific coast veteran, is being driven on the roads at San Francisco by General Shafter.

J. Rotherford has bought 50 acres from Al. Berard at Pleasanton, Cal., and will build a track. He will also build large training barn and some 40 box stalls.

M. R. Wheeler, Cresco, Ia., reports a new record of 2:23 1/4 for his pacer Firewheel by Frank, 3:13 1/4, and that he was timed in 2:17 1/4 in a race at Charles City, Ia., over a poor track.

The latest device to encourage high clipping in coach horses is a plan with the goggles, the crystals being so formed that the ground appears nearer than it is. It is said to work all right.

A horse show will be held next year under the auspices of the Paris exposition. Twelve prizes, worth $2,000, will be offered for American harness horses.

Ardine, 2:23 1/4, and Abby Kelly, 2:24 1/4, are two more new ones for Pilot Medium reported by D. D. Streeter of Kalamazoo, Mich. Berard at Pleasanton, Cal., the Great (4), 2:57 1/4, the star of the family. Porter Bairy, Fayette, Ill., reports that his stallion Santanaga, by Indolence, 2:23 1/4, son of Gold Dust, won the free for all at Grayville, Ill., in September in straight heats, reducing his record to 2:12 1/4.

F. D. Spotswood of Harrodsburg, Ky., has a 3-year-old trotting filly by Harry Wilkes, dam by Nethbreaker, that in a speed phenomenon. Oct. 1, after a very brief preparation, she trotted a three-quarter track in 2:22 and Oct. 24 turned the same track in 2:10 1/4; last half in 1:00 1/4.—Horse Review.

GERMANY ANXIOUS FOR JOHANNESBURG'S SAFETY

Said That She Will Ask Both the Belligerents to Guarantee the Safety of the Transvaal Capital—News of Next Battle Will Be From Natal.

London, March 20.—The London Marquess correspondent of the Times, telegraphing Monday, says: "Last night the Portuguese authorities hurriedly despatched by special train a force of infantry to reinforce the garrison on the Transvaal border."

London, March 20.—The Times commenting editorially upon the report that Germany will ask the belligerents to guarantee the safety of Johannesburg, says: "We decline to believe that any responsible German statesman would make such a proposal. Certainly the Government will not make arrangements at foreign instigation."

London, March 20.—During the pause in the military operations in South Africa, Mr. Spencer Wilkinson, writing in the Morning Post, deals speculatively with possible moves. He says: "Lord Roberts may send one or two strong cavalry columns to move unexpectedly on various points, thus upsetting the Boer plans of defense and rendering possible an advance of three converging forces on Pretoria without any heavy preliminary fighting."

London, March 20.—A dispatch to the Daily Telegraph from Bloemfontein, says: "In a speech which he made here a few days before the British entered the town, President Kruger admitted that his men would be unable to keep the field for another month."

London, March 20, 4 a.m.—The War Office has had no news up to this hour confirming the report of the relief of Mafeking, but Mr. Geo. Wyndham, Parliamentary Under Secretary of War, replying to a private inquiry in the lobby of the House of Commons about midnight smilingly said: "I think it is all right."

The Free States seem to have not quite collapsed. They are in considerable force around Smithfield, although much dispersed. A British spy from Rouxville reports that Commandant Olivier and a commando are going to Kromstad. The agents he left behind are using desperate means to raise recruits, commandeering British Boers under penalty of death. Kromstad, where the Boers are concentrating, is a hundred and thirty-seven miles from Bloemfontein. It is surrounded by a country of hills and jungles.

Gen. Gatacre is now resting at Springsburg, preliminary to joining Lord Roberts. Gen. Buller's hills work before Ladysmith has given him an opportunity which is about to be used in forcing the Biggarsberg range. It is believed that 15,000 of his 40,000 men are about to engage Gen. Buller's force and the next news of fighting will probably be from Natal.

WOULD NOT PRAY FOR BRITISH.
Montreal Congregational Pastor who is a Pro-Boer.

Montreal, March 19.—There is a row in Zion Congregational church, the Rev. Mr. Murray being the pastor. He is a sympathizer with the South African Republic, and is consequently termed a pro-Boer. It is alleged that the Zion pastor absolutely refused to pray for the success of the British arms against Kruger and his followers, hence the tumult among the loyal adherents of Zion. A gentleman, speaking of the unfortunate incident, stated yesterday that he did not blame the pastor, who was a native of the Transvaal, and consequently could not be expected to intercede on behalf of his country's enemies.

THEY COULD NOT AGREE.
Serious Charges Made by Officers Against Lord Methuen.

London, March 19.—The Outlook publishes, under the heading, "Lord Methuen and his Colleagues," what appears to be the first authoritative statement of the internal friction which occurred at Modder river in the early part of the campaign, and was responsible for the frequently circulated rumor that Methuen was to be recalled. The account is furnished to the Outlook by an unnamed correspondent, who reviews the entire trouble and especially refers to the friction between Colonels Gough and Paget.

WORRY ABOUT GOLD MINES.
Fears That Boers Will Destroy Johannesburg Mines.

London, March 19.—Great anxiety exists in the city as to the fate of the Johannesburg mines. What the Boer mind and intention are now no one can accurately tell. The matter was discussed before the war, and also in its earlier stages, when the Boer statement was that the Transvaal officials were most concerned at the difficulty before them in the preservation of the mines.

UNITED STATES HELPING GREAT BRITAIN?

Story That American Ships Are Hovering Off China Coast and Troops Ready to be Sent From Manila.

New York, March 19.—The Journal's Washington dispatch says: The Navy Department officially confirms the news that the Oregon and the Baltimore were off the coast of China, near Nagasaki, at a point practically due east from the scene of the expected revolution in Shantung Province, popularly known as the Tien-Tsin District.

Since the publication of this important fact yesterday, which the Government sought to keep secret, the Navy Department has abandoned dissimulation, and admitted that, in addition to the Oregon and New Orleans, the Cassin is also within forty-eight hours' sail of the troubled district.

border to De Boers Pass. The country is entirely clear of Boers, who are holding the passes. There are three guns at Van Rensselaer's pass. Our advanced camp is at Sunday's Laagte, two miles north of Eland's River, where Lytleton's division and Burn Murdoch's brigade are posted. The Boers hold two positions on the Biggarsberg range, about ten miles north. Their strongest position is on the Newcastle road, where several guns are already mounted, and they are digging many trenches. Their second position on the Dundee road is less strong. A cavalry patrol day, but rarely comes in contact with the Boers. The railway has been mended to Modderburg. Between there and Sunday's river four good-sized bridges were completely destroyed.

SURRENDERING TO BRABANT.

Rebels Near Alwal North Have Left the Enemy.

Alwal North, March 17.—Over 250 rebels have surrendered to Brabant's men. One hundred and fifty more are anxious to surrender. The rebel commandant is still with the Boer commandant, Olivier, near Rouxville, but practically all the rebels have left their homes on surrendering their arms on a promise of good behavior.

SURROUNDED BY A CORDON.

What Pretoria Advises Say About the Siege of Mafeking.

Pretoria, March 17, 6:45 a.m.—There are a large number of Boers on the western border of the Transvaal in the neighborhood of Mafeking.

METHUEN'S CHANCE TO REDEEM HIMSELF.

Strong Indications That He Will Lead an Attack on Pretoria From the West.

London, March 19, 2:15 p.m.—Neither the advance by the way of Fourteen Streams nor Col. Plummer's movement has yet resulted in bringing news of Mafeking's relief. From Bloemfontein and Natal there are apparently no serious developments, and public interest remains centered in Colonel Buller-Powell's force, undisturbed by events of greater military importance. However, it appears likely that the converging of the troops towards Mafeking indicates a much more serious purpose than merely its relief.

THIRTY MILES FROM MAFKING.

Railway Communication Has Been Restored Near the Town.

Bulwer, March 14.—The railway and telegraph have been restored near south as Pizani. The Boers have evacuated Sekwaai and retired to Rustenburg. Col. Plummer is at Lobatse. The Salisbury contingent of volunteers passed through here yesterday. Pizani is about thirty miles north of Mafeking. Rustenburg is in the Transvaal, and not far from Pretoria.

SITUATION IN NATAL.

British Advance Post is Two Miles North of Eland's Laagte.

Ladysmith, March 18.—Lord Dundonald reconnoitred the country west of Ladysmith from the Houtstool.

GANADIANS AVENGED MAJUBA HILL.

British Journal Says the Contingent Fought Magnificently at Paardeberg.

London, March 19.—The Western Morning News, commenting upon the surrender of Cronje, says: "We are especially glad, too, that one of our magnificent colonies can boast something which every regiment in the British army would give much to claim. It is the pride of Canada that she 'avenged Majuba,' and we would not rob her of this gratification for all South Africa. It would have been a pleasure to know that it was an English regiment which made the final dash which brought Cronje to his knees, but we are ten times more delighted with the thought that soldiers from Canada had that honor. The dash forward in the night close to the Boer trenches was a magnificent piece of work, and had the Canadians not been restrained they would have been into the enemy's trenches in a few minutes. Fortunately, the desired end was attained without a heavy sacrifice of life. When the Boers saw the Canadians so close to their position hope was abandoned, and they gave in. Throughout Canada rings the proud cry that the soldiers of the Dominion have avenged Majuba for the Mother Country, and that is something which the Canadians and their descendants will never forget."

BOERS EVACUATE WINDORTON.

They Fall Back Before the Advance of the Mafeking Force.

Cape Town, March 18.—The mounted force from Kimberley, proceeding to the relief of Mafeking, has arrived at Winderton. As the force neared Winderton the Boers evacuated the town, blowing up the bridge. It is reported that the rebels who refused to accompany the Transvaalers when the latter vacated Tump and Vryburg, are preparing to trek into Damaraaland, on the approach of the British, but that the Hottentots are getting ready to bar their escape.

QUICK ENGINEERING WORK.

Poston Bridge Over the Orange River Laid in a Few Hours.

Norval's Post, March 18.—A poston 800 feet long was constructed here in a few hours. The cavalry and two batteries of artillery immediately crossed. The principal part of the convoys crossed safely to-day. Trains from Bloemfontein with troops arrived north of the river this afternoon. Gen. Gatacre is at Springsburg.

MAFEEKING AT ITS LAST STAND.

Relief Must Come Quickly or Gatacre's Force Will be Captured.

London, March 19.—Mafeking, which has been somewhat into the background by the stirring events of the past few weeks, now looms prominently as the most important objective of the British forces for the time being. Colonel Plummer's force, only a small one at the outside, appears to be making little headway, and this probably explains the despatch of a column from Kimberley, which has already covered fifty miles out of the two

FREE STATERS LAYING DOWN ARMS RAPIDLY

The Publication of Lord Roberts' Proclamation is Having Good Effect in Free State.

CAVALRY SENT TO CUT OFF THE BOER RETREAT.

Free State Matters Progressing in a Manner Which is Bound to Please Even the Most Impatient Briton—Occapation of Naval's Post Important.

London, March 19.—In the Orange Free State matters are progressing in a manner which is bound to please even the most impatient Briton. The occupation of Norval's Post has been followed up with unexampled rapidity; the bridge has been repaired and now, instead of using the line from Cape Town to Bulwer as far as Kimberley and then transporting his supplies across nearly a hundred miles of Free State territory by wagons, Gen. Roberts has a direct line from Cape Town to Bloemfontein, via De Aar, Naauwpoort and Colesburg, which will shortly be supplemented by two other lines from East London and Port Elizabeth respectively.

The remarkable celerity with which the British engineering corps and about that Major Girouard, the French Canadian, is putting to capital use the experience he gained with Kitchener in the Sudan. When it is remembered that the passage of the river at Norval's Post was only forced on Friday last it will be seen that a remarkable feat has been performed. Gen. Roberts, in his latest despatch, states that the cavalry brigade has gone to Thaba Nchu, thirty miles due east of Bloemfontein, and half way between that place and the border of the Free State, in order to secure the inhabitants and distribute proclamations. Reading between the lines, however, it is evident that the brigade has another and not less important duty—the cutting off of the Boer retreat. This having been accomplished, the British have been able to retreat and affect a junction with the Boer commando north of Bloemfontein, and it is undoubtedly to prevent a retreat of the remainder of the Boer force by this route that the cavalry force has been despatched. It would not be surprising to hear shortly that a portion of the force had seized Ladybrand, twenty miles to the east of Thaba Nchu and on the border of the Free State. This having been accomplished there would be no avenue of escape for the Boers who are still in arms south of Bloemfontein, and they would be compelled to surrender. A British line now extends from Modder River to Thaba Nchu, probably Ladybrand, and the passage of any body of the enemy to the northward is effectually barred. Meanwhile the Boers of the Free State are surrounded right and left, and all that is necessary to cause the total collapse of all opposition on the part of the Free State is the complete publication of the assurance of amnesty and freedom from punishment which General Buller-Powell has promised. The Boer advance northward will be one of unexampled celerity, bringing the British quickly in touch with the backbone of the war—the Transvaal. A pause, however, will undoubtedly ensue so far as the Boers are concerned, in order to allow of remounts and other necessary things being brought up.

SURRENDERED 2,000 RIFLES.

Organized Resistance in the Free State Has Collapsed.

London, March 19.—Organized military resistance in the southern half of the Free State is almost ended. The Hottentots and Norval's Post commandos have partly surrendered. The remainder, reported to number 2,000, have trekked to a desert, south of Thaba Nchu, to which place General Roberts mentions that he has sent a force.

Eight hundred Free Staters have surrendered in Basutoland, where a correspondent says that 2,000 rifles were surrendered on the day he sent the despatch. Five hundred burghers have surrendered at Bloemfontein, all of them taking arms when they surrendered not to take up arms against the British during the present war. The rolling stock captured by the British at Bloemfontein consists of 25 locomotives, 12 carriages, 8 brake vans and 121 short wagons.

SPECIAL U. S. DESPATCHES

Summary of Events Transpiring Within Our Neighbour's Borders.

ANNIVERSARY.

New York, March 20.—One year ago last Saturday the Windsor hotel was burned while the St. Patrick's day parade was passing. Nearly 100 lives were lost, including members of proprietor Leland's family. Since the fire, Warren Ireland, the proprietor, has died, and it is said with a broken heart.

ENTRIES CLOSE.

New York, March 20.—Entries for the horse show to be held at Burland's riding academy on the 22nd, 23rd, 24th and 25th of this month closed today. This year's show will be the ninth held at the academy, and a prize list that promises to bring into competition some of the best show horses in the city has been arranged.

NEW COLLEGE FOR WOMEN.

Brooklyn, N.Y., March 20.—The ground for the women's college to be established here was broken to-day.
The building will cost not less than $300,000, and will be known as St.
Joseph's in the Pines.

BULLDOG CLUB'S SHOW.

New York, March 20.—The annual show of the Bulldog Club of America was opened to-day in the concert hall in Madison square garden and will continue until the 22nd. Special and class prizes have been offered, and this promises to be the best specialty show of the sort ever held.

REPUBLICANS MEET.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 20.—The Republican city convention opened here to-day for the purpose of nominating a city ticket.

TUNNEL HEARING.

New York, March 20.—A public hearing on the Tunnel Railroad and Tunnel Company's application for a franchise to construct an underground railroad from Lincoln place and Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, to Heeds and Center streets, Manhattan, was held to-day. Mayor Van Wyck and the municipal assembly were present.

CRICKETING.

New York, March 20.—The formation of a championship schedule was made to-day by the New York Cricket Association. The first game between the Association and a picked team will be played on Decoration Day.

TOURNEY.

Queens County, L.I., March 20.—
The Brooklyn Gun Club's tournament was begun yesterday at the new interstate park shooting grounds here.

POLO.

Aiken, S.C., March 20.—The big Polo Tournament under the auspices of the National Polo Association opened here to-day and will continue until the 24th. It is open to teams of four, and handsome cups will be awarded to the winning team.

BIDS OPENED.

New York, March 20.—Bids for the Fitzsimmons-Sharkey fight to be held on August 1, will be opened today. It is likely that the seaside Athletic Club, of Coney Island, will receive the fight on the offer of 25 per cent. of the gross receipts.

DAILY'S COLLECTION.

New York, March 20.—The sale of the late Augustin Daly's great collection of bric-a-brac, rare books, and other personal property, a collection such as has never before been offered at public sale was begun at the American Art Gallery to-day.

RAILWAY SOLD.

Joplin, Mo., March 20.—The Kansas City, Pittsburg, and Gulf Railway System was sold at auction here today.

CONVENTION.

Lincoln, Neb., March 20.—The Democratic State Convention opened here to-day. William J. Bryant was present.

DEMOCRATS MEET.

Springfield, Mo., March 20.—The Democratic County Convention met today for the purpose of electing delegates to the Congressional Convention which meets at Bolivar April 5.

SENTENCE COMMUTED.

Barnstable, March 20.—Tia was the date set by Judge Higgins on Dec.
31st last for the first electrocution in this state, the victim being Edwin H. Snow, aged 17, who pleaded guilty to the murder of James L. Whitmore.
Sentence was commuted. Whitmore was shot through the head while driving a baker's wagon in October, and his pockets were emptied. The fact that Snow was the last person known to have been with Whitmore, led to his arrest and indictment. Whitmore was nineteen years of age.

CORNELL BASE BALL TEAM.

Ithaca, N.Y., March 20.—Coach Hugh Jennings and the Cornell base ball team left for Calhoun, S.C., to-day, where they will prepare for the coming season.

TRANSPORT FOR MANILA.

San Francisco, Cal., March 20.—The transport Sumner, with 1,000 recruits on board, sailed for Manila to-day.

CENTENNARY.

Concho, O., March 20.—A big celebration in honor of the passing of the century mark in this town's existence is being held here to-day.

CLARK CASE.

Washington, March 20.—Arguments on both sides in the Clark bribery case is being heard to-day. Counsel has prepared printed briefs and oral arguments, the latter to occupy six hours on each side. The memorialists are to have the opening and the closing. Senator Edmunds and Mr. Birney represent the memorialists and former Senator Faulkner and
Mr. Roger Foster speak for Mr.
Clark. Mr. Faulkner stated that he has a comparative statement prepared showing the evidence on all points in parallel columns, contrasting the testimony for the prosecution and defense. He said that it would take a week to complete this work.

TELEPHONE COMBINE.

Weyauwega, Wis., March 20.—The meeting of all the independent telephone companies in Wisconsin in conjunction to-day and will continue in such until the 22nd. The object of this meeting is to form an association for the purpose of ultimately connecting all independent companies, of which there are more than seventy-five in this State, in one system, as a rival to the Wisconsin Telephone Company.

Sanque Ville Marie Trial.

Montreal, March 17.—Three days have been devoted to the selection of a jury in the Court of Queen's Bench to try Hester and Lemieux, charged with conspiracy to defraud the Banque Ville Marie, but out of nearly 100 called only nine jurors have been selected. Yesterday the panel was exhausted and Judge Wurtelle ordered that a new panel be summoned.

One of Mr. Hester's counsel, Mr. Foster, yesterday complained to the court that Mr. Wall, a former employee of the bank, was talking to the juryman.
Mr. Wall, when called before the court, denied having tried to influence the jury, and said that Mr. Hester had threatened to shoot him. Judge Wurtelle decided on this that Mr. Hester should be kept in custody, but later agreed that he should have his freedom in providing $5,000 personal security to keep the peace.

Queer Cards of Shrewd Lawyers.

Not all men of the legal profession are content with the severe inscription on their cards to which etiquette and custom usually confine them. An Ohio lawyer who makes a specialty of collections calls attention to this fact by a novel device printed on his cards.
Intended to represent a drop of blood are the words, "Claims collected in cold blood." The capital "C" for the three first letters of those words being of sufficient size to encircle the other words.

In Maryland, Mo., a lawyer presents his portrait on his card, with the suggestive motto: "He that is not with you is against you. See me early."

A Scotch Scheme.

The following appears in a Glasgow paper. It would be interesting to know whether it has led to business. If so, the supply of grand pianos in Scotland must be considerably in excess of the demand.

"Lads, having large debts, soon would gladly stone grand pianos. In return for such references as—"

To Receive the Queen

Dublin, March 17.—At a meeting in the Mansion House yesterday, the Lord Mayor presiding, a committee was appointed to receive the Queen and £1,500 was subscribed for decorations.

A mass meeting was summoned last evening to denounce the act of the corporation in voting an address to the Queen, but it was almost a fiasco.
Only a few hundred were present at the stipulated time, and the gathering, never amounted to more than 3,000. The majority were attracted out of sheer curiosity, rather than out of sympathy. Mr. John Daly, Mayor of Limerick, addressed the meeting, and seconded a resolution which was adopted, protesting against the corporation's decision.

After the meeting broke up about 500 persons marched past the Mansion House, shouting, but there was no disorder.

Have-It-All John's Support

Winnipeg, March 17.—A gentleman possessing the confidence of the Macdonald Government said yesterday that Premier Macdonald had already telegraphed the Western representatives of the House of Commons that they have the hearty support of the Provincial Administration in protesting against the granting by the Manitoba Parliament of railway charters covering territory within the Province of Manitoba.

MYSTERIOUS OCCURRENCE.

The Remarkable Alpine Experience of a Famous Messenger.

At a critical moment of international conditions, which seemed a good many years ago it was found necessary to send a messenger across one of the Alpine passes charged with dispatches of the importance of which there was no doubt. The messenger was a man of peace and war. It was in the depth of winter, and in these days, even under the most ordinary circumstances, a journey across Europe meant no trifling undertaking. The first part of the journey was safely accomplished in postchaise as far as the foot of the pass, where a transfer to a single man was necessary. Here, on inquiry as to the passing law for horses and a single, the messenger found to his dismay that none was to be had. "Impossible," he muttered, "to go forward this night."

Toward evening, however, a private carriage arrived, accompanied by one traveler, with a single, several spare horses and plenty of servants—evidently the equipment of a messenger of distinction. The traveler halted at the posting inn and offered a short notice to the messenger to enter and leave during the journey across the pass to be continued at nightfall, when a clear moon might be expected.

Under these circumstances the king's messenger and the other traveler naturally went together and entered into friendly conversation, with the result that an offer of a place in the traveler's stage was gladly accepted by the messenger. At midnight the journey across the pass was commenced, the messenger carrying in his hand a small dispatch bag containing his despatches. The route wound up and down the mountain all helped over the snow. The horses seemed fresh and high spirited and were urged at full speed by the driver. Suddenly, at a turn of the road, a man jumped out of the stage and ran toward the messenger, who was then alone. He was dressed in a dark suit and had a bag of dispatches in his hand. He was the messenger's old friend, who had been with him on his journey across the pass to be continued at nightfall, when a clear moon might be expected.

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absentminded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shelved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems:

Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absentminded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving fanatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nervous substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next cell to it. The latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in columns, the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell or brain octopus, attends to its job faithfully and gives no trouble. It is generally in an animal who is really tired, or who is overworked, or who is under too high a pressure, that the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

The Architect.

One must wonder why it really is that so little is said or thought about architecture, the grandest, the mother, of all arts, a great, a most useful, science, one in which a greater revelation has lately taken place and in which more progress has been made, with more stupendous results, than in any other, remarks a writer in The International Magazine.

When it is not Richelieu, who paraphrasing an ancient writer, said: "if it is veracity you seek, go find an architect. He must be an artist, or his buildings will offend the eye; an engineer, or they will crumble into rubble; a lawyer, or he will get his patrons into trouble; a doctor, or his buildings will be hygienically unfit to live in; and, last, but not least, he must be a gentleman, or we will have nothing to do with him."

Time to Give Up.

An Iowa judge recently related an amusing incident that had occurred in his court when a colored man was brought up for some petty offence. The charge was read, and as the statement "The state of Iowa against John Jones" was read in a loud voice the colored man's eyes bulged nearly out of their sockets and he seemed overcome with terror and astonishment. When he was asked if he had anything to say or pleaded guilty or not guilty, he gasped out:

"Well, yo' honor, ef de whole state of Iowa is ag'in dis one pore nigger I'm gwine to give up right now!"

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Objects to It.

The London Free Press finds fault with Hon. Mr. Harcourt, a Cabinet Minister, for accepting a bribe as Director of the Burling Head Power Company.

J. J. LUNDY'S OFFICE.

Is temporarily located at No. 378 Water street, Opposite Mechanics' Institute.

Cook Wanted.

At Queen's Hotel, Lakefield, to whom good wages will be paid. Apply either personally or by letter or telephone to R. J. Munro Lakefield.

A Case of Fun.

The Cobourg Post, in referring to the resolution passed by the Trent Valley Waterway Association, in which it points out to the Minister of Railways that the Trent route is preferable because it is a land-locked route, says:—"The text of the above is laughable, and when a copy is presented to the Minister of Public Works at Ottawa the ignorance of the framers will cause much merriment." On the principle of "be who laughs last laughs best," we presume the Trent people will wear the final merriment.

Death of Mr. T. Farrington.

A well-known resident of the town passed away yesterday morning, in the person of Mr. Thomas Farrington. About a month ago he was afflicted with a stroke of paralysis which rendered one side of his body helpless. He gradually grew worse until death came as above. Mr. Farrington was 70 years of age. He was employed as bailiff for the tax collector and altogether had been connected with the municipal offices and buildings for about thirty years. He possessed a wonderful knowledge of municipal law and was always well posted on the latest changes. He leaves a widow and family of adult sons and daughters. The funeral takes place from the family residence, 233 Townsend street, this afternoon, at 1:30 o'clock, to the lake cemetery.

Addressed the Bishop.

The Board of Separate School Trustees waited on His Lordship Bishop O'Connor a few evenings ago and presented him with an address in which the Board as a body expressed its appreciation for the arrangements which His Lordship has been kind enough to make in regard to certain debts in connection with the school, which enables it to carry on its work with greater ease and less hardship to the taxpayers. The address was read by Secretary Corkery and signed by the members of the Board. His Lordship made an appropriate reply.

PERSONALS.

Mrs. Scott, of Elizabeth street, is reported much better.

There is to be a parish social at Mark street church this evening.

Rev. J. A. McCann, of Lakefield, has a beautiful Jersey cow from Mr. Charles Hayes.

Rev. Mr. Moore returned on Friday evening, being absent for about a week on a lecturing tour, and occupied Mark street church pulpit at both services on Sunday last.

THE DEAR HEARTS OF IRELAND

A Large and Appreciative Audience at the Opera House Last Night.

A large and appreciative audience assembled in the Opera House last night to witness the comedy in three acts, entitled, "The Dear Hearts of Ireland," by the Catholic Literary Association Dramatic Club, under the management of Miss Lillie Simons, our talented young elocutionist. The following was the cast:

Shawn Arona, a bold Irish lad, Dick Simons; Lord Fernoy, disguised as Bad Andy, Jack McCabe; Fergus Riordan, Fernoy's rascally agent, Frank McPherson; Dan O'Grady, a retired farmer, John Hanrahan; Tom O'Grady, his son, James Brown; Old Hennings, a money lender, George Lynch; Nipper, a detective, James Dillon; Patrick, a servant, Sam Hoolihan; Mrs. O'Grady, Dan's wife, Miss Annie Simons; Mollie O'Grady, his daughter, Miss Nellie McCabe; and Maggie, Shawn's sweetheart, Miss Lillie Simons; Lady and ladies in Kerry dance.

The music was supplied by Miss McCabe and Messrs. McLimoye and Deet.

The specialties were a feature of the unique and pleasing entertainment and were as follows: The United Nations, by Little G. Holmes, N. Graham, G. Rudkins, A. Devlin, and G. White; Song, Miss Lewis and Mr. F. Dwyer; The Irish Drummer Boy, by Miss L. Simons; Dance, by Sam Hoolihan; Hoolihan; The Lone Orphan, Orphan, in character, little Carrie White; The Shy Maidens, in character, Misses Princeau, Clancy, Hallahan, Bell, Clancy and Simons; Dance, little Nellie Graham; The Burglar and the Child, Mr. J. Brown and Miss Carrie White.

The entertainment was, on the whole, one of the most enjoyable ever given in Peterborough by local talent and reflected the greatest credit on those who took part, especially Miss Simons, who had charge of the getting up of the whole programme.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

There are to be weddings galore in Peterboro after Easter.

On Monday last Lake Ontario was frozen over for miles out into the Gardens are about to get their hot beds in readiness for early spring sowing.

Two hundred freight cars are being constructed at the Crown car works, Cobourg.

The C.P.R. and Grand Trunk are doing a heavy freight business just at present.

Builders are becoming anxious for an early spring so as to be able to start operations.

The Children's Aid Society is called to meet next Friday afternoon for the appointment of an agent for the Society.

The annual meeting of the McCall Mission Society will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 3:30, at the residence of Mrs. Nugent, 205 Brock st.

High County Constable Cochrane on Saturday night took a Havelock man in charge. He is supposed to be the same. He was remanded till Wednesday.

At the police court yesterday an unfortunate woman giving her name as Phillips, was up on a charge of vagrancy. She was remanded till tomorrow.

Mr. George Lawson, who has undergone an operation for a swelling in the head, was operated on last week at Nichol's Hospital, and he is now doing nicely.

"Now, boys," said Mr. Smith, in the Central school, to his class, "who can tell me which is the most difficult thing to acquire in cycling?" Chorused of yell—"The bicycle, sir."

"Why is spring called spring?" asked a bright youth of his father yesterday. "Don't bother me, Johnny," "I know, pa." "Well, why is it?" "Some folks won't go around thinking 'tis winter."

Mrs. W. C. Allen, of Millbrook, was in town last night to direct the first rehearsal for the "Temple of Fame" at the residence of Mrs. D. J. Lundy. Mrs. Allen returned on the nine o'clock train last night.

According to present indications butter promises to be high priced this year. Many factories are holding their product for the expected rise in value. The outlook is not a cheerful one to the consumer.

The Bay of Quinte Conference of the Methodist Church will not meet in Cobourg this year, as expected, on account of the new church, which is under construction, not being ready. It will probably meet in Port Hope, Napanee or Peterborough instead.

Farmers say that the large fall of snow came at a very opportune time and that if it remains it will be the means of saving a large amount of the wheat crop from the frost. The wheat so far has wintered well and if there is no more severe weather a bountiful harvest may be expected.

PERSONALS.

Capt. Ed. Young, of Young's Point, was in town on Saturday and gave the Times a call.

Dr. King's condition yesterday was somewhat improved, although it was not considered substantial.

Mr. Wm. Buller, who has been seriously ill, is, we are pleased to say, improving. He is now able to sit up.

Mr. George J. Horkins, formerly of Peterborough, is in San Francisco, where he is conducting an insurance business.

Miss Iva Denne left yesterday to join the staff of the Cleveland City Hospital. Hon. J. R. Stratton returned to Toronto yesterday, having spent Saturday and Sunday in town.

Miss Corkery, aunt of Ald. Corkery, fell on the pavement near St. Peter's Cathedral, and received a fracture of the hip. She was conveyed to St. Joseph's hospital, where she is doing as well as can be expected.

Mr. Dunton returned from New York last night, where he was called ten days ago through the serious illness of his brother. We are pleased to say that his brother is now out of danger, having suffered an attack of paralysis of the heart.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Some good changes in the rules are to be advocated at the next meeting of the C. L. A.—particularly one limiting a team to one series, and one making the playing time forty minute halves with a ten or fifteen minute rest.

The Madoc Lacrosse Club is advertising situations open for lacrosse players.

The Midland League of Baseball clubs will organize at once.

You can't keep George away when there is any fun going on. In a letter from Jack Scholte to his father, Jack says that he met a lot of Ontario men in San Francisco—among others George Horkins, formerly of Peterborough.

Ernie Watson settles the matter with the Trent Valley Waterway Association, in the following letter in Monday's Globe:

Reference Ernie Watson writes from Peterborough:—In today's issue of the Globe there appears a despatch sent from Lindsay regarding the recent game between the Lindsay seniors and the Peterborough Oats. The despatch says that I, as referee, gave the score 5 to 6. This is not so. The score as given by me was 9 to 5, in favor of the Oats. I do not think that the Lindsay umpire was in any way interfered with by the crowd, and there were no goals disputed one way or the other during the game.

Port Hope hockeymen are after Whiteby's scalp.

The New York League Club is talking just now because they didn't get first choice of the players of those clubs which have been dropped from the National League circuit.

F. T. Heck, of the South Australian team is making some big scores this season.

As we surmised last January, the South African war has put a stop to the contemplated tour through Australia of the team from the Maryland club, of England.

The third annual game between eleven representing the colleges of the United States and Canada, respectively, has been arranged to be played on July 1st, at Toronto.

The New South Wales eleven won every match played in 1899.

W. P.—The rule most observed is that any player who opens a pot without holding the requisite cards to do so is out of the game. If that hand, the money being played for by the others who stay in, the best hand winning. He could not draw out the money he had put in. Players should pay attention to the game, and especially see what cards they hold.

W. J.—John L. Sullivan became champion of the world under the old rules, when he defeated Jake Kilrain for the title, at Richmond, Miss., July 8th, 1892.

The American Civil War.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Will the Times kindly give the following information:

1. What was the strength of the Confederate army engaged during the civil war and also that of the Union army?
2. How many states were fighting for the north and how many for the south?

Reply—1. Union army, 2,772,468; Confederate army, about 600,000. Strength of Union army each year, July 1, 1861, 1,000,000; Jan. 1, 1864, 600,000; Jan. 1, 1865, 500,000; May 1, 1865, 200,000. Have no statistics of yearly strength of Confederate army. Eleven States for the south, 20 for the north; 5 States, Delaware, Kentucky, Maryland, Missouri, West Virginia, known as border States, were divided in sentiment, and furnished soldiers for each army, although they were retained in the Union. There were five territories that also furnished troops, principally for the Union army.—Ed. Times.

Met Also Read for the Doctor.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—In view of the prevalence of pneumonia to such an alarming extent, and the many deaths resulting therefrom, I send you the following for publication:

Cure for Pneumonia.

Take six to ten grains, according to size, and chop fine, put in large spider over a hot fire; then add about the same quantity of rye meal, and vinegar enough to make it a thick paste.

In the meanwhile, stir it thoroughly, letting it simmer five or ten minutes. Then put in a cotton ball large enough to cover the lungs, and apply it to the chest as hot as the patient can bear. When it gets cool apply another, and thus continue by reheating the poultice. In a few hours the patient will be out of danger.

This simple remedy has never failed in this too often fatal malady.

Usually three or four applications will be sufficient, but continue always until perspiration starts freely from the chest. This simple remedy was formulated many years ago by one of the best physicians New England has ever known, never lost a patient by this disease, and won his renown by saving persons by simple remedies after the best medical talent had pronounced their case hopeless.

Personally, we know of three persons who have been saved by the remedy last winter after their physicians had given them up to die; and if a record was made of all similar cases during the last six years, it would fill a good sized volume.—The World's Progress.

A Laager.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Kindly decide a bet and tell us the exact meaning of a laager.

Peterborough, March 19.

Reply—A laager is a camp.—Ed. Times.

Smith's Indian Cough Syrup and Grippe Killer.

This celebrated remedy has long been known to the Indians of the far north. Very few Indians have consumption; they always have a remedy to hand for all diseases, which they procure from roots, bark, seeds and flowers. Nature's own remedy, and thousands of testimonials testify to the powerful curative properties. Amongst the numerous diseases which wage war on the throat and lungs not one has, as yet, withstood the marvelous effects of this remedy. A large number of cures attest the worth of this preparation. When taken as soon as the first symptoms of Consumption show themselves, it is early and cautious use will effect a sure and radical cure in the majority of cases.

One of the most remarkable properties is that it destroys the Microbe or Germ of one of the most dreadful of diseases. In cases of ordinary Cough, Cold or Grippe, a few doses will suffice to eradicate the disease and restore the patient to health, and thus in a day or two persons who are troubled with coughing at night, will find that, by taking a dose on going to bed it will allay that irritation of the throat and lungs and the cough will stop and the patient will sleep all night without coughing.

For children it acts as a soothing syrup and is an indispensable. No family should be without it.

The Terrible Experience of the Proprietors of the big Flour Mills at Paris, Ont.

I believe affirm that I had the Sciatica Rheumatism for a long time. It was very painful, and I was so bad that I was unable to lace my shoe or even stoop down to pick anything up. It almost took my life. I employed the best doctors I knew and I also used three bottles of a Rheumatism Cure which was recommended to me by my druggist, still I got no relief, but kept getting worse. About New Year I began using Smith's North American Rheumatic and Kidney Cure. Now the lameness has all left my hip and I never felt better in my life. I know that this remedy will cure Rheumatism. I also believe it is a good Blood Purifier.

A Double Testimony—Two Coughs Cured With One Bottle.

We here affirm that we both had very bad coughs. Tried four bottles of medicine which was recommended to us by the druggists here. Neither of us got any better and remained so for a month. Kept getting worse. We got a bottle of Smith's Indian Cough Syrup and Grippe Killer and took some over night. Next morning we were both all right.

A PATRIOTIC MESSAGE FROM NEW ZEALAND!

The Colony Endorses Britain's Stand in Declining Intervention of Powers.

IT WILL STAND BY MOTHERLAND TO THE LAST.

Steyn Threatens to Shoot as Traitors All Bothers Who Sign the Declaration Prescribed in Gen. Roberts' Proclamation—Johannesburg Mines Safe.

London, March 21.—Mr. Chamberlain has received the following telegram from the Governor and Commander-in-Chief of New Zealand, the Earl of Ranfurly:

"The people of New Zealand with express their endorsement of the position taken up by the Imperial Government in declining to allow the intervention of any foreign power in the settlement with the Transvaal and the Free State and in declining to assist to either state being independent. My Government assures Her Majesty's Government that New Zealand will support to the last the Mother Country, so far as it lies in her power in maintaining that position, which has been taken up irrespective of consequences. I am desirous to add that there are large numbers of men volunteering, who are good riders and shots, willing to go to South Africa for the relief of the Imperial forces, if their services later will be required elsewhere."

London, March 20.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts, dated Bloemfontein, March 20: "Kitchener occupied Prieska yesterday unopposed. The rebels surrendered their arms. The Transvaalers escaped across the river. Mr. Steyn is circulating a notice by means of despatch riders in reply to my proclamation, to the effect that any outlying who signs a declaration that he will not fight against us again will be treated as a traitor and shot."

"The Bloemfontein people are affording us every assistance in the matter of hospital accommodation. We have consequently been able to arrange for 300 beds. Thirty-two prisoners were taken at Prieska, 200 stands of arms and some supplies and explosives. The Boers have begun to surrender on the Basutoland frontier."

London, March 21.—A despatch to the Daily Mail from Bloemfontein, dated Monday, March 19, says:

"A reconnaissance toward Philippolis, 25 miles west of Springfontein, found the farmers all flying with their families. The British troops were cordially received. It is reported that Mr. Steyn is trying to rally the Boers but the latter say they have had enough."

London, March 21.—A correspondent of the Daily News at Bloemfontein, telegraphing Monday day March 19, says:

"I learn from Johannesburg that it is not true that the mines have been flooded, or otherwise damaged beyond the fact that the machinery is suffering from disease. My informant declares that the whole story was fabricated to court sympathy."

London, March 21.—Mr. Spencer Wilkinson writing in the Morning Post justifies Mr. Winston Churchill's argument respecting the relief of Ladysmith as follows: "The relief of Ladysmith is a task that Sir Alfred Milner has gone to Bloemfontein to arrange for the permanent administration of the province and perhaps to decide about the captured or surrendered rebels."

London, March 21.—Indications from Natal seem to show that General Buller's forward movement will not be long delayed. The Government has decided that Major General Sir Frederick Carrington shall command a colonial force of 3,000 men to assist the 200 men Mr. Chamberlain asked for from Australia.

POSSIBLE WAR WITH FRANCE.

France Major to Attack Britain and Prepare to do so.

A London cable to the Herald contains the following:

War between Great Britain and France may be very remote, but there is good reason to believe that the British Cabinet think it enough of a possibility to give considerable thought to the subject. Discussion of the possibility of such a clash has become so general as to produce something strongly resembling tension among high officials of the Government.

Considerable interest is attached to the face of Johannesburg. Commenting on the reported consultation between Secretary Hay and the German Ambassador at Washington, Dr. von Holleben, regarding the possibility of a German intervention, a little scheme of German intervention. That is really a glorious yarn, and one which shows to what desperate straits the enemies of this country are reduced. Just imagine a Government which formally declined all outside intervention permitting Germany to dictate the course of our affairs! march to Pretoria. The German Foreign Office knows better than to make the mistake of infallibly repeating if it ventured to whisper so preposterous a proposal in Downing street."

KRUGER'S REPLY.

London, March 20.—The following despatch has been received at the War Office from Lord Roberts, dated Bloemfontein, Sunday, March 19:—

"I have received the following reply to my telegram of March 11, to the President of the Free State and South African Republic:—

"Your Excellency's telegram reached me yesterday. I assure you nothing would give me more pleasure than to see your Excellency's telegram reach me."

COLLUSION CHARGED WITH ENGLAND.

Members of Congress Accuse the American Government With Preventing Intervention.

Washington, March 20.—When the House met to-day Mr. Hull, of Iowa, the chairman of the committee on Military Affairs, reported back from that committee the following resolution introduced by Mr. Sulzer, of New York:—

"Resolved, That the Secretary of War is hereby directed to inform the House of Representatives as early as possible what fortifications Great Britain is erecting, constructing, and completing along the northern frontier of the United States, especially at Puget Sound, and other places on the Pacific Ocean, contiguous to the State of Washington, and the district of Alaska."

The committee recommended that it lie upon the table.

The resolution has been referred to the War Department. Mr. Hull said, and had come back with the following endorsement:—

"The information the department possesses in this and like cases has always been held to be confidential, and for good and sufficient reasons has not been made public."

TERRIBLE CREUSOT GUNS OF THE BOERS.

It is Said Those Defending Pretoria Will Have a Range of Fifteen Miles.

London, March 20.—The Creusot guns which the Boers are using in the present war are so called because of the town in France, Creusot, where they are made. They are rapid-fire guns, with an improved breech mechanism, and possess wonderful range, and for their calibre, great accuracy of fire. The field artillery is composed of three-inch guns, and the long guns are of six-inch calibre. These long guns, as they are called popularly, are something between a regular siege gun, which is a great advantage. The field gun with a maximum elevation of 20 degrees, has a range of 3,700 yards, or about five miles. Three kinds of shells can be used—the case shell, the common shell, the common shell, and the common shell. The shrapnel holds 24 bullets, running 34 to the pound, and these are scattered in all directions when the shell explodes. By regulating the fuse, the shell can be timed to burst at any desired moment after discharge. The muzzle velocity of the Creusot field gun is said to be 1,350 feet to the second, and the gun with its timber weighs 4,500 lbs.

In the manufacture of the Creusot guns, a new alloy of nickel and steel is used. The rate of fire is from eight to ten rounds a minute for the field gun. The long guns so far have been fired in a rather leisurely manner, but that is not because they are not capable of great rapidity of fire, but because the Boers have chosen to fire them slowly. In the forts about Pretoria are mounted Creusot guns of a calibre still heavier than the long guns.

Four forts defend the Boer capital, and in each of them are mounted, along with 30 heavy Gatling and four ordinary cannons, four Creusot guns, with a range of 15 miles. Heavy Creusot guns also are mounted in the forts defending Johannesburg.

SALISBURY HOLDS KRUGER RESPONSIBLE.

Boers Threats to Inflict Suffering on British Prisoners Receive a Stern Reply.

New York, March 20.—An interview had by a correspondent of the Herald with President Kruger on February 19th, at Pretoria, is printed to-day in the Herald.

At that time the President was described as showing but little evidence in his countenance of the tremendous strain he was undergoing. The complexion of South African affairs, however, has changed considerably since then. He was dressed in a rusty frock coat, the front of which was sprinkled with tobacco. He smoked a pipe during the whole interview.

"This war was forced upon us by Cecil Rhodes and the mining millionaires, who want the country," said the Boer President.

"The Boers yielded as far as possible, until they saw that nothing but complete surrender of their independence would satisfy England. Having been forced into the war, the Boers will conquer or die. I expect no aid from other nations, but we are glad of sympathy and friendship. The Transvaal is willing to make peace at any time, but we want more conventions. Only absolute independence is possible. We do not want any more territory, but are content with our present frontier if we are permitted to live peacefully. This is all we ask."

CLIMATE WILL SOON FAVOR THE BRITISH.

South African Winter Approaches and Will Prevent Boers Keeping the Field.

GEN. KITCHENER'S MOVEMENTS ARE NOW KNOWN.

He is Acting Against Disaffected Afrikaners of Cape Colony, West De Aar Junction—Second Canadian Contingent in the Carnarvon District.

London, March 20.—General Kitchener's whereabouts have at last been discovered and it is now known that he is acting against the disaffected Afrikaners of Cape Colony west of De Aar Junction. The rebellion does not appear to be any longer formidable, the appearance of the victor of Omdurman at Prieska was sufficient to induce the rebels to lay down their arms. It is exceedingly probable that similar results will attend the incursion of the second Canadian contingent into the Carnarvon district, and that no serious fighting will take place. The pacification of this portion of Cape Colony seems almost an accomplished fact, and it will not be long before both Kitchener and the Canadians will be at liberty to rejoin Roberts in his advance on Pretoria. The fact that colonial troops have been chosen for the work of pacifying the rebels may be commented upon as a piece of wise statesmanship, as the contact of citizen colonial soldiers with the Afrikaners has a much less irritating effect than that of regiments of the line.

The Boers are again making themselves felt in the Free State, and have taken down the railway bridge over the Modder River fourteen miles north of Bloemfontein, and between that place and Brandfort. This work has doubtless been performed by the Transvaal Boers who still remain in the Free State, and are now taking measures to bar a British advance northward. There is an important factor which will have a significant bearing upon the opposition to be encountered by General Roberts. By the beginning of April climate will be fighting for the British. Cold nights will have begun, the rains will have practically ceased, water among the kopjes will be scarce, the grass will be dry, and the cattle will be without fodder and the burgher troops with their wretched commissariat and inefficient campaign accommodations cannot withstand these conditions. The Boers are running short of resources as their horses have been used up at a terrible rate, and there is no means of obtaining a fresh supply, which is not the case with the British.

In brief, all or nearly all those convergent with the country are converging that Boer warfare in winter—will be impossible. The two Presidents began the war at exactly the right moment; that various ultimatums were not timed by the action of the British Cabinet or by Mr. Chamberlain's despatches; nothing of the sort, but by grass and water. They allowed them selves three or four months to drive the English into the sea. The plan has failed, disillusionment and discomfiture reign in the Boer camp, and a collapse is threatened.

On the whole, therefore, when Lord Roberts resumes his march all things will be in his favor.

THE WAR NOT YET OVER.

An Expert Says that the Transvaal will Fight On.

London, March 19.—I have heard much talk about the war collapsing, and the papers have even gone so far as to print headlines predicting the immediate end of the struggle. That, however, is not the idea held by military men here.

One and all concur in agreeing that so far as the Orange Free State is concerned, the campaign is at an end, but those who know the country predict that England has by no means finished with the Transvaal.

"I can give you the best idea of what military experts think by quoting one of them who says:

"After all, we have up to date captured no guns beyond the very few which Cronje had, and several which have been surrendered at Belmont and Coleberg. The Boers have in a wonderful way been able to withdraw all their heavy artillery, and that they took so much pains to do so is a distinct proof that they intend later on to use them against us."

"The moment that the English get into the Transvaal they will be in a country which will once again be suitable to the Boers' tactics, and no one knows that better than Roberts. That 'Boer' will come out all right is without doubt, but there will be plenty more fighting between now and the time the British army reaches Pretoria."

"The Boers have unlimited quantities of ammunition and a most remarkable collection of big guns. At the beginning of the war, my informant stated, no less than ninety guns were despatched from Pretoria to the Free State alone. The Free State had its own supply of guns besides these, and the Transvaal still reserved enough for its operations in Natal, at Kimberley, Mafeking and other places. There is a rich haul of heavy ordnance awaiting the British somewhere."

KITCHENER ENTERS PRIESKA.

Rebels Lay Down Their Arms and Submit to Him.

London, March 20.—Gen. Kitchener has entered Prieska, Cape Colony, with out opposition, the insurgents laying down their arms. This confirms the previous reports of their willingness to submit.

Prieska is on the south bank of the Orange River, over 100 miles due west of the Orange River Station, and 107 miles from De Aar Junction. The town has 500 inhabitants, and is at the foot of the Doorn Berg. It is 100 miles north of Carnarvon, where the second Canadian contingent is.

TO QUELL THE REVOLT.

Second Contingent is Operating in the District of Carnarvon.

Carnarvon, Cape Colony, March 19.—The Canadian Mounted Rifles, under Col. Herchmer, and the Canadian artillery, commanded by Col. Drury, forming the second contingent, have arrived here with a contingent of five men. The presence of this force here has had an excellent effect in the district. It is reported that a large force of rebels in the vicinity of Van Wyksvlei.

Carnarvon is about 70 miles due west of the Cape-Bulawayo line, and almost opposite De Aar Junction. It is the centre of a disaffected district. General Kitchener organized the column, which also includes New Zealanders, Wyke's Vets, near Carnarvon, seems to be the centre of the Boer movement.

CANADIANS ENGAGE IN SPORT.

They Beat Her Majesty's Sailors in Athletic Contests.

Cape Town, Feb. 27.—Mr. Ewan says: "The Pomeranian arrived here yesterday. Nine horses died on the voyage, but the men are all well, in splendid spirits and delighted at the prospect of active service. At the sports held here to-day the Canadians entered a team in the tug-of-war contest, being the only non-naval team in this event. They surprised all by reaching the semi-final, driving up to contest against a strong team. They were beaten in the final by a small margin. Their victories over the sailors in the qualifying tugs were vigorously applauded by the great multitude present. Williams, a Canadian, won the half-mile race. These contests indicated the fine physique of the Canadians, especially in view of the fact that they had only just landed after a long voyage."

WHAT THE GERMANS THINK.

Reputation of British Soldiers for Cool Bravery Still Great.

Berlin, March 19.—In the course of a summary in the Tagliche Rundschau of the events which have transpired in South Africa since Lord Roberts assumed the supreme command, Lieut.-Gen. von Boguslawski pays the following tribute to the British soldiers:

"On one or two occasions during the war we have been led to doubt whether the British troops would maintain their old reputation for cool bravery. It must, nevertheless, be acknowledged that the tenacity displayed by Gen. Buller's troops in ever returning to the fray, in spite of many reverses, and being almost continuously in action from 14th February to 27th February is certainly not to be underrated."

"The words of Shakespeare are still true which he put in the mouth of Lord Hambleton, who warned the arrogant French princess before the battle of Agincourt that 'that island of England breeds very valiant creatures whose mastiffs are of unmatchable courage.'"

HAS MAKEING BEEN RELIEVED?

London Correspondent Hears a Guess to That Effect.

London, March 20.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Cape Town, in a despatch dated March 19, records the belief there, based on private telegrams that Mafeking has already been relieved by the Boers departing and thus raising the siege.

The same correspondent says he learns that a strong force will be placed at General Buller's disposal. He adds that this movement is a highly important one. Its objective is not necessarily Mafeking.

DECLARATION OF SURRENDER.

The Oath Which Boers Must Take Upon Giving up Arms.

London, March 19.—Regarding the surrender of Free States under the terms of Lord Roberts' proclamation Bennett Lurhag cables:

"Each man on taking in his arms must sign under oath a declaration of friendship to Great Britain. The oath is in substance as follows:

"I swear not to take up arms against the British Government during the present war, nor to furnish assistance or information about the British forces to any member of the republican forces and further swear to remain quietly in my home until the war is over. I am aware that if I break this oath in any respect I render myself liable to such penalty as the custom of war prescribes."

MAKING RELIEF FORCE BATTLES WITH BOERS

Defeated Boers Fall Back to Christiansa in the Free State South of the Vaal.

TELEGRAPH OFFICE OPENED AT BLOEMFONTEIN.

Lord Roberts Thanks Men of the Naval Brigade for Splendid Work Done by Them During the Campaign—Cecil Rhodes Sails for England.

Cape Town, March 21.

Mr. Cecil Rhodes sailed for England to-day.

London, March 21.

Col. Charles, of the Army Service Corps, will sail for the Island of St. Helena to-morrow in order to make the necessary arrangements for the accommodation of General Buller and the other Boer prisoners. It is still doubtful whether all the prisoners will be sent there owing to the feud between the Transvaalers and Free Staters. If all the Boers are sent to St. Helena a considerable increase in the strength of the garrison is probable.

Lady Smith, March 21.

It has been ascertained in the accidental removal of stones covering some Boer graves after the fight at Pieters Hill, February 28, revealed thousands of skulls and skulls of women.

Bloemfontein, March 21.

Lord Roberts while inspecting the Naval Brigade on the plains outside of the town, in the presence of the Mayor and townsmen, addressed the men, thanking them for the excellent work they had performed in the course of the campaign. He wished good luck to those who were about to rejoin their ships, and expressed the hope that the others would be present at the entry to Pretoria.

PRIVATE GOLF RETURNS.

Wounded Canadian Soldier Returns from London to Africa.

London, March 21.—Private Cole, the Canadian whom the Queen visited at Netley Hospital, returned to South Africa to-day, fully recovered from his wounds.

MAJOR McDONALD ILL.

Toronto Officer in Africa Prostrated by a Sunstroke.

Kilgerton, Ont., March 21.—Miss M. Affleck, a trained nurse in South Africa, writes about her work to a friend in this city. She is stationed at Bloemfontein, four miles from Cape Town. The nurses have plenty to do. At the time of writing there were 450 patients being attended to. Major McDonald of Toronto, was down in the hospital a month. It is believed that he will not go to the front again for some time, for he received a slight sunstroke from which he has not fully recovered.

CANADA'S SHARE OF BONDS.

The Dominion will Get About $900,000 of the Securities.

Montreal, March 21.—The Bank of Montreal has been notified that it will get $120,000 of the British war bonds, which is 6 per cent. of the $2,000,000 asked for. Other Canadian banks and brokers, except those who subscribed for very small amounts, will also get 6 per cent. of their subscription, so that, altogether, Canada will probably get about $180,000 of the bonds.

TELEGRAMS TO BLOEMFONTEIN.

Military Telegraph Office Has Now Been Established There.

New York, March 20.—The Central Cable office of the Western Union Telegraph Company advises as follows: "Telegraphic communications having been restored with Bloemfontein, and a military telegraphic office having been established there, telegrams in plain language may be accepted for that town at the sender's risk." The Commercial Cable Company issues a similar notice.

BOERS AT ALIWAAL NORTH.

They Occupy a Position Among the Hills North of the River.

London, March 21.—The Boers at Aliwaal North are reported to be still holding a position in the hills north of the Free State.

From a Pretoria despatch it appears that the Boers are still holding a position in the hills north of the Free State. It was quoted to the effect that Lord Roberts said he could accept the intervention of no other power, which tends to the belief that American representations would be listened to in the final settlement.

BOERS FOR WESTERN STATES.

Burlington Railroad Will Try and Get Them to Trek West.

Ottawa, Neb., March 21.—As soon as the war in Africa is over and the Boers released, it is thought that the

STEYN EVIDENTLY ECONOMIZES THE TRUTH.

He Denies Charges Made by Lord Roberts With Regard to the Improper Use of White Flag.

London, March 21.—The War Office has received from General Roberts the reply of President Kruger and Steyn to his protest against the abuse of the white flag. The President says that the British commander is mistaken and that on the contrary, the British troops when within fifty yards of a Boer position put up their hands as well as a white flag, whilst at the same time British cannon bombarded the Boer position with the result that Commandant De Beer was wounded. It is also alleged that British troops acted likewise at Spion Kop and at the last battle on the Tugela. It is denied that the explosive bullets found in Cronje's laager were purchased or allowed by the Government. "I have, however," says the reply, "no reason to doubt your statements, as I know many of the burghers of this State and of the South African Republic took a large number of Lee-Enfield rifles and pump guns and other bullets from British troops."

General Roberts in commenting upon the above, says:

"As the enquiry into that matter proves his Honor's allegations to be unfounded, and as I personally saw the holding up of hands which he denies, I have not thought it desirable to continue the correspondence."

The President's reply to Lord Roberts of the misuse of flags of truce is commented upon as impertinent and ridiculous, an Lord Roberts' course in closing a useless discussion is commended as wise.

vice and perhaps to decide about the captured or surrendered rebels.

GAHNBURG FOR HALIFAX.

Minister Department Chooses Several More Officers.

Ottawa, March 21.—Lieut. Ackroyd, B.C., has been appointed to the same rank in 'A' Company of R. C. M. L. in Garrisoning Halifax, and Capt. C. J. McCreary, 7th Battalion, has been appointed a Lt. in 'C' Company. The men from here will leave for Halifax on Saturday to relieve the Leinster.

RELIEF OF MAKEKING.

Times Correspondent Thinks It Will Soon Take Place.

London, March 21.—The Times has a special from Cape Town which says: "It is believed now that Colonel Plummer has reached Mafeking, the relief of Makeking is only a question of days. It is hoped that Colonel Plummer will be given a chance of showing his quality in the field."

The Pacific Cable.

The Pacific Cable Board is holding frequent meetings, and pushing forward its plans. No reply has yet been received from New South Wales or Victoria, regarding Canada's protest against the land line concessions and the completion of the landline agreement with the Eastern Telegraph Co.

At the Irish banquet last night, the hostile manifestations began as soon as Hon. Edward Blake rose to propose and a sharp controversy ensued. Then Mr. McHugh, M.P. for South Armagh, spoke the trouble was renewed and a free fight ensued. Only when the police cleared the room was comparative order restored.

BULLER ENTITLED TO CREDIT.

Correspondents say that he and not Roberts should be credited with the relief of Mafeking.

London, March 21.—Mr. Winston Churchill, in a despatch dated Wednesday, 21, warmly reverts the contention that the relief of Mafeking was due to Lord Roberts' operations.

"On the contrary," he says, "the operations of Lord Roberts were assisted by the fact that Gen. Buller kept the Boers occupied. It would be cruel and unworthy to deprive the Natal army of their hard-won laurels, and none would more vigorously repudiate such a suggestion than Lord Roberts himself."

Mr. Spencer Wilkinson, writing in the Morning Post, justifies Mr. Winston Churchill's argument respecting the relief of Mafeking.

He thinks that Sir Alfred Milner has done to Bloemfontein to arrange for the permanent administration of the province.

WILL LEVY ON PRIVATE PROPERTY.

The London Times Gives the List of the Colonial Secretary's Proclamation.

London, March 21.—The Times says: "The talk about intervention was probably an attempt to blackmail us into leaving the Republic such a measure of independence as might be convenient to European States to intrude against us. It appears to have been pretty generally dropped, save in certain French Journals. Both from New York and Berlin we have to-day contradictory reports of the board story about Johannesburg. The foreign investor will derive some consolation from the announcement that Mr. Chamberlain is about to issue a proclamation in regard to the Boer threat and our Parliamentary correspondence is able to

STEYN CANNOT RALLY ORANGE FREE STATERS

Burghers Are Surrendering on All Sides as Fast as Declaration Can be Signed.

BRITAIN TO RETALIATE IF MINES ARE DAMAGED.

Chamberlain Will Inform Kruger That Private Property of the Boers London Times Thinks Free State Has Been Abandoned, But This is Not Probable.

London, March 21.—The London Times expresses the opinion that the blowing up of certain bridges north of Bloemfontein by the Boers indicates an early abandonment of the Free State. This view is rather a sanguine one, for it can scarcely be conceived that the burghers will give up such a stretch of territory, comprising as it does several positions which are capable of strong defence, without a struggle. It is likely that they have only destroyed these bridges which separate the British camp from the point where they intend to make their next stand against Gen. Roberts. That they have destroyed the Kroonstad bridge and are about to abandon their last chosen capital when the British are not within a hundred miles cannot be believed. The bridges over the Modder, Vet and Zand rivers are in all likelihood destroyed, and as the two latter rivers are the natural line of defence for Kroonstad it is likely the destruction of bridges has not been carried farther north. The Boers will not abandon the Free State without a further attempt at resistance.

If the intention of the Times that Mr. Chamberlain will notify the Boers that their private properties will be levied upon to meet the cost of damage inflicted upon the Johannesburg mines were not sufficient indication of the British policy to recognize transfers of land in the republic after a certain date, leaves nothing to be desired. Taken altogether these two declarations show clearly the intentions of the British. Sir Alfred Milner's ordinance is undoubtedly a provision to defeat transfers of property which the Boers may make in order to outmanoeuvre Chamberlain by making it appear that their land belongs to loyal Afrikaners, a course which many colonialists, with a clean sheet so far as actual revolt is concerned, will connive at.

Columns are being sent in all directions south of Bloemfontein to distribute Gen. Roberts' proclamation of amnesty and conduct the work of pacification. This will, of course, take some time, for the Boers must be induced to trust the British, and to be induced to trust them is no easy matter. The fact that General Roberts has actually succeeded in enlisting a police corps of young Boers to assist in the work and prevent looting by Kaffirs is a great step in this direction and demonstrates the powerful influence of the British commander-in-chief. It may be that we shall next hear of him as having collected a body of Free State Boers to fight against their brethren in the Transvaal. This, of course, is more humorous than probable.

THE ATTEMPT A FAILURE.

President Steyn Cannot Rally the Free State Burghers.

London, March 21.—The Morning Post's correspondent at Bloemfontein telegraphs that the Free State Boers are not rallying to their arms there as fast as they can be registered. He adds that President Steyn's attempt to rally the burghers at Kroonstad is reported to be a complete failure. There is the bitterest feeling against the President in Bloemfontein because he did not acquiesce in the offer to spare the town if it surrendered.

MAY ABANDON THE FREE STATE.

London Thinks that the Boers will not Defend It.

London, March 21.—The second edition of the Times to-day publishes a despatch from Bloemfontein, dated Monday, the 19th March, which says: "The blowing up of bridges by the Boers is an evident sign that the Transvaalers intend to abandon the defence of the Free State." All is quiet in the south and west. A corps of young Boers from the farms surrounding Bloemfontein, under an Imperial officer, has been detailed for police work and to prevent the further looting of abandoned farms by the Kaffirs.

MINES STILL SAFE.

Transvaal Government Working Several Johannesburg Properties.

London, March 21.—The correspondent of the Daily News at Bloemfontein says he learns from a person who was recently in Johannesburg that the Transvaal Government is working the Ferrier, Homas, Robinson, Pioneer, Roma, Village, Landlaagte and Robinson deep mines. The French and German mines have been pumped out with the assistance of the Government. Special police are acting as caretakers of these mines, and only the machinery is working, from want of men. The report that the batteries have undermined with dynamite is untrue. The alleged forcing of the mine deposit for dynamite is also untrue.

WILL BE CROWN COLONIES.

Chamberlain's Reply to Steyn is Said to Indicate the Intention.

London, March 21.—The Colonial Office has telegraphed to Cape Town the text of the proclamation concerning the destruction of property. The fact that the proclamation is issued by the Colonial Office is regarded as an indication that the Republic will be administered as a Crown colony. In this connection it is understood that the leaders of the Opposition now admit that no other settlement is possible if the Republic insist upon their demand for absolute independence.

It is becoming regarded as quite a settled matter that, should the war be ended, as it is now hoped, before June, the Government will dissolve Parliament and appeal to the country on the basis of a successful South African policy. Should the war drag on, dissolution will be postponed until next spring. In any event, one of the foremost planks of the Government platform will be army reorganization.

BOER COMMANDANT CAPTURED.

Grubelaar Taken Prisoner While Lying Wounded at a Farmhouse.

London, March 21.—A despatch to the Morning Post from Natal's Post, dated March 19, says that a low-level railway is being constructed under the broken bridge there, and that supplies are being pushed forward.

A column will start on Wednesday to march by way of Philippolis and Paarlsmouth to Bloemfontein.

Another despatch from Natal's Post reports that a Boer Commandant Grubelaar, who was discovered wounded in a farmhouse in the neighborhood of Donskop.

The British force reconnoitered towards Philippolis last Saturday, and found white flags flying on the farm houses. The women all protested that their husbands were not fighting.

They readily made provisions to the British.

Four hundred of Gen. Buller's colonial brigade left Aliwal North Monday for Nouville, and more will follow.

BOERS CAN HARDLY ESCAPE.

Force of 2,000 Men Retraining Northward May be Captured.

London, March 21.—With regard to the Boer force of 2,000 men north of the Orange river, about two thousand are reported to have reached De Wessendorp, south of Taba N'Chu, where Lord Roberts has sent a brigade of cavalry. Their chance of escape would appear to be small if they are at all encumbered with wagons, for whoever commands the British cavalry is sure to try and intercept them.

COLUMBIA AT CHRISTIANA.

Relieving Force for Mafeking in South of the Vaal.

London, March 21.—The only news in reference to Mafeking comes from Pretoria, under date of March 19. It announces that the British are at Christiansa, a place on the Vaal river, about 20 miles south of the Vaal river.

STEYN'S WARNING TO KRUGER.

"You will Get Better Quarters at St. Helena, Than I."

London, March 21.—It is said that when President Kruger left Bloemfontein, after his recent visit there, President Steyn's parting remark was: "Mind the British do not catch you, or you will get better quarters at St. Helena, than I."

Rudyard Kipling has gone to Bloemfontein.

TWO JOINED THE FIRE.

Members of the Postal Corps With Others' Force.

Woodstock, March 21.—Kamath Murray, one of the members of the postal corps which went with the second contingent to South Africa, in a letter states that he and another member of the corps went direct to Modder River, to join the first contingent. The other members of the force were to be employed in the post office at Cape Town for the present. In conversation with a Canadian who had just returned from the front, it was learned that the Canadian boys were all well and in good spirits. The general impression there seemed to be that the war would be over within three months.

APPLICATION FOR RELIEF.

How the Money Contributed to the Patriotic Fund is Used.

Ottawa, March 21.—Mr. Chas. Evans, secretary of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, to which new security bonds have been subscribed, issued to-day an official statement showing that up to the present seventy applications for relief have been received, sixty-nine of which have been favorably considered. This is exclusive of cases in the city and district of Montreal, which has so far been attended to by a local committee out of funds. The relief cases on the list of the Canadian Patriotic Fund is now paying an amount of about $900 monthly. Only three applications in cases caused by soldier's deaths have been received. This has been treated by an immediate temporary grant of money and will be fully considered later.

Short Story of the Day

The Man Who Would Go to Jail.

BY WARREN McVEIGH.

Sergeant Niles, of the West Forty-third street police station, was on duty when the dusk was falling and when the door opened and a man and woman entered. The woman appeared to be about ten years older than the man; who was probably from 35 to 40 years of age. She was tall and gaunt, with spectacles and was warmly clad. Her lips were tightly set, and there was all about her an atmosphere of determination. The man was one of those weak, characterless-looking persons one sees on almost every street corner in a large city. His face was not bad, however, and his eyes twinkled and laughed all the time and everything presented its humorous side to him; a rainy day was laughable because the wind threw the rain drops down his neck and tickled him. He had no overcoat and his face and hands were red from the cold, his clothing was threadbare; but the sergeant paid more attention to these details than the stranger did, apparently. The man and the woman walked up to the railing in front of the desk and the sergeant, who had been looking at them out of the corner of his eye, raised his head and said:

"Well?"

The man began to grin, but the woman closed her lips tighter than ever and then spoke, snapping out her words as if she were hard at work chopping wood.

"I," she said, "am Tabitha Betts. This man," she added, as the stranger took off his hat and bowed, "is Solomon Smith."

"A. S.," interrupted the man, "nothing says, me, sir; me, sir."

The sergeant adopted the policeman's professional air of disapproval, and the woman sighed.

"We," she continued, "are engaged to be married. We are to be married to-morrow."

"Indeed," said the sergeant. "I congratulate you."

The man and woman bowed and the woman sighed again.

"But," she said, and her voice became louder and more metallic. "I have come to give him up."

"Give him up?" cried the sergeant, "and what has he done?"

"Solomon Smith," said the woman, "tell your story."

The man bowed again to the sergeant, then to Tabitha Betts.

"You must know," he said, "that I am a desperate criminal, a fugitive from justice. If you will look over your list of the men wanted by the Scotland Yard police you will find my name, not Solomon Smith, but Sydney Solomon Smith. My father was a poor man and so when he died he could leave us children nothing but fine names. My sister was Caroline Catherine Cordelia, two names, you see, and a reminiscence of Shakespeare. My brother was Emmanuel Edward Elijah, a patriot, a king and a memory of the Bible. And my name is Sydney Solomon, a wit and a king of the Jews. Caroline Catherine Cordelia is now the wife of a green grocer in Liverpool. Emmanuel Edward Elijah bought a donkey and a cart with the few pounds my father left to him and is now an eminent counterfeiter in the great and glorious city of London, and thus the Queen! I was ever ambitious, and so with my very small fortune I purchased a cold chisel, a pair of steel hammers, a Jimmy and a dark lantern. Thus equipped and armed with nature's greatest blessings, a ready wit and a pleasing exterior, I foresaw a great and honorable career as the most famous criminal of the United Kingdom. Oh, what dreams of the future came to me as I did my first job! It was successful and, indeed, for a year or so, I was always fortunate. Then, through an error of one of my associates, my name became known to the police, and one fine day I found them at my door waiting to arrest me. I took all of my ready cash, climbed out of a rear window and before night I was on board of a steamship bound for this country. I had changed my name to Solomon Smith, and so, of course, the police did not arrest me when I reached this city. They were looking for Sydney Solomon Smith, you know."

"Arrived at New York I looked about me for an opportunity to practice my profession, but, alas, as I said then, I was not fitted for politics and I had not been well enough educated to pass any of the civil service examinations. I had to go to work. This I did and I have never regretted it. For I know of no class of men who are so ill paid in this country as professional thieves. In time I realized that I had committed crimes on the other side and I went to work to repair as well as I could the damage I had done. I paid back to those I had robbed every cent that was due to them. I do not regret that. For it has kept me poor and only a poor man can truly appreciate the good things of this world. Hunger, as one of my namesakes—I do not know whether it was Sydney, Solomon or Smith—has said, is the only real appetizer. Some years passed by and then I met, one glorious day, this woman, Tabitha Betts.

"We became engaged and to-morrow we were to be married. I called on her to-night and we spoke of the past. She told me, 'Shall I tell all?' he asked.

"Yes," said Tabitha Betts in a low, strained voice, "tell all."

"She told me the story of her life. She is a few years my senior. I, alas, am many dollars her junior. And then I told her the story of my past. 'Solomon Smith' she said, 'you must do your duty. You must take your punishment like a man. You have done wrong and you must pay tesed and the sunshine found a streak of gold in her gray hair. Then she took off her finery and packed it all away in a hamper. She grit her teeth and went down to the police court to see her friend arraigned, as stern and as gaunt as she had been the night before when she gave up her life to her duty. Her heart smelt within her when she saw Solomon Smith's companion in the court room, but she held her head back and gave him a smile of encouragement. The poor wretch in that one moment found the secret of life and for once he could see nothing funny in his surroundings.

The case was called, but Sergeant Niles was not present. He did not appear for an hour. Then he marched in with a peculiar expression on his face, and taking the hand of the woman who had called on him the night before, he shook it. The sergeant had been making some inquiries and he realized what kind of a woman he had before him.

Then Solomon Smith was taken before the Magistrate and Miss Betts listened to the evidence against him from her seat on the front row of benches. When the sergeant finished he leaned forward and said something to the Magistrate that she could not hear.

"Call Tabitha Betts," cried the Court.

The woman marched forward and took her stand by the prisoner's side. Smith cast his eyes down and quivered. The woman looked straight before her, as cold and as determined as ever.

the penalty. I love you and I will wait for you. You must give yourself up and when you have been liberated, then we will be happy."

"Do," said Tabitha Betts. "I have come to give him up. Now I feel better. There is no black cloud over my head."

The sergeant looked over the English list of men wanted. He found the name of Sydney Solomon Smith. On his books he entered the name of Sydney Solomon Smith, alias Solomon Smith, and the door-man took the man back and locked him up in a cell.

The man and the woman parted without a tear or a word and the woman marched out into the cold. She reached her home and throwing herself on her bed cried herself to sleep. In the morning she awoke herself in the bridal dress that she was to have worn that day, and looked at herself in the glass. She did not know but the mirror did it, but the hard lines in her face were out-

"You are to be married to this man?" asked the Court.

"I am."

"Take him, he is free."

Tabitha thought that the Magistrate was trying to make fun of her. She remained where she was.

"Did you hear what I said?"

The woman did not reply.

"I have heard your story. The British Consul says that it is true. The Queen has made a special ruling in this case, and has decided not to prosecute your husband."

"But he is a fugitive from justice," said Tabitha. "He has sinned and he should pay the penalty. It is his duty."

"The British Consul declares he will not take your husband back to England, that he has made restitution and that the Queen is glad to get rid of him."

"Then," cried the woman, her anger aroused, and her vanity wounded, "the Queen is a fool."

"You may go," said the sergeant. "But wait," exclaimed the surprised prisoner, "Am I Sydney Solomon Smith again?"

"That you are. You are your whole self."

"And I need no longer go by my disguised name?"

"Never again."

"Thank Heaven," said the prisoner, and Sydney Solomon Smith and Tabitha Betts were married that day, despite the small of camphor about the bridal finery.

A PICKPOCKET'S RUSE.

The Trick by Which He Once Got a Woman's Purse.

Jack Piggott, the noted pickpocket, used to tell a funny story about the difficulty he had in picking the pocket of a fashionably dressed woman who was looking in at the window of Shreve's jewelry store. It illustrated the hardships that the light fingered gentry are forced to endure in the pursuit of their profession and when first related was considered amusing not only by Piggott, but by the many to whom he confided his experience.

It was a cold winter evening, and the lady on whose purse Piggott had designs stood looking at the holiday finery so temptingly displayed. Piggott said that he tried all the arts known to his craft for the extraction of the wallet, but all in vain, until, as a last resort, he fished a toothpick from his pocket and, reaching around, tickled the lady's ear. Instantly she raised her hand to brush away the invading insect or whatever it might be and in so doing let go of her pocketbook that she was carrying in the pocket of her coat.

It was only an instant, but it was long enough for the expert pickpocket to get in his work, and when she put her hand back her money was gone, and in the crowd around her she could not identify the pale faced, fashionably dressed young man at her side as the person who had robbed her, and if she had accused him there would have been no proof against him, as the swag was at once passed to a pal who stood ready to receive it and run. Piggott was not even arrested for that crime, and the lady's hysterical cries furnished material for much long after—San Francisco Bulletin.

HUNGARIAN PIANIST.

New York, March 22.—Ernest Von Dohnanyi, the Hungarian pianist, who won fame in Europe, will make his debut in America to-night, in company with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall. He is but twenty-two years of age.

SHOOTING MATCH.

Newark, N.J., March 22.—Christian W. Feigenspan and Frederick E. Sinnock will meet to-night in a match shoot for the Brooklyn Derby Eagle Cup.

WRESTLING MATCH.

New York, March 22.—Ernest Roebler, the American champion, will meet Beck Olsen, the European champion, in a wrestling match, best two in three falls, for the championship of the world, and a large percentage of the gate receipts, at the Madison Square garden to-night. Olsen has thrown the best men in Europe, including Yousoof, the "Terrible Turk," and Paul Poon, the French champion, and Roebler has downed men of this country as well as those of Europe. He has victories over Tom Jenkins, "Strangler" Lewis, Yousoof, Pons, Professor Atlas, and others too numerous to mention. Sporting men therefore made him the favorite in the betting. Roebler will be seconded by Bob Fitzsimmons.

REPUBLICANS MEET.

Warrenton, Pa., March 22.—The Republicans-District convention opened here to-day for the purpose of electing two delegates and two alternates to the National Republican convention.

COAL RATES ADVANCED.

Pittsburg, March 22.—The advance in the coal rate of ten cents per ton to the lakes, at a recent meeting of the Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio Traffic Association, took effect to-day.

CLEVER, BUT SOULLESS.

One Woman's New Way in Which to Pay Social Debts.

"I don't know much of the ways of fashionable people," said a young physician not long ago, "for I am not in society, but if many society women are like one I know here in town I think I'm safer to be out of it. It was not this season, but it wasn't so long ago but that plenty of people can remember the circumstances. I had among my patients an elderly woman who lived with the daughter's family. The daughter lived, if not beyond her means, at least up to the very edge, went out a great deal and was entertained a great deal.

"The mother fell sick with a complaint which I knew would prove fatal. I did not inform the family of this one day the daughter asked me to call her frankly what her mother's condition was and just how long she could live. I told her that the old lady could not possibly last more than a fortnight. She begged me not to let anybody know how serious the case was. She didn't want her young daughter distressed, she said.

"Of course I told nobody, and just a week after that I read in the papers that Mrs. Dash, the daughter of my dying patient, had sent out invitations for a large dancing party, to be given on an evening a fortnight away. My patient did not live as long as I had expected. The day after she died I read in the papers that 'owing to the sudden death of her mother Mrs. Dash had been compelled to recall her invitations.'"

"She had never intended to give a ball. She could not have afforded it, and she 'bluffed.' I have cold shivers every time I see her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

AN EXCITING LIFE.

Why the Chicago Girl's Brown Hair Turned Golden.

"Goah, Marier, but that was a close shave!" exclaimed Uncle Eben as he dragged his worthy spouse out of the way of a street car that was yet to foot away. "This yer Chicago life is 'nough to make a man's hair turn gray."

"Turn gray?" shrieked his wife. "Wouldn't be so bad of that was all it done. It's decent and respectable to have gray hair, but when it comes to making a poor young gal's hair turn yaller just on account of the excitement of all these cars an' railroads on stilts an' bowlin' people there's when I say it's a sin to live sich big cities. I'm a-goin' right out to 'Lena Jane's' house, as if I ever find it, an' stay right in it till we leave Chicago."

"How do you know it makes people's hair turn yaller?" asked Uncle Eben. "I ain't never heard tell of anything of that kind."

"Well, I see it with my own eyes—leastwise I see it turn brown agin after the poor dears was rested all summer in the country. You know them four gals what staid all summer over at Cousin Ellen's? When they fust come, they'd big brown eyes an' fair complexion an' right yaller hair. Purty soon every one of 'em's hair begin to get streaked in spots, an' before the summer was gone they all had rich brown hair. Then I ast one of 'em what made their hair turn brown, an' she said it was all 'er brown hair in Chicago, whar she had to act in a theater every night, made it turn yaller. Poor thing! She looked so much better at the end of the summer that I hate to think of her comin' back to this great, wicked city."

A Director.

Hon. J. R. Stratton was elected a director of the "Traders' Bank," to the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Tuckwell, of Hamilton.

The esteemed clerk of Douro, Mr. Wm. O'Brien, was in town yesterday, and, like a wise man that he is, renewed his subscription to the Times.

BOERS IN NATAL SHOWING RENEWED ACTIVITY.

They Set Fire to Pomeroy, a Town Thirty Miles East of Ladysmith—Vessel With Remainder of Second Contingent on Board Arrives at Cape Town.

Ladysmith, March 22.—It is reported that a scheme has been arranged for the annexation of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. Kruger, it is said, has been the first President of the federal States, while Steyn receives the appointment of Commandant General of the Boer army. The flag of the so-called federation is to be the same as that of the Transvaal, with the addition of a stripe of orange color. Though it lacks official confirmation, the story is by no means improbable. It is notorious that Steyn has lost the confidence of the burghers, because from the first he refused to show his eyes to the inevitable result of the war. On the other hand, it is difficult to perceive what qualifications Steyn possesses for the position of Commandant General, and more so because a large proportion of his own burghers execrate him.

BOERS BURN POMEROY.
There is Natal are beginning to show activity.

London, March 22.—While the Boers and British in the Orange Free State are taking advantage of the inactivity to enjoy a rest, those on the border of Natal are beginning to show activity. A special despatch from Durban says the town of Pomeroy, 30 miles east of Ladysmith, has been burned by the Boers. A British detachment arriving at Pomeroy has been evacuated the place, and the burghers, but they succeeded in taking up a strong position in the hills with a force estimated to number five thousand men.

MILWAUKEE AT CAPE TOWN.
Toronto, Montreal and Kingston Rifles at the Seat of War.

Montreal, March 22.—The Elder-Dampier transport Milwaukee with the last portion of the second Canadian contingent, composed of Toronto, Kingston and Montreal mounted rifles arrived at Cape Town at 11.10 last night after a successful voyage. All on board are well. Thirty-eight burghers died on the way.

RODE WITHOUT SADDLES.
Gallant feat of the Devonshire Mounted Infantry.

Bethulie, March 22.—It is difficult to believe that this peaceful place was ten days ago the headquarters of Dwyer's command. The wrecked railway bridge is the sole evidence of war. Five tons of explosive to each camp. The effect of Lord Roberts' proclamation is evident. The Free State burghers in the south-western districts are surrendering in large numbers. During the forward movement of Gen. Gatacre the plucky manner in which the Bethulie road bridge, already prepared for demolition, was saved is worthy of every commendation. The 11th Devonshire Regiment of Mounted Infantry covered 100 miles without saddles. Communications are open by the Bethulie road bridge, which is standing intact. The Bethulie railway bridge, Norval's Peak railway bridge and the Colenso road bridge were demolished.

TO BE WELL TREATED.
Dr. Borden thinks Canadians will be offered Imperial Commissions.

Ottawa, Ont., March 22.—There is an unconfirmed report current here this morning to the effect that Canadian officers serving in South Africa have been offered commissions in the Imperial army. A similar offer has already been made to Australian officers in South Africa. Dr. Borden states that no official proposition of this nature has yet been received by the Government, but it is probable that Canada will be as well treated as Australia in the matter.

MACRUM GAINS HIS POINT.
The Charges Against the British Official are to be Investigated.

Washington, March 21.—The House Committee on Foreign Affairs has decided to investigate the allegations made by Charles F. Macrum, ex-Consul to Pretoria, South Africa, relative to the opening of his official mail by the British authorities. Chairman Hitt, on behalf of the Foreign Affairs Committee, agreed to investigate the charges without the sanction of the House if that would be satisfactory to Mr. Wheeler, the author of the resolution. Mr. Wheeler assented and has wired Mr. Macrum to come to Washington as soon as possible to appear before the committee.

ARR GLAD TO QUIT.
Three Fishers Working their Farms and Charmed With Lord Roberts' Methods.

London, March 22.—Barnet Burleigh has been following—Blenheim, Wednesday, March 21.—A despatch from Kimberley reports that the road is safe and that the Boers, who are working their farms, all speak in eulogistic terms of Lord Roberts, and declare they are proud to be under his orders. Steyn is held in great contempt.

Our opponents to the north are strongly and the railway bridge over the Modder River is under repair. The Boers are in a desperate, but not desperate, state.

MAKING RELIEF COLUMN IN A BAD FIX.

Commandant Snyman Attacks Col. Plumer and Occupies a Strong Position on His Left After Severe Fighting.

Lobatal, March 14.—The Boers under Commandant Snyman are advancing in force from Mafeking towards Lobatal. Colonel Hode made a reconnaissance on March 13 and found Pitsani and Potjago occupied by the Boers. He returned to Lobatal and made a demonstration on March 14. He found the Boers in strength at a sharp curve on the railway. They had mounted a gun on the line, and were lying in wait for the construction train. A brisk firing occurred a few miles south of Lobatal on the morning of the 15th. The Boer Maxim was freely used. Colonel Hode came in touch with the Boers just in time to prevent the camp being surprised. The Boers attacked the advance party and captured a few boxes of ammunition and nearly secured a Maxim.

ENGLISH RESIDENTS ANNOTED.
British Residents in Antwerp are insulted by the Boers.

Antwerp, March 22.—Since the British have begun to win victories in South Africa the feeling of the people towards English residents, though less boisterous than formerly, has become even more annoying. From and people delight in giving petty annoyance wherever possible, by the way of revenge for English successes. There seems to be general disappointment at the turn events have taken after all the promises and boasts of Dr. Leyds.

Yesterday an English lady was spat upon by a well dressed Fleming, who was in the midst of an excited discussion of the war. Today the Boer vendors were selling in front of the Black Exchange large mountain gards announcing the death of English troops at the front. An Englishman informed the burgomaster, who had the nuisance stopped.

DISLOYAL DUBLIN.
Motion to Present an Address to the Queen Defeated.

Dublin, March 21.—The North Dublin District Council to-day defeated the motion in favor of the presentation of an address to the Queen on her forthcoming visit to Ireland. At a public meeting held in Limerick a resolution to present an address to the Queen during her visit to Ireland was enthusiastically adopted.

OLIVIER LEFT SMITHFIELD.
He Did Not Wait for the Arrival of the British.

Atter North, Cape Colony, March 22.—Commandant Olivier left Smithfield two hours before the British scouts arrived. He only succeeded in inflicting about 50 men to accompany him, mostly insurgent colonials. The Free States refused to go with him, and are returning to their farms.

FOUR THOUSAND BOERS.
With Sixteen Guns They are Retreating to the North.

Rouxville, March 20.—This town was the headquarters of the Boers under Major Cunningham. Commandant Olivier is believed to be at Smithfield with 200 burghers and 75 revolvers. Quantities of rifles, ammunition and stores were found here. Landrost Hoffman has been appointed to act as magistrate. The British flag has been hoisted, and notice served upon the residents to deliver up their weapons. Trooper Robinson, who was captured in the fight at Allwal North and carried to Smithfield, has arrived here, reporting that Captain O'Neill, with 50 scouts and 100 Berkshires, occupied Smithfield yesterday. The Boer commander from Allwal North, Bethulie and Rouxville joined forces, and numbering nearly 4,000 men, with 16 guns, retired towards Sand River on Sunday night.

BOERS HAD THE ADVANTAGE.
An American Officer Gives His Opinion About the Campaign.

New York, March 22.—Lieut. Godfrey L. Carden, an officer with Rear Admiral Sampson during the Spanish American war, has recently returned from South Africa. In an interview yesterday he said: "I am not surprised when the Boers won their first battles, for the advantage was wholly on their side. They had 150 rapid-firing guns and the British did not have one until a month ago. The plans for the Boer campaign were laid out over ten years ago, and have been studied by the youth of the Transvaal at the military college in Pretoria. Every officer and many of the men knew every inch of ground over which their army has marched. The Boer artillery was excellent, the guns being of the type which figured in the Dreyfus case, the mechanism of which the Germans wished to learn. Several years ago President Kruger sent agents to France to find out the average number of rounds of ammunition carried during the Franco-Prussian war. Then he ordered twice as many rounds for his army. The military college has been in the charge of the best men obtainable, and the Boers have shown the results of this training. Their entrenchments are models of their kind, and surpass those of the British. The Boers are using Mauser rifles, which have a range exceeding that of the British arms by several hundred yards. Pretoria will not be captured by the English before a desperate and bloody struggle."

BOERS EVACUATE CAMPBELL.
Kimberley, March 22.—It is rumored that the Boers are evacuating the town of Campbell, 60 miles north of Kimberley.

Lord Methuen's movements north of Kimberley are believed to be a prelude to the gathering of a column of 25,000 men.

GEN. GATACRE REPULSED BY BOERS AT BETHULIE.

General Olivier Repulsed the British With Heavy Loss Capturing Many of Them.

REPORT OF DEFEAT NOT BELIEVED IN LONDON.

So Many Burghers Expressed a Desire to Surrender Under Terms of the Proclamation That Roberts is Sending Small Columns to Receive Submissions.

Kroonstad, Orange Free State, March 20, via Pretoria, March 22.—The Boers commanded by Gen. Olivier have engaged the British troops under General Gatacre in the vicinity of Bethulie, repulsing the British with heavy loss and capturing many of them.

Burghers are arriving here in great numbers. General Dwyer arrived today. Desultory fighting with Col. Plumer's column has occurred near Gaboron.

PROBABLY UNTRUE.
Report of Gatacre's Defeat Not Believed in England.

London, March 22.—The report of General Gatacre's defeat by the Boers is not believed here. The last advance placed Gatacre about thirty miles north of Bethulie, where the Boer report says he was defeated.

RECEIVING SURRENDER.
Several Flying Columns Despatched to Receive Surrendered Arms.

London, March 22.—Lord Roberts telegraphs from Bloemfontein, under date of March 21, as follows: "So many burghers have expressed a desire to surrender under the terms of the last proclamation that I have sent small columns in various directions to register their names and take over their arms."

"A cavalry brigade has gone to the eastward to Thaba Nchu, and a detachment from Springfield has occupied Smithfield, where some Transvaal and a wagon with arms and ammunition were captured. The Scots Guards are at Edenburg and Reddersburg. Gen. Clements' brigade is marching either way of Philippolis and Kaunsmuin."

THE SITUATION REVIEWED.
Reasons Why Report of Gatacre's Defeat May Be True.

London, March 22.—According to a report from Pretoria, General Gatacre has been defeated by Commandant Olivier in the neighborhood of Bethulie with heavy loss and the capture of many of his men. There is nothing in the report to inspire confidence, however, in the incredulity with which it is received in some quarters. The locality may have been broadly stated and the fight may have taken place at a considerable distance from Bethulie, though in that district. It is stated by several correspondents that a body of 4,000 Boers from this neighborhood composed of the remnants of the Colenso, Stormberg and Allwal North commands is endeavoring to escape northward by hugging the border of Beaufortland, hoping to insinuate itself between Thaba Nchu and Ladysmith. It is quite possible that Olivier may have formed this force and that General Gatacre, having overtaken it, has met with a temporary reverse. The force cannot escape, however, for a line of British troops and a river will fall in the way.

It may be pointed out that more often than not Boer reports of engagements have turned out to be correct, and there is no reason why the present one should not. In confirmation of this view it may be pointed out that this morning the despatch from Lord Roberts, concerning news of fighting with Col. Plumer's force, is confirmed by another message from Boer sources containing the same announcement in another form. Moreover, it is significant that General Roberts' latest despatch contains no mention of Gatacre. In any event the engagement can have no serious effect upon the pacification of the Free State, which General Roberts is taking prompt measures to bring about by the despatch of flying columns in every direction. It is scarcely probable that the advance northward will be resumed until this work has been accomplished so that a reasonably safe line of communication can be left behind.

SOLDIER TAKES HIS LIFE.
Pte. Tobin, of the Royal Canadian Infantry Shoots Himself.

Toronto, March 22.—Stanley Barreth was thrown into a state of consternation this morning when it was learned that Pte. Stephen Tobin of the Royal Canadian Infantry, had committed suicide by shooting. About 10 o'clock this morning Sergeant Barreth, though he heard a shutter slam in the barracks reading room, and on going into the room to investigate, discovered Private Tobin sitting upright in a chair, a rifle between his knees, and the top of his head blown almost completely off, the brain being scattered all over the room.

REPAIRS MADE SLOWLY.
London, March 22.—It was reported that the repairs to the railway bridge at Norval's Peak will cost two months, and though the position is available for aerial tramway construction, the heavy stores which are necessary to complete the repairs are likely to be in service more than a month.

LIKE A OTOLONG.
London, March 22.—A correspondent of the Daily News at Springfield reports: "Gen. Gatacre is crushing through the country like a cyclone, with flying columns in all directions. His progress and strategy has proved of incalculable value to Lord Roberts."

COMMISSIONS IN THE ARMY FOR COLONIALS.

Over a Hundred Commissions in Artillery and Infantry Offered Australians.

London, March 22.—The Times says: "Our Melbourne correspondent reports a wide canvass of the Imperial Government. Mr. Chamberlain has informed the Australian Government that 114 commissions in the infantry and royal artillery will be offered to Australians. The selection of the gentlemen to be appointed is entrusted to the Governors of the colonies and the military commanders. Similar offers of course, are made, or will shortly be made, to the other self-governing colonies, which have so nobly helped us in this war, and means may perhaps be found to extend the measure to Crown colonies, many of which have given proofs of enthusiastic loyalty. The colonists in all our great possessions have shown themselves born soldiers, and the nation has realized for the first time the worth of the resources it has to draw upon. It will be, we trust, the main object of our statements, both at home and in the colonies, to endeavor by all means in their power to make these resources permanently available as a recognized part of the defenses of the Empire."

ago had been in the Royal Canadian Dragoons, left that body to join the infantry in order that he might apply for a place on the Mounted Infantry for South Africa. His application was successful, but owing to his going on a prolonged spree his name was struck off the list, the doctor pronouncing him physically unfit. Ever since he has been in a state of despondency, which he tried to relieve by heavy drinking.

Tobin, whose home is in Halifax, where he is highly connected, was at one time a bank teller, but owing to his drinking habit he lost his position and successfully applying for a place on the North-west mounted police, and was with that body for three years. Then he joined the Royal Canadian Dragoons, with which force he has been connected nearly five years.

Tobin, who was 34 years of age, was a cousin of C. B. Tobin, who lost an eye in the war with the Boers, and hit his way to South Africa with the Strathcona Horse. He has an aunt of the same name in Ottawa.

Coroner Cotton is holding an inquest this afternoon, though there is no doubt that Tobin deliberately killed himself by holding the gun between his knees with the muzzle in his mouth and then pulling the trigger.

WHITE IS IMPROVING.
Defender of Ladysmith will call for England on March 23.

Cape Town, March 21.—The condition of General Sir George White, who commanded the garrison at Ladysmith during the siege of that town, has improved. He will call for England on March 23. All the members of his staff, except two, have joined Gen. Roberts' staff.

BOER LOSSES 13,222.
English Telegraph Company Authority for This Statement.

London, March 22.—The correspondence of the Daily News at Springfield asserts that one of General Buller's raids resulted in the capture of valuable Boer documents, including an official record of their killed and wounded, showing that they have lost a great number. The correspondence adds that the records also show that a false system has been adopted by the leaders in regard to informing the Dutch people of their loss.

The exchange Telegraph Company is authority for the statement that it is officially admitted at Pretoria that the total Boer casualties have been killed, 2,120; wounded, 1,231; sick, 4,351; prisoners, 5,500. Total, 13,222.

LOSSES ON BOTH SIDES.
Revised reports are—

Boer losses—
Killed ..... 2,120
Wounded ..... 1,231
Sick ..... 4,351
Prisoners ..... 5,500
British—
Killed ..... 2,041
Wounded ..... 2,054
Dead of disease ..... 200
Prisoners ..... 2,000

ABANDONED HIS COMMUNICATION.
Striking Features of General Roberts' Movement at Bloemfontein.

London, March 22.—A despatch to the Standard from Bloemfontein, dated Tuesday, says: "A striking feature of the advance on Bloemfontein was the abandonment of our communications with Ficksburg. Lord Roberts, confident in the ability of his transport to meet all the immediate needs of the army, deliberately left the enemy at Abraham's Kraal to do what they liked. The result fully justified him. The enemy to the south were paralyzed by the boldness and rapidity of the stroke, and General Clements and Gatacre were enabled to cross the Orange River almost without opposition."

ANOTHER SIX MONTHS.
President Steyn Says the Boers Will Fight On.

London, March 22.—The Times, in its second edition, publishes a statement from Lorenzo Marques which quotes President Steyn as saying at Kroonstad, that the Boers could continue the struggle for six months longer.

London, March 22.—A correspondent of the Daily News at Springfield reports: "Gen. Gatacre is crushing through the country like a cyclone, with flying columns in all directions. His progress and strategy has proved of incalculable value to Lord Roberts."

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, MARCH 23, 1900

THE PERIL OF JOHANNESBURG.

Johannesburg is the largest and wealthiest city in the Transvaal Republic, and it has been built up almost wholly by Oullander, who developed the rich mines in that region. That city alone is a larger source of wealth to the republic than all the Boers within it, and its destruction would involve a direct loss of probably $200,000,000.

Johannesburg is not a defensible city, and the Boer commander is not likely to make any attempt to defend it. It is expected, therefore, that the Kruger army will make its final stand at Pretoria, the capital of the government, that offers very much greater opportunities for defense, and the fall of which would end the republic. Johannesburg is only some twenty-five miles distant from Pretoria, and would be an admirable base for the English army in its campaign against the Boer capital. These conditions have led to a very general and earnest discussion as to the probability of Kruger destroying Johannesburg as he falls back to defend Pretoria, and the question of his right to do so, according to the rules of civilized warfare, has attracted the attention of military men in every country.

While President Kruger has little sympathy with the mass of the residents of Johannesburg, and has ruled them even in their municipal affairs with a rod of iron, it is not to be assumed that he would destroy it in a revengeful spirit. If Johannesburg were destroyed it would cripple his government for years to come, even if he succeeded in maintaining it, and although President Kruger has been a law unto himself among his own people, both Boers and Oullanders, he is now on trial before the world and dare not flagrantly violate the laws of civilized warfare.

We regard it as needless to discuss the right of President Kruger to destroy Johannesburg if his failure to do so would greatly endanger his capital. If the military situation is, as it seems to be, that with Johannesburg as a base for the English army, which would make the capture of Pretoria only a question of time, Kruger would certainly be excusable under the laws of war in destroying it. Commanders in the field are warranted in destroying public or private property not only when dictated by military necessity, but when suggested by military expediency, and the will of the commander is the law of the case. Shooting and robbing as would be the destruction of Johannesburg, the Boers would be excusable for the act if their military commander regarded it as an important means of protecting his capital.

The will of the commander of the Boer army is the law that must decide for or against the destruction of Johannesburg. If so destroyed, the Boer commander would not be regarded as a criminal.

tary judgment of the world for vandalism. So far the will of the Boer must be the law; but when the war shall be ended, if the British shall then be master, as he doubtless will be, he could demand reparation for the destruction of the English property, and then the will of the conqueror would be the law to rule the case.

There is little likelihood that Kruger would permit the destruction of Johannesburg unless he believed it to be a military necessity; but if its destruction shall appear to be a military necessity the accepted laws of war would warrant, or at least excuse, the act that under all other conditions would be regarded as fiendish vandalism.

TO ST. HELENA.

It is rather distinguished treatment that the British military authorities purpose for Cronje and his soldiers. It is said they are to be sent to St. Helena, the island made famous by the confinement of Napoleon there. It is a comfortable little island more than a thousand miles out in the Atlantic, where prisoners may be allowed to wander at will without fear of their escape. It supports a population of about four thousand upon an area of fifty square miles, and could probably accommodate as many more under military system.

As the fighting forces of the Boers are limited, it is evidently thought good policy to keep the prisoners taken, rather than to exchange them or to release them on parole. It would be difficult to keep them safely confined in Cape Colony, and undesirable to keep them on transports, as they are now, but they can be sent to St. Helena and kept out of harm's way. It was probably the intention to use St. Helena for a military prison that gave rise to the premature talk about sending Kruger there. Kruger has not been caught, but to Cronje the thing is not a joke.

KRUGER AND THE BOERS.

The Times yesterday received a letter from a writer who fails to append his name thereto, expressing sympathy with Kruger and the Boers. The writer says that there is any number of people who feel sorry for the Boers.

Our unknown correspondent may live long enough to discover that his sympathies have been sadly misplaced, and that the Boers is a very bad sort of a barbarian, who is fanatical in his religion to cover every form of brutal oppression. They formed the South African Republic primarily because the English government denied them the right in Cape Colony to wallow their niggers. They profess to learn from the Bible that the nigger has no soul; that he is a mere animal and the English have been compelled repeatedly, not only to enforce the abolition of slavery in what is not the Orange Free State and the Transvaal, but also to protect the criminal Boers from the vengeance they had provoked from the bordering African tribes, by stealing their women and children into slavery.

He will also learn that Kruger went to London when bankrupt, not many years ago, sold the valuable mine properties now held by the English, for which he and his friends received over a million of dollars, and gave the most absolute promise of protection to person and property, and participation in the government of the Republic. The revenues of the Kruger republic were then $250,000 a year and the Government bankrupt.

By English development the taxes, paid almost wholly by the English residents, imposed upon them by the Kruger government without the right of representation, now amount to $20,000,000, which would be $2,000 annually for every Boer family in the Republic, or six times as much as the average Boer family expends.

These Boer sympathizers will also learn that an English city in the South African Republic, built up wholly by English capital and contributing tenfold more to the treasury of the Republic than all the Boers within it, is absolutely denied the right to have any voice whatever, even in its own municipal regulations. It cannot pave a street or build a sewer without the consent of the Kruger authority. They are held in abject slavery solely for the purpose of robbery, and the chief resentment of the Boers against the English to this day is their lingering hatred of the English for denying the Boers the right to steal Zulus as slaves and wallow them as a matter of pious amusement.

EXPERIMENTAL UNION FIELD TESTS FOR 1900.

The Farmers Are Again to be Supplied With Material for Experiments.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir, The members of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union are pleased to state that for 1900 they are again prepared to distribute to every Township of Ontario material for experiments with fertilizers, fodder crops, roots, grains, grasses, and clovers. This system of co-operative experimental work in Agriculture was started in 1885 with 46 plots, which were situated on twelve different farms in Ontario. Since that date, however, the work has increased from year to year, and in 1899 there were 12,035 plots, which were situated on 3,455 farms throughout Ontario.

- List of Experiments for 1900.
- Three varieties of Oats.
  - Three varieties of six-rowed Barley.
  - Two varieties of Hulls Barley.
  - Three varieties of Spring Wheat.
  - Three varieties of Buckwheat.
  - Three varieties of Field Peas.
  - Two varieties of bug-proof Field Peas.
  - Three varieties of Soy or Japanese Beans.
  - Three varieties of Hunking Corn.
  - Three varieties of Mangolds.
  - Two varieties of Sugar Beets for stock feeding.
  - Three varieties of Swedish Turnips.
  - Two varieties of Fall Turnips.
  - Three varieties of Carrots.
  - Three varieties of fodder or silage Corn.
  - Grass Peas and two varieties of Vetches.
  - Dwarf Essex Rape and two varieties of Kale.
  - Three varieties of Clover.
  - Sainfoin, Lucerne, and Mammoth Red Clover.
  - Five varieties of Grasses.
  - Three varieties of Field Peas.
  - Three varieties of Sweet Corn.
  - Four fertilizers and no fertilizer with Corn.
  - Four fertilizers and no fertilizer with Mangolds.
  - Sowing peas at four different dates to determine the injury done by the pea bug (Hemiphaea pisae).
  - Planting potatoes the same day and five days after being put in the ground.
  - Planting cut potatoes which have not been coated with land plaster.
  - Planting Corn in rows and in squares.

Material for either number 35 experimental or number 36 experiment will be sent by express, and for each of the others it will be forwarded by mail.

Each person in Ontario who wishes to conduct an experiment and is willing to use great care and accuracy in the work and report the results of the test as soon as possible after harvest should select the exact experiment desired and apply for the same at an early date. The material will be forwarded in the order, in which the applications are received until the limited supply is exhausted. It might be well for each applicant to make a second choice for fear the first could not be granted.

Winter in the Country.

In which is depicted the elysium of bliss in which life in the country is regarded by the Editor of this great family journal.

Just think of the farmers,

 With frost on the whiskers and frost on the
 And think of the liars [how]
 Around the wood fires, [toast]
 Imbibing hard cider and toasting their

And think of the slaying
 And swording and flaying
 Of quarter-ton porkers just rolling in fat!
 And think of them makin'
 The filch and the bacon, [that]
 The sausages, spare ribs, the hams and all

It's really a pity
 To live in the city,
 Where snowdrifts are black and rheumatism
 When townships handy [low residue],
 Are having a dandy
 Old winter with genuine snow on the side.

And here it is raining
 And folks are complaining Of hard and soft colds, influenza and It's really a pity [grippe]
 To live in the city [at all],
 Where winter is nothing but alush, slop

 As would a steam boat, [fright]

Editor Morning Times.

The bulletin of the Royal Gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber as Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important source of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

FINANCIAL AND MINING STOCKS

Short Story of the Day

FLORA AND HANNAH.

BY MARY E. WILKINS.

It happened a number of years ago, when valentines were made more account of than they are now. Why, in those days some valentines were almost as good as an offer of marriage. I am sure Jonty's was. He meant it for me, and I knew he did. Jonty, his name was Jonathan, but we always called him Jonty, was my husband's youngest brother, and he had lived with me ever since his father died, when he wasn't more than a baby.

He was twenty years younger than my husband, and we both of us, since we didn't have any children of our own, looked upon him as a son. My husband just set his eyes by his little brother, and he was a pretty boy, the reddish cheeks and the curling light hair, and he was just as good as he could be, always ready to run errands, get a pail of water and bring in kindling wood, starting the minute he was told, and going laughin' as if he was tickled to death at havin' a chance to do somethin' for somebody. The way he used to wait on Grandma Page, find her glasses for her and hold her yarn was really wonderful in a boy. Grandma Page was his and Caleb, my husband's great-grandmother. She was pretty old when Jonty came to live with us, and when that happened about the valentine she was nearly 80, but one of the prettiest old ladies you ever saw, cheeks as pink as girls, and her white hair all wavy, and she wore the nicest white caps, and lavender ribbons on them. We were proud of Grandma Page, and she was one of those gentle, delicate, clinging creatures that everybody loves and pats. People used to say she didn't have much force and couldn't do anything but knit and look peaceful and pretty, but she wasn't half the care that most old people are. When my husband died Jonty was about 25 years old, and it was the greatest comfort to me that I had him and Grandma Page. Jonty he took hold and ran the farm just as smart and we got along well, and had plenty of everything, though I was sad enough sometimes when Jonty came to me that afternoon about the time when Caleb sent me a valentine for one thing, and then I couldn't help feeling a little sad that Jonty should be thinkin' of some other woman beside his grandma and me, though I knew it was for the best if he got a good wife and helpmeet.

But I tried to look as cheerful as I could. Jonty didn't act half as silly and ashamed in asking me as some boys would have acted. He was always real honest and simple and outgoing, and never seemed to see any reason for being ashamed of anything that was right. He never colored up a night, though his cheeks were always like roses, as bright as a girl's, and he laughed kind of sweet and pleasant when he showed the little sheet of gilt-edged paper with a bunch of rosebuds in the corner that was to go with the handsomest valentine I ever laid my eyes on. There was paper cut somehow so you could lift it up in a sort of spiral twist and see underneath a couple seated in an arbor all covered with roses. What Jonty wanted was a little poem written on that sheet of paper. "Can't you do it, Aunt Jane?" said he in his coaxing way. He always called me aunt, though I was really his sister-in-law.

"Why, my land, Jonty, I don't know I can," said I. "I'm afraid I'll spoil this beautiful paper."

"Oh, no, you won't," said he. "Do, Aunt Jane."

Now, I have really had quite a name for writing poetry, and once a piece on the death of Deacon Briggs' wife was published in the paper, but I have written mostly in alms for people people on the death of relatives and friends, and then they would keep them in their family bibles. Why, there was one spell when it seemed to me that nobody died that I wasn't called upon to write a poem about it. But I hadn't never written a valentine in my life, and was dreadful bashful. I was afraid of spoiling that handsome paper. But I wrote it all off on a sheet of paper, and I wrote quite a good piece, though I do say so, and Jonty he copied it and signed the name.

"I know I know who it's going to," said I.

"Yes, it's Flora," said Jonty, laughin', but just as honest as if he was a child. Grandma Page was knittin' in a corner, and she hadn't paid any attention to what was goin' on. She had grown so dreadful hard of hearin' within a year, we had to shout to make her hear anything.

I knew well enough that the valentine was going to Flora before I asked Jonty. She was the prettiest girl in the town and all the young men were wild about her. Nobody looked at her sister Hannah, though she was a nice girl. Sometimes I used to think that she would be full as nice to get along with as Flora, though she did have a dull skin and dull-colored hair and a homely nose. Hannah hadn't a good feature in her face, except her eyes, which were as brown and honest as a good dog's. Flora, beside her, looked all shine and pink runnin' back. "Why, where is it, Aunt Jane?" said he.

"Why, ain't it there on the table where you left it?" said I.

"No, it ain't," said he.

"Why, that's dreadful funny," said I. I wiped the flour off my hands and went in to look, but there was no valentine there. We searched everywhere, but we couldn't find it. When grandma came back we questioned her, then the mystery was solved, as we supposed. She said in her soft, innocent way, like an old baby's, that she had been down to the postoffice, thinking there might be a letter from Edward. Edward was her son out west, and she had posted the valentine. Well, there was n't anything at all strange about it. The postoffice was next door to Mrs. Atkins'. Grandma often went there and often posted letters, but it did seem a little odd that she should have taken the valentine. However, Jonty showed her in his sweet way, and we supposed everything was all right.

After supper that night Hannah came in. Grandma had gone to bed and Jonty had run down to the store on an errand. I was in a minute that something had happened. Hannah didn't look like herself. Her dull cheeks were pink, her eyes all red, and she looked almost pretty.

"Oh, Aunt Jane," she said, she always called me Aunt Jane, "I saw him go past, and knew he wasn't here, and I wouldn't have come."

"What do you mean? What is the matter?"

to do. I put my hand on the girl's head and tried to brush her, and then I heard a noise and looked up and there was Jonty standing in the door, and he had heard every word. And Hannah looked up and saw him and sprang to her feet and ran straight to him and was sobbing on his shoulder.

I shall never forget Jonty's face as he looked at me over her head. He was so kind and so gentle that in all his bewilderment his arms had gone 'round the little thing and he was striking her head as if she had been a lost kitten. And I shall never forget the sound of my own voice, it was so queer and faint, as I said to him—

"Hannah says she's got a valentine from you, Jonty."

Well, Jonty smiled and looked at her and took her home and when he came back his face was as white as a sheet. He sat down opposite me and looked at me and I at him.

"What be you goin' to do, Jonty?" said I.

"I ain't goin' to break that poor little thing's heart, and Mark Williams is over there with Flora and I don't believe she has ever had much choice betwixt us and—she ain't never acted as if she thought so much of me as this."

"You ain't goin' to marry Hannah when it's Flora you want?" said I, for I thought he was carryin' it too far.

"Yes, I be, unless I see that Flora is goin' to be upset over it," said he.

And he did. Mark Williams married Flora, but I always suspected she would full as soon have had Jonty, but she was never a girl to cry for one fiddle when she could get another, and Jonty married Hannah. Hannah has made him a splendid wife and there ain't been a happier family in the village than ours.

But one thing always puzzled Jonty and me, though we never said a word to Hannah about it. We could not understand how Jonty ever happened to direct that valentine envelope to Hannah instead of Flora. He said he could almost take his bible oath that he hadn't. He used often to talk to me about it and say that he knew that Hannah was the wife for him and made him happier than Flora could ever have done, but he couldn't understand about that valentine. "Hannah has got it and I have seen it," said he, "but she took it out of the envelope and made a little silk case for it, with two doves and a sprig of myrtle embroidered on the outside, like one her cousin had, and the envelope is gone, but I must have written Hannah instead of Flora. Sometimes it seems supernatural when I look at Hannah and see what a dear good wife I've got."

Well, we never discovered the mystery of that valentine till grandma died two years after Jonty and Hannah were married. She had a shock and lost her speech and lay so five days before she died. One day about a week after the funeral Jonty was lookin' at her old bible, the one she always kept in her room on the little stand by her bed, and he gave a great start. "What is it, Jonty?" said I. Hannah was out in the kitchen getting supper and we were in the sitting-room.

"Look here, Aunt Jane," said Jonty.

And I looked and there in grandma's bible, pinned to the chapter of Proverbs where it says that "The heart of her husband can safely trust in her" was the envelope of the old valentine directed to Flora.

and white and gold. She was tall and of a fine shape, too, and Hannah was under size. Both girls used to be in our house a good deal, and grandma and I thought a lot of them. Grandma said that Flora was a pretty creature.

Well, after Jonty's valentine was finished he left it on the sitting-room table, and went out to see a man who had come to ask about some wood, and I went out in the kitchen to bake some cakes. Pretty soon I saw Grandma Page with her big gray shawl on, and her white hood, kind of rockin' down the front walk in a way she had. She was quite stout. I thought to myself I guessed she was goin' to run into Mrs. Atkins'. She wasn't so that quite often—it was only a step down the street and she wasn't feeble at all.

In a little while Jonty came through the kitchen on his way to the sitting-room to get his valentine. Then he came ter, child?" said I, for she was laughing and crying all together.

"I had to tell somebody, I was so happy," said she, "and Flora has got Mark Williams calling on her and mother is away and—"

"Why, what is it? What has happened?" said I.

"Oh, don't you, don't you know?" said she.

"No, I don't," said I.

"Jonty had sent me a valentine," she whispered. Then down her head went on my lap and she cried and cried for pure joy. "Oh, Aunt Jane," she sobbed out, "I never thought anybody would love me. I thought it would always be Flora, and now it's me, and I've always thought Jonty was better than anybody else. Oh, Aunt Jane, I'm not half good enough for him. I wish I was pretty like Flora, but I do love Jonty and I will try to make him happy."

BOERS SURRENDER ONLY OBSOLETE WEAPONS.

Oratory in Cape Colony Against Too Lenient Treatment of Disloyal Residents—Butler Trying to Drive the Boers Out by Flanking Movement.

Vienna, March 23.—Deputies Wolf and Semich have telegraphed to the Premier demanding that he take steps to stop the exportation of forty-five cannons, which are said to have left the Skoda factory in Bohemia on their way to Trieste. It being further alleged that they are intended for the use of the British forces in South Africa.

London, March 23.—9.30 p.m. The War Office has issued the following from the General Commanding at Cape Town to the Secretary of War:

Cape Town, March 23. The following telegram has arrived from Nicholson, Bulawayo, March 16. The following is from Plumer at Lobatse, March 14.—The Boers advanced from the south in considerable force this morning. They first advanced from Gouda Siding. After a sharp little engagement Lieut. Col. Bodie's advanced post was compelled to retreat. The retreat was excellently carried out to our main position. The casualties included: Lieut. Chapman and a corporal, and two missing, probably prisoners. Five troopers were wounded. Chapman's horse fell with him close to the enemy, who immediately surrounded him. The exact Boer casualties are unknown, but several were shot at short range. In the afternoon the Boers advanced further north and shelled our position from a ridge on the left. Our twelve pounder replied, the artillery duel continuing until sunset. Lieut. A. J. Tyler has since died of wounds. One native was killed.

London, March 24. A despatch to the Daily News from Lorenzo Marques, dated Friday says: "It is reported there from Pretoria that Commandant Eloff is isolating Col. Plumer's force near Gaborone."

London, March 24, 4.15 a.m. Roberts' main army continues waiting at Bloemfontein. The symmetrical interest in the fate of Mafeking has intensified with Col. Plumer's forced retirement to Crocodile Pools, where he was two months ago. Relief from the north now seems to be impossible. Lord Methuen is skirmishing with the Boers at Warrenton, 16 miles away. Although seemingly in force sufficient to do pretty much as he likes, he has not advanced these five days. It is hoped that his military administration has a pleasant surprise in preparation for the Britishers by raising the siege with a strong column of cavalry and artillery, debouching to Mafeking, while Commandant Snyman is drawn off to engage Col. Plumer.

Gen. French's cavalry and mounted infantry, according to a rumor, are fighting somewhere east of Bloemfontein. This suggests more Boer bad news, as Commandant Olivier's command with 3,000 wagons is reported on the Beaufort frontier, travelling northward towards Kroonstad via Ladybrand. This enormous wagon train is supposed to be moving 35 miles a day. French's cavalry posts stretch from Bloemfontein eastward to the mountains. Gen. Buller has not yet moved in Natal. The eighth division will go direct to Bloemfontein. Lord Roberts' effective strength, at the front ten days hence will be, it is estimated, 70,000 men, with the easy possibility of moving eastward, forcing the Boers to evacuate the Biggarsburg range and joining hands with Gen. Buller before continuing the march to Pretoria. Difficulties whatever for the President's statement here and elsewhere, that Germany and the United States, were making efforts in behalf of the restoration of peace in South Africa.

Kroonstad, March 23. Affairs are being put in proper shape and the Free Staters who had to leave are returning in crowds. The commandos are mobilizing in great numbers and the men are more determined than ever.

burned the town of Pomeroy, about eight miles south of Helpmabur and on the road from Ladysmith to the Buffalo, on the advance of an English column, and that they are entrenched on the hills in the locality to the number of 5,000 or more, appears to indicate a flanking movement in this direction by General Buller's force. It is probably his intention to proceed from Ladysmith, cross the Buffalo at Rorke's drift, of ancient memory, enter the Transvaal, march to Vryheid, then to Utrecht and Wakarusa, thus avoiding the Biggarsburg and Telling's Nek and compelling the Boers to fall back in order to save their communications. It is scarcely likely that General Buller could out the enemy from Natal by any other method.

HAD TO BRIBE KRUGER.

A Suit Which will Test Charge of Corruption Against Boer Officials

New York, March 23.—A criminal case which will attract the greatest interest in England and all countries where the struggle between Great Britain and the Boers is exciting attention will be heard on June 11 before the Brussels Tribunal Correctionnel, says a Brussels cable to the Herald. It is a trial which will put to the test the accusation of corruption brought out by the English Government against the Boer officials in general and President Kruger in particular.

The parties concerned are the well-known financiers, the Baron Oppenheim, of the firm of Oppenheim, Freres, Louis and Henry Warant, Belgian barrister; M. Braconier, a wealthy Belgian capitalist of Liege, and another Belgian, M. Terwange, all of whom were associated some years ago as lessees of the Transvaal railway, which was to connect Kermat Fort and Selati.

The Transvaal Government complains that by producing false accounts the company claimed from them an amount of interest largely in excess of the capital subscribed or required. According to information given out by the company's directors, who are being prosecuted on this charge, allege that they were compelled to make the charge higher in order to conceal the bribes which they had to pay to President Kruger and his family and most of the members of the Pretoria Volksraad, including some of the generals now engaged in the war.

ward their neighbors who have "assisted to bring evils upon the land," more severe treatment is evidently desired.

Think Mercy Advisable.

I cannot help thinking that this would be a mistake, because for one surrendering rebel handcuffed and put in jail ten desperate men will resolve to fight to the bitter end with the Boers.

The British should not try for their pound of flesh, but only to bring about speedy permanent peace.

A proclamation tending to encourage desertions from the Republican armies similar to that issued by Lord Roberts might be effective here.

Many Natal Dutch farmers are anxiously watching the treatment those who surrender receive, unmoved alike by loyal passions or impractical sentiment.

The British Government must establish a uniform system of treating unfortunate misguided people, and I plead for a system in which mercy already trends close upon the heels of justice. The British have by no means a monopoly of the right in this quarrel. Their African record does not entitle them to judge harshly, and whatever right and wrong, the only goal should be a happy, contented South Africa.

HOW THE BRITISH CONVOY WAS LOST.

An Eye Witness' Account of the Fight With Free Staters at Waterfall Drift.

London, March 22.—On Feb. 17 it was announced that a convoy consisting of over 200 wagons had fallen into the hands of the Boers. Subsequent messages seemed to indicate that the escort had after all managed to escape capture, having held out until the arrival of reinforcements.

There is, however, no doubt that the Boers succeeded in taking the transport into their possession as the following account of the affair told by one of the scouts who was present in the capacity of conductor will show.

He says: We were enamped and started from Randam for Waterfall Drift about 5 p.m. on February 14 with a transport consisting of 214 wagons, about 6,000 oxen, and a number of mules and donkeys. There were about 100 commandos, 50 men of the Army Service Corps, a detachment of Seaforth Highlanders numbering about 100 and a small number of Kitchener's Horse.

We had reached Waterfall Drift, and the first and second divisions of the transport had formed a laager about 8.30 on the morning of the 15th, when without any warning, a Boer force swooped down, and by an adroit flank movement captured about 700 head of our cattle. The Boers were about 750 strong, with three guns, and we knew nothing of their presence until about

Baden-Powell, After One of Most Memorable Defences of Modern Times, May be on the Eve of Succumbing to Starvation and a Pertinacious Enemy.

London, March 23.—Col. Plumer has apparently retired to Crocodile Pools and Mafeking seems further off than ever from relief. This news was contained in a despatch from Bulawayo dated Monday, March 19, and published in a second edition of the Times. These advices add that the base hospital has been brought back to Gaborone, though the correspondent fully says it is thought the object of the Boers' demonstration of March 12 and March 16 was to recover the removal of the base guns from Mafeking.

RELIEF NOT NEAR.

Only Hope for Baden-Powell Rests with Southern Columns.

London, March 23.—The efforts of the Boers to prevent the relief of Mafeking appear to have met with success. The flank movement of Commandant Snyman, which threatened the communications of Colonel Plumer north of Lobatse, from the left, evidently caused the retreat and persuading command to fall back to Crocodile Pools, considerably north of Lobatse and to remove his base hospital to Gaborone, about a hundred miles north of Mafeking. The fighting from the 12th to the 16th of March, reported yesterday, resulted, as was feared, favorably to the Boers who clearly outnumbered the small Rhodesian force and were able to beat it back. The retirement took place prior to March 19th, or fully four days ago, and what transpired in the meantime cannot be guessed. The fact remains that the relief of Mafeking from the north is not near at hand and that the Boers blockading that place have, by tactics about, been able to drive back the advancing column. The only hope for Baden-Powell now rests in the southern column, which does not seem to be making much progress. So that one must come to the conclusion that Great Britain may be on the eve of seeing Colonel Baden-Powell, after one of the most memorable defenses of modern times, succumb to starvation and a pertinacious enemy.

Meanwhile there is no indication of the next move of Gen. Roberts or of the next standing place of the Boers. The burghers of the Transvaal and the Free State and the respective presidents appear to be at loggerheads. With the practical collapse of the Free Staters the Transvaal Boers are by no means in the confident mood of the days when they talked of driving the roobies into the sea. Unarmed troops can never stand against the Boers who are becoming demoralized and incapable for a time of further effort. Up to the date of Lord Roberts' first victory the Boers had been fighting under conditions exceptionally favorable for their system of warfare. They had occupied positions where they had attacked and always in front. At no action had a flank movement been made except at Mafeking, where Gen. French commanded. The men who can shoot are just as good as the best soldiers in the world, provided the enemy does not manoeuvre against them. But let him do so and the difference between an armed crowd and an army at once becomes evident. An army can retire in good order in its organized units. In the armed crowd each individual seeks to gain his own safety and the result is chaos. From this chaos it is evident that the Boer leaders are now striving to drag their men, with the object of making a fight at some point north of Winburg. Meanwhile the work of pacification is progressing rapidly.

PRESIDENTS AT LOGGERSHEAD.

Kruger Approves the Free State but Says It Mediates Him.

Bloemfontein, March 22.—President Kruger yesterday issued a proclamation advising the Free State, but Mr. Steyn has issued a counter-proclamation declaring the Free State to be intact.

ROUSING BOER SPIRITS.

President Steyn Makes Some Very Extraordinary Statements.

Lorenzo Marques, March 22.—The Boer press claims that the military situation is improving, and that Orange Free State warriors are flocking back to the colors. Evidently the reverse is the case. It is apparent that Leyds is still sending recruits to the Transvaal. The steamer Richelieu brought 100 Germans, Frenchmen and Russians of the military stamp. The arrivals include Mr. Klippa, the Free State mining engineer. Here is an instance of the deliberate efforts being made to deceive and rouse the drooping spirits of the burghers. Speaking at Kroonstad recently Mr. Steyn said they had cause for encouragement in the fact that while other nations attempted to only see, the British consultation, according to the English press, numbered 64,000.

COL. GOUGH'S CASE.

The Colonel Ordered Home by Gedebe for Not Obeying Orders.

Replying in the House of Commons today to a series of questions on the subject of General Lord Methuen and his alleged disagreements with the officers of his column, which have caused considerable comment, the Parliamentary Secretary for the War Office, Mr. George Wyndham, declared no change had been brought against Gen. Methuen by Col. Gough or any other officer. Col. Gough, he added, has been informed that an enquiry would be held into his case. Col. Gough is alleged to have been ordered home by Gen. Methuen after declining to obey a command issued by the latter, and the colonel demanded a trial by court martial.

NO PEACE OVERTURE.

No Overtures Have Been Made or Expected by Britain.

It has been learned that no peace overtures have been made to Lord Salisbury nor are any expected at present by Great Britain. The telegraphic correspondence has been confined to the treatment of prisoners. Lord Salisbury, as already cabled, is holding the Presidents of the South African Republics responsible for the welfare of the British prisoners.

WARREN IS EMBARKING.

His Division Will Sail for East London, Cape Colony.

London, March 23.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Chronicle, telegraphing on Thursday, says that Sir Chas. Warren's division is starting at Durban for East London, Cape Colony.

GATACRE AT SPRINGMOUNT.

He Punishes British Officers who Lost Boer Farms.

London, March 23.—A despatch to the Daily News from Springfontein, dated Wednesday morning, March 21, says: "Gen. Gatacre and his staff are still here. He is most strict regarding the private property of the Boers. Some officers who had looted Boer farms have been tried and severely punished, to the great astonishment and gratification of the Boer residents."

A DUEL NEAR WARRENTON.

British Guns Silence the Fire of the Boer Artillery.

Kimberley, March 22.—There was a smart artillery duel near Warrenton yesterday morning. A battery under Major Blomfield, supported by the Kimberley Light Horse, attacked the Boers, who employed four guns, two of which used cordite, but ineffectively. The British battery replied with effect and silenced the Boer fire. The Boers sent two shells near the railway station, which was not damaged.

SEASTOWN IS OCCUPIED.

Portion of Brabant's Force Seizes Ammunition and Rifles.

Seastown, March 21.—Seastown has been occupied by the Katikarua Rifles, of the Boer force, under Capt. Price. A large amount of ammunition was found and many rifles have been surrendered. The farmers are all desirous of settling down quietly. A person from Wagon reports that Commandant Olivier has retired, with his guns from Jansburg Drift towards Sead River. He is 20 miles off.

REBELLION IS CRUSHED.

Kitchener Meets with No Boer Opposition Around Frimka.

Frimka, March 20.—Gen. Buller and Lord Kitchener have joined forces at Durbanburg, and the rebellion seems to be crushed. A few Boers are reported to be at Konhardt. Neither Lord Kitchener nor Gen. Buller encountered any opposition on route, and found the farms deserted.

MAY TAKE TO GERMAN LAND.

German Colonials Fear that Boers May Turn into Their Territory.

Berlin, March 23.—In German colonial circles, it is feared that after Great Britain annexes the Transvaal and the Boers will turn into German Southwest Africa. Several newspapers have referred to this possibility during the last few days, plainly intimating that the Boers are not wanted, inasmuch as undesirable conditions would arise in time through the inability of Germany to grant them the degree of self-government.

FRENCH AT THARA NCHIL.

British Cavalry Leader Has Opposed Communication with Mafeking.

Bloemfontein, March 22.—Gen. French with a brigade of cavalry and mounted infantry has arrived at Thara Nchil and opened telegraphic communication with Mafeking. He reports all well.

GENERAL FRENCH ACTIVE.

His Activity May be the Prelude to a Move by Roberts.

London, March 23.—Gen. French's activity in the Orange Free State may well be a preliminary to a flank movement by Lord Roberts with the main army.

A despatch from Bloemfontein, dated Thursday, March 23, says President Kruger is reported to have issued a proclamation declaring Great Britain to be in dire straits and that the Boers have occupied London.

Short Story of the Day

A LEAP YEAR PROPOSAL

BY ELEANOR HOLLAND.

"Oh, Peggy, have you heard Captain Neely's offer?" was greeted by a bevy of veranda beauties as Margaret Randall joined them.

"Offer of what?"

"Oh, gracious, girls, tell her!"

"Why, the captain has offered—" began one of the dainties.

"You mistake, my dear young lady," interrupted the captain. "I offer nothing. But I have signified my willingness to consider any or all offers made me. You see, Miss Peggy," said he, turning toward the late arrival, who, although far from being beautiful, ruled them by right of her brightness, her wit and her inexhaustible resources as an entertainer. "I am disgusted with the way you young ladies are neglecting your leap year advantages, and I will wager that not one of you has made an offer of marriage this year. Have you now?"

"Nothing but the awful dread of being refused has deterred us, captain," answered Miss Randall. "Think of our feeling, when, after laying our hearts and fortunes at your feet, you refuse to listen."

"That's just the contingency I have been providing for. The very point we were discussing when you joined us, and I said that to every girl I refused this year I would give a Jersey cow. I've a fine drove of them, you know, and it's no more than right that there should be some little consolation prize offered."

"That's not so bad; but, great heavens, captain," exclaimed one of the younger ones. "Have you the least idea of what you are liable to get into?"

"Oh, I don't think Jim will be out so many cows; because he is sure to snap up the first thing that offers," said the headstrong man among the summer idlers. "You don't expect to have the refusal of all this magnificent assortment, do you?" and his smile magnanimously swept over all the girls collected on the veranda.

"Oh, I don't know," the audacious captain made answer. "I give these young ladies credit for the possession of good judgment, and I fancy there will be a great demand for me. I advise you to come early to avoid the rush, Miss Peggy." And he brought a Turkey red cushion and placed it for her.

"Thank you, Captain Neely, but as I never drink milk you see your consolation prize is no object to me, and you surely cannot expect me to risk a broken heart without some help."

"Oh, Peggy," protested her nearest and dearest friend among the girls. "I think it too bad that you should be left out of the race. Captain Neely, can't you make a pension in her favor?"

The captain demurred. They all would wait, but as Peggy insisted that she would not even consider the cow he finally consented to think the thing over. "Just to please the other girls," he said, for Miss Randall was one of those rare women who are popular with their own sex as well as with the other.

The group on the veranda broke up and Peggy, together with a half dozen of the younger people, went outside to arrange for the theatricals, leaving to the rest the discussion of the eccentric bachelor's latest.

Captain Neely, who was nearly 40 years of age, was anything but a conventional looking man, but no one doubted his ability to keep things alive for a party of summer idlers, and his standing offer, which he announced was good for three hundred and sixty-four days only, created great excitement among the girls.

"Why declared that the captain was either impossible to suit or that he must be suffering from an unrequited affection, or was absolutely heartless because he flatly refused all offers until broken hearts became as common as candidates for legislative honors."

The end of the season came and found him still open to engagements, and he continued to be one of the young ladies' captives. "You accept whatever offers to-night, captain," said one of the idlers. It was the night of the last dance of the season.

Captain Neely, who was not a dancing man, presided at the veranda with a combination of blarney and pink music on his arm and as they joined a group of dancers who had come outside for air, she who had advised him to make up his vacillating mind on this very occasion, demanded to know if he had made that concession in Peggy's favor. The captain replied that with the full consent of those whom he had already refused he had done so and that the concession in this instance was to be a fancy saddle horse.

"Well, Peggy, such a horsewoman as you certainly cannot afford to ignore such a chance. You would better speak now or forever after hold your peace," laughed this irrepressible meddler.

"How can I propose, now?" asked Peggy. "Whoever heard of a ball room proposal where there wasn't a conservatory?"

"Couldn't we unconsciously drift apart from the others?" asked the candidate for matrimonial union.

"That might do," answered Peggy, and she drew the tall captain's arm through her own and together they strolled among the lantern-lit trees and Captain Neely at times seemed to move nearly full of it than any man she had ever known.

It always seemed to her that she never appeared to such poor advantage as when with him, for then all the ability as a conversationalist, with which she was credited, seemed to desert her and she felt that to him she must appear a most uninteresting person.

Now she dared not let him see that she was afraid to go on with the dance, so in the gayest manner she began again just as they came upon a heat among the trees into which the captain, deliberately threw himself, leaving her standing. "My adorable James—don't that way they usually begin?"

"Very good," was the answer, "but I positively refuse to listen to any proposal unless the sailor gets down on her knees."

"You take me, you evidently mean to luxuriate in the situation, but I can't go down on my knees here. I'll wait my dream," Captain Neely gravely spread his pocket handkerchief on the ground in front of him and imperatively motioned her to kneel, and that she did, and in the most approved voice of suppressed emotion began: "My adorable James; while deeply conscious of my great unworthiness—"

"Don't mention it."

The irrepressible meddler looked after them, and thinking that Peggy never appeared lovelier than she did to-night in her pure white gown with field daisies in her hair, she wondered if the captain would remember her joking advice. The lights grew fewer and farther between.

"Well, Peggy, why don't you begin; surely you have heard this thing done times enough to know how?"

She had dropped her arm and the joke as soon as they were out of sight of the group on the veranda, but he insisted on keeping up the conversation as it had started out.

Miss Randall was generally regarded as a young woman without a vulnerable point; strong hearted, in fact, in reality she was a girl of unusually high ideals and probably because she had so much to give she expected much in return. Not perfection but her ideal of manhood was a noble one.

"I must utter the words that have so long troubled upon my lips—I—"

"Well, utter them."

"May I share believe that the feeling I entertain for you is in a measure reciprocated, and that at no distant time I may have the unutterable happiness of calling my own one whose welfare so entirely fills my soul and whose slightest wish will ever be my law?"

"You may," gravely answered the beloved one, and he bent forward to kiss the accepted sailor from her knees.

"Oh, you promised you would refuse," and Peggy looked as though a cold shower bath had suddenly descended upon her.

"Promised? I promised nothing of the kind. I merely said what I would do in case I refused. But, you see, I do not refuse. I accept."

Origin of Diamonds.

The origin of diamonds, which for so long has been a debated question, appears to be explained by a recent discovery near Kimberley.

In both the Indian and the Brazilian diamond fields the gem occurs like a pebble in certain gravelly strata, but has not been traced back to any rock that gives any indication of its genesis. After the discovery of diamonds in the river sand of some South American rivers a peculiar material of a brownish buff color, which turned to a dark bluish tint, was found. It became darker as the miners dug down. The diamonds lay in this material together with several other materials, such as garnets, iron ore, agate, olive, etc. Examination, begun systematically, were eventually carried on on such a large scale that near Kimberley the rock of a depth of more than 1,400 feet. Here the rock is about as hard as ordinary limestone. The blue ground is found only in limited areas. The rocks around are of dark shades, and with hard sandstone, in which sheets or dikes of basalt or some material which was once in a molten condition are occasionally found. The blue ground fills a sort of shell of coarse sand in these other rocks and is itself cut up by similar dikes. The opinions of geologists differ as to whether the gems are produced where they now lie or have been formed of some volcanic explosion. Experts now tend to believe that the blue ground in which diamonds were found is not the true birthplace. The boulders are often watermarked and may have rested for ages in an ancient gravel at the very bottom of secondary reefs of the district. In course of time volcanic explosions shattered the rocky floor in which the diamonds were imbedded, of which the boulders were easily sampled, and dispersed it, together with the overlying materials. It is believed that this is the true explanation of the formation of the diamond bearing blue ground.

Too Drizzling and Cold Feet.

Professor Hutchinson, F.R.S., reports the case of a lady who could not take tea because it made her feet icy cold and wet with perspiration. She thought that the cause was chiefly affected and that the hands were also made cold, but not so markedly as the feet. Mr. Hutchinson had long been familiar with the fact that tea made the feet of some persons cold, but did not know that gold perspiration attended it. He believed the coldness to be caused by contraction of the arteries, inasmuch as the feet shrank. Alcohol had usually an opposite effect.

Applications are now being made by individuals and liquor dealers in stores for licenses which will be granted the 1st of May. It is noteworthy that these licenses should be in the hands of the license authorities by the 1st of May.

GEN. FRENCH FAILS TO HEAD OFF THE RETREAT

Commandant Olivier With a Large Force and 15
Guns Escapes Him.

ROBERTS' ARMY EXPECTED TO ADVANCE HOURLY

A Strong Expedition Has Left Kimberley for Gulgatown and Its Movements Are Likely to Attract Considerable Notice—Nothing from Mafeking.

Barkley West, March 26th.
A commando of 400 Boers has re-occupied Pagnuol, forcing the rebels in the Herbert district to retreat. Extensive looting is reported in that direction.

London, March 27.
The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Mail, telegraphing Monday, March 26, says: "A strong expedition will leave Kimberley to-day, primarily for Gulgattown. Its movements are likely to attract considerable notice."

Bloemfontein, March 26.
General French has returned from Thab-Neha, having failed to engage the Boers, who are travelling northward.

London, March 27 4.15 a.m.
Military observers here, and even those in close affiliation with the War Office, are considerably confused as to what is being done for the succor of Mafeking.
Some 2,000 or 3,000 men are engaged with Lord Methuen at Warrenton and Mouton's Brigade, and now another column is about leaving Kimberley, it has not already started for Gulgattown, a hundred and six miles west.
It is evidently their intention to drive out the Boers.

The force is described as a strong one and the expedition is likely to attract much attention. Gen. French is reported from Bloemfontein Sunday as retreating from Thab Nohu, without apparently heading off Commandant Olivier with his fifteen guns and miles of baggage.

Boer horsemen are in contact with the British outposts from Biggarsburg to Warrenton.
General Buller's patrols had a sharp skirmish Sunday at Wash Bank.
Lord Roberts' infantry has now been equipped for fourteen days and news of advance is hourly expected at the War Office.

Messrs. Weyerhaeuser, Fischer and Wessels the peace envoys from the Federal forces are due at Napier in a few days. After visiting two or three Transvaal capitals they will go to Antwerp. It is understood at the Hague that they are invested with large powers and are prepared to agree to anything looking to intervention.

WHY ROBERTS HALTS.

He Must Leave a Secure Line of Communication Behind.

London, March 26.—The continued lack of aggressive movement on the part of the British has been explained in a despatch from Bloemfontein, dated Sunday, March 26, and published in the second edition of the Times to-day. It says:

"The conditions existing in the occupied territory imperatively demand a somewhat prolonged halt at Bloemfontein. It is necessary that the effect of the proclamation should have time to make itself felt. It is declared that danger of annoyance to the line of communication may be apprehended unless the territory behind the advancing forces is rendered absolutely secure. The accuracy of these views is proved by the fact of the enemy's breaking up into isolated groups, such as that which attacked the Guards officers Friday. The adjustment of financial and municipal matters in the Free State is now chiefly occupying the attention of the Governor and his legal and financial advisers. The military regime is being conducted with great smoothness, but recent investigations show that caution must be exercised in dealing with persons apparently loyal."

This summary from headquarters is probably an accurate explanation of the frequent appearance and disappearance of Boers and insurgents upon which the reports are so conflicting, and which so puzzle the British military critics.

OLIVIER STILL RETREATING.

Boer Commander with 15 Guns Moves Toward Ladybrand.

Houville, March 24.—Several influential burghers of Wepster, are anxious for British occupation, as commanding is still proceeding. Commandant Olivier, with a strong force and fifteen guns are moving northward towards Ladybrand. A private of Mimington's Scouts, while distributing proclamations, was captured and sent to Wepster. A large Boer commando was seen from Houtland preceding toward Clocolani. It may probably be intercepted by General French. The conciliatory attitude of Major Cuninghame and Captain Price at Senekon in pacifying the district rapidly. About 900 rifles and a great quantity of ammunition have been surrendered.

Scouts from Springfontein located on Wednesday a commando of 500 mounted men under Commandant Van der Post, entrenched near Fauremuth. In answer to a demand for surrender, Van der Post declared he would fight to the bitter end.

DEFENCE OF PRETORIA.

Boers are Preparing to Defend their Capital Fearfully.

Bloemfontein, March 26.—The Boer plans include a stand at Kromaat, the Vaal River, and other points, culminating at the defence of Pretoria, which has been preparing for a siege.
The ranges of the guns have been tested, mines have been laid and the forces in the field have not allowed themselves to be cut off with their heavy guns, which are needed in the city at Pretoria.

The Free Staters continue to enter out lines, surrendering under the proclamation of Lord Roberts. They declare that the Transvaal is determined to fight to the bitter end.
The majority of those who have hitherto taken part in the fighting have been Free Staters. The Trans-vaalers have been held in reserve.
The Boers are preparing for another campaign and will occupy another strongly fortified position in the Transvaal, necessitating heavy fighting before they can be driven out.

POLICY OF BRITAIN.

Roberts' Proclamation Does Not Apply to the Cape Rebels.

London, March 26.—The Times says:
The political situation in the Free State is attracting about as much attention as the military situation.
There is much anxiety amongst loyal conservatives both in Cape Colony and Natal, as to the future treatment of the rebels, at whose hands they have suffered so severely. At Ladysmith and perhaps elsewhere, the feeling has caused many people to misunderstand the judicious proclamation issued by the Commander-in-Chief. They regard it as addressed to rebels, and contend that the rebels do not deserve the treatment promised. The document, however, does not apply to the rebels, but to burghers of the Free State, who were misled by their Government into wanting and unjustifiable invasion of British territory. The colonists themselves will feel it right to give these men an opportunity of reconsidering the position to which the criminal follow of their ruler has reduced them.

The offer is being accepted with effects. Not only do we hear of whole surrenders on the part of the rebels, but it is reported that men like Mr. Fraser and Mr. Brand are acting in official capacities under the new administration. The broad principles on which rebels ought to be treated are clear. There should be no vindictive punishment for their offences, but they should be taught, that they are now to be treated as the subjects of the Queen in a serious crime.

BOERS WILL NEVER SURRENDER.

Relative of Kruger Says They Will Resist in Desert Fastnesses.

New York, March 26.—A relative of President Kruger, a Boer now in London, whose name is not mentioned, has given an interview to the Herald correspondent, in which he says that despite the fact that President Kruger are now retreating to Berlin and Brussels, and from there will come to the United States. They will bring to this country a proposition from President Kruger to President McKinley.

The London Boer said there was not the least danger of the countrymen destroying the mines. Referring to Mr.
Mouton's White's statements on this subject in Washington, he said: "They were totally unauthorised. He had absolutely no right to say anything of the kind, and what he has said has given a false impression."

The Boer was asked as to the present status of the war, and replied: "We regard now that British forces have come in such overwhelming numbers that the war for us has reached a very critical period. That is why we have hurried our delegates over here."

Asked as to what President Kruger meant by his famous remark concerning "the bow that would stagger humanity," he answered:
"The President meant that the loss of life would be stupendous. Pretoria has strong fortifications, built on the most modern principles. To take these forts will be well nigh impossible."

"Do you regard the prospects of a long siege of Johannesburg and Pretoria as likely?"
"Johannesburg," he replied, "is from a military point of view, untenable. We would not think it advisable to sustain as long a siege of Pretoria as has been suggested in the papers here, yet, let me tell you, as dear as it will be in mind, the Boers will never give up. They will, when pressed, go north into their own country, a sort of desert which is full of brushwood, which furnishes endless shelter. We know that intricate country well. We have been in the habit of going there every year for sporting purposes.
In the meantime we have made all arrangements to blow up every bridge along the railroad."

MAT VISIT CANADA.

His Appearance will Make a Tour to Cris-talline Settlement.

New York, March 26.—The Prince of Wales, it is said, may make a tour of the British colonies when the war is over for the purpose of crystallising sentiment in favor of Imperial Federation.
He will probably include the United States when he visits Canada. It is finally decided to make this trip. He looks with approval on the idea of an Anglo-American entente and wishes to do as much as his dignity will permit to promote it.
It is thought that just one thing may be looked on as likely to deter him from undertaking the journey, namely, the condition of his aged mother. This war has been a tremendous strain on the Queen.

KITCHENER STILL ACTIVE.

Having Despatched a Force to Kimberley.
He is Returning to De Aar.

London, March 26.—The Times has the following special to-day:
Bristol, March 26.—Lord Kitchener,
having despatched a force to Kimberley,
is returning to De Aar.

TO LEAVE FOR HALIFAX.

Battalion will Leave Ottawa Ten Tomorrow.

Ottawa, March 26.—A military order is issued this morning announcing that Lieut.
C. W. McLean, of the 1st Canadian Battalion, has been granted a commission in the royal artillery.
The provisional battalion for Halifax garrison are under orders to leave Ottawa for Halifax at 10 a.m. to-morrow.
At Montreal Mr. Campbell will join the battalion and proceed by the same train.

THE GREAT GALLANTRY OF CANADA'S SONS!

Charge at Paardeberg Ordered Through Brigade Officer's Blunder, But Was Highly Praised.

A LONG AND ARDUOUS MARCH TO THE FRONT.

The Young Canadians Won Much Admiration by Their Enthusiasm in Hauling Guns Up a Bank, as Well as by their Battlefield Bravery.

Montreal, March 26.—The Herald's local correspondent with the first concise and accurate account of the battle of Paardeberg, in which the Canadians were so gallantly engaged.
Sunday, Feb. 11.—The death of Orange River hospital on Feb. 11, of Pte. Purcell, of B Co., was greatly regretted. Like others, he was the victim of enteric fever.
The two companies of the 1st Canadian Battalion, which were on duty at Litchford, and rejoined the battalion, which was now once more complete.

It is generally understood that our brigade, the 11th, is to take the field at once, and that active operations are under way, and there is a general feeling of thankfulness that we are leaving Belmont at last.

Sleeping in Open Air.
Monday, Feb. 12.—We left Belmont today at 7.30 a.m. by the Orange River train. We arrived at 1.30 p.m., and immediately detached and marched to the ground allotted to us, where we bivouacked for the night. All our camp equipment was left in store at Belmont, so that for some months all ranks will be sleeping in the open air.

Battalion's Strength Reduced.

The strength of the battalion has been much reduced by sickness, and being over 100 patients in the hospital at Orange River.

Some 200 men radically unfit and entirely unable to do any work, were employed at Belmont and Cape Town, reducing the effective strength of the battalion to only some 800.

Start for the Front.

Tuesday, Feb. 13.—The battalion left Orange with its brigade, the Nineteenth, for the Orange Free State, where it is to meet the Highland Brigade and form the Ninth Division, under General Colville.
The day was intensely hot and over 10 of our men fell out by the roadside. The distance covered, to Nam Dam, fifteen miles, was not covered until one o'clock, as there were delays of several hours on route.
Some six were left in the hospital here.

March Through Jacobdell.

Wednesday, Feb. 14 to Sunday, 18th.—
These days were spent in marching at the rate of twelve to twenty miles per day.
We passed Jacobdell, a good-sized village, which was captured from the Boers the day previous and where Lord Roberts was found quartered. We but rested at Jacobdell and the same day pushed on to Klip Drift, where we bivouacked.
At one place the Canadian Regiment surprised the Boers by the quick way they dragged the heavy naval guns across the river. The Boers were taken by surprise.
Sunday, Feb. 19.—The battalion, after marching all night, arrived at Paardeberg at 6 o'clock in the morning. The distance covered from Orange to this station was about 70 miles in five days.
Part of this was done on intensely hot days and other parts at night, but, taken on the whole, it is considered good marching.

This morning the companies at Ottawa were inspected at the Exhibition grounds by the Director-General of Medical Service.

BOERS EXPECT INTERVENTION.

They Think They Can Hold Out Another
Six Months.

Durban, March 26.—It is learned from an authentic source that the Boer leaders are aware that they are beaten, but think they can hold out for four or six months, within which time they firmly believe foreign intervention will force Great Britain to grant favorable terms including independence.

They expect Germany or the United States to interfere.

The situation of Mafeking, Wepster, Pretoria and Bloemfontein is considered so far as Germany is concerned.

DEAD CATS FOR PRO-BOERS.

Their Meeting was Turned Into a Patriotic Demonstration.

London, March 26.—An open air meeting convened at Bradford by Boer sym-pathisers proved an utter fiasco from the start. The meeting was turned into a patriotic demonstration.

The pro-Boer speakers were unable to obtain a hearing. Dead cats and other unpleasant missiles were thrown at them and they were violently hustled on quitting the platform. Despite the presence of 150 policemen there was much disorder.
The total British losses, exclusive of the invalids sent home, are 14,418 in killed, wounded and missing.

LATEST FROM MAFKING.

Native Die Because They Will Not Eat
Horseflesh.

London, March 26.—The Daily Mail publishes the following from Mafeking, dated Wednesday, March 24.—We are still being heavily shelled. There have been several casualties, including a British soldier in the trenches. The native force is becoming difficult. The Boers have broken the arrangement to respect the Sabbath by not firing, and have seized the opportunity to extend their trenches.

Lady Sarah Wilson, in a despatch from Mafeking, dated Wednesday, March 24th, says: "We have received news of the refugee of Ladysmith, but it serves to increase our disappointment, as there is no prospect of our relief. The town remains isolated. The Boers are reported to be very numerous and strongly entrenched between us and Colonel Plumer's force.
Some of the natives are dying of starvation, owing to their prejudice against horseflesh."

THE SKULL FRACTURED BY A BLOW OR A FALL.

The Suspicious Death of Mr. W. R. Chambers
Is Being Investigated.

DID THE DECEASED MEET WITH FOUL PLAY?

Inquest in Montreal Revealed Facts Which Have Caused a Postponment of Enquiry in Order to Throw Still More Light on the Question.

Montreal Star says.—The coroner's inquest on the body of W. R. Chambers, who died on Thursday, revealed some curiously new facts which have caused a postponement of the trial for a week in order to throw still more light on the question.

Dr. Wyatt Johnston was the first witness heard at the inquest yesterday afternoon. He testified that he had made a post-mortem examination and found a fracture of the skull in its thinnest part near the right temple.
The fracture would need only a slight blow at such a point. There was nothing on the outside to indicate that a blow had been struck, or even that the deceased had fallen. The fracture could have been caused by either a blow or a fall, but had there been a blow there would have been something, though not necessarily, exterior marks. Chambers, when brought to the hospital was unconscious, and died about ten o'clock on the same morning without recovering consciousness. It had been reported from the hotel that he had $40 or thereabouts in his pockets the night before, but when brought to the hospital there was nothing in his pockets. The hospital authorities had been told that the man had been drinking heavily, and as there was nothing to indicate a greater, they were under the impression that he was suffering from alcoholic poisoning.

Mr. John J. O'Neill, clerk at the Balmor Hotel, knew the deceased well.
He had seen Chambers on Monday night, and again about two o'clock in the morning that he was brought to the hospital. Increased always had money on him, sometimes as much as $200 and generally about $10. Witness had no knowledge of the amount which deceased had on the night in question.

Witness was told by several that Chambers had come forty dollars. A Brown, who was a guest at the hotel, and the bar-tender, had seen some money in the hands of deceased.
Witness came in about two o'clock on Thursday morning, the night clerk had handed him sixty-eight cents telling him that was all that he had found in Chambers' pockets. Deceased was then lying on the bed unconscious, his eyes were glazed, and he was frothing at the mouth. His breath was labored. They had sent for the ambulance on the advice of Dr. Johnston, and sent the unconscious man to the hospital.

Mr. W. F. McCay, the night clerk of the Balmoral was the next witness. On Thursday night, between half past ten and eleven, deceased came to the hotel. He was then very drunk, but could walk and was trying to pick a quarrel with those about the place.
Nobody took him seriously as they knew him to be a very fine young man when sober. He went from the hotel about eleven o'clock, and the witness had been told by the bar-keeper that deceased had three or four ten dollar bills. Finally, a carter came along with Chambers' coat. Witness did not know whether deceased had driven to the hotel with this carter or had sent for him. If he had sent for him witness would most likely have known of it, so that it is more probable that deceased came to the hotel with the carter. About eleven the carter got Chambers away. At about half-past one another carter drove up, came in and asked whether this man

OPINION IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Imperial Unity and Amalgamation of the Republics Advocated.

Cape Town, March 26.—A largely attended meeting of women was held here, the object being the maintenance of British supremacy in South Africa and the fostering of Imperial unity.
The speakers emphasized the need of women's work in upholding loyalty to the flag and smoothing over differences after the war. The hope was expressed that the ultimate, by joining with the Canadian Daughters of the Empire, and similar leagues in Great Britain, and the colonies, all women in the empire would be united in promoting the common feeling of kinship and patriotism.

At a large public meeting held at Kimberley the following resolution was passed: "This meeting entirely approves the reply of Lord Salisbury to the untruthful statements of the two Presidents and declares its honest opinion that it is imperative that the republican scheme should be abandoned and the territories be annexed to the British Empire." This resolution is merely a single example of the universal feeling among the English throughout South Africa.

METHUEN AWAITS TRANSPORT.

Little Prospect of an Early Relief of Mafeking.

London, March 26.—General Methuen appears to be waiting transport and with Col. Plumer's forces on rail rations there now seems little likelihood of the immediate relief of Mafeking.
Though either from this quarter or from Lord Roberts or General Buller boarded at the hotel. Witness recognized Chambers and told the carter that the deceased boarded at 12 Balmor street.

Was Lying in the Snow.

The carter told him that while driving along Belmont street he had noticed a man lying in the snow, and when the carter went to him the pretense man murmured "12 Belmont."
The carter had rung the bell at 12
Belmont, and a man came to the door and said they would not take the man into the house in that state, that he generally stayed at the Balmoral Hotel, and advised the carter to drive him there. He had therefore driven him to the hotel. Witness went on to say that he had caused the man to be carried to the elevator and brought upstairs to a room. Both deceased's coats were open, but there were no marks of violence about him. The possibility of his pants were all right, but after he had got deceased to bed, witness looked through his pockets and found only about twenty cents. Witness tried to revive Chambers, but as he did not succeed very well sent for a doctor who advised removing the man to the hospital. They were all under the impression that deceased was very drunk or had been drugged. Witness did not know either of the carter, but would know them if he saw them again. He was told by the description of the carter who left Chambers at 12 Belmont street on the snow bank was the same who had left the Balmoral
Hotel about 11 o'clock with deceased.

Mr. J. A. Maroon, lived at 12 Balmor street with his father. Shortly after 1 o'clock Thursday morning the bell rang at their residence, and on going to the door he found a carter, who said: "I have got a man who says here." Witness looked out and saw a man crouching against the snow bank. He told the carter to take the man back where he brought him from.
Witness did not know it was Chambers at the time. When witness went back to his room he looked out and saw that the carter had driven away, and left the helpless man lying on the snow bank. Witness put on some clothes to go out, as just as he was starting downstairs, he heard another ring at the door bell, and going down, found another carter, who said: "This man says he boards here." Witness then looked into the man's pockets and found Chambers' commercial ticket, with the name on it. He had seen deceased only once or twice at his home.

Chambers appeared so helpless that Witness supposed that it was impossible to carry him up two flights of stairs to his room, and advised the carter to drive to the Balmor al, as they had an elevator and could take him upstairs more easily. The carter then drove away, and witness knew no more of the affair until he heard of Chambers' death.

The jury did not consider that they had sufficient information to form a proper judgment. Coroner McMahon occurred in this opinion an opinion of the case until Friday, the 30th inst.
In the meantime the police will endeavor to find the two carters who drove Chambers to the night of his death.
It is quite possible that so violent was done, but that the fracture was caused by a blow on the head given by the side of the sleigh in the present state of the streets.

There are direct news to-day.

The Government buildings at Cape Town narrowly escaped destruction by fire last night. The State papers, after being much damaged were removed.

A Lorenzo Marques special says the Transvaal authorities are evidently recruiting actively, as large numbers of French, Hollanders, and Belgians volunteers are constantly passing through that place to join the Boer forces.

COMMISSIONERS FOR CANADA.

Twenty-Two of Them will be Given by the War Office.

OTTAWA, March 26.—A cable received at the Militia Department from the Imperial authorities states that 22 commissioners will be given to Canadians in the Imperial army. It is understood that it will go to graduating the Military College, Kingston, and the balance to officers of the Canadian militia.

TERMS OF SETTLEMENT.

The Two Republics will be Given a Constitution Like Canada.

London, March 26.—It is understood that the British Cabinet has already arrived at an agreement regarding the future of the Boers. The settlement will provide for a Governor-General of the whole of South Africa on Canadian lines, with a House of Commons sitting at Cape Town and Legislative Assemblies in the various provinces, including the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. After a period of political probation, politicians expect that the new Viceroy will be Lord Hemy, a peer of ability and administrative experience, with about the entire adventure of having Deuts blood in his veins and of speaking the Dutch language.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

A Slight Accident on the G.T.R.

On account of one of the freight cars of the Union Station and Toronto-Breaking down at Union Station yesterday morning and blocking the main line, the regular mail train, from Toronto, was over four hours late. The regular No. 21 from Port Hope was also delayed at Scottville on its way west.

Apprentices Wanted.

The Times requires a smart boy for slight work to set headings and run messages. Must be good at spelling. A fine chance for smart lad. Apply at Times Building in daytime, or to Mr. F. Thomas at night.

Mark Brea. Last Night.

Mark Brea appeared again last night at the opera house, to a fair audience. The company are particularly good this season, and those who see them once are sure to go again.

The Central Ontario Power Co.

Mr. F. A. Hall, of Perth, Vice-President of the Central Ontario Power Company is in town on business in connection with the Company's scheme of the transmission of electric power from Barkeigh Falls to Peterborough and Lindsay. Mr. Culverwell, the managing director told the Times yesterday, that operations would shortly begin. In the meantime the Company are negotiating for the street railway, which they hope to complete and have in operation at an early date.

A Coming Event.

Mr. C. J. Rodgers with characteristic enterprise, has negotiated successfully for the appearance in Peterborough of two of Canada's greatest artists, Mr. J. D. A. Tripp, the piano virtuoso, and Miss Mary Jardine-Thompson, soprano. These two artists will appear here in a recital about the 27th of April, and Mr. Rodgers' intention to make this recital the greatest musical event of the season. Seats will be sold by subscription only, and only a limited number of seats will be available. Applications for seats may be made by mail or in person to Mr. Rodgers, and an early application is desirable. Prices will be 75 and 50 cents.

The Caterpillar Pest.

The question of successfully combating the pest caterpillar pest is at present being considered, not only by fruit growers, but by the farming community in general. Last season the great shortage of white honey was due to the destroying of the bloom on the basswood tree, and the effect of the caterpillars' ravages in the maple groves is viewed with considerable apprehension by sugar makers. In conversation with some parties it was learned that the make of maple sugar this season would be limited, as some groves have been virtually ruined.

THE LATE DR. KING.

Dr. Richard King is dead. The end, which was unexpected by the family, came at 5.30 yesterday morning, and the heroic struggle for life against odds, that to his physicians, his friends and to the sick man himself, appeared to be overwhelming, terminated in death. On Monday Dr. King appeared brighter, and hope began to take the place of despondency in the breasts of those around him. Even the doctor himself, for the first time in days, spoke of his improved condition, and remarked that he would soon be able to get down stairs and do the office work. Alas, the change was not permanent. He took a turn for the worse during the night, and although everything that love and medical skill could do, was done, he gradually sank until the spark of life went out.

The death of Dr. King is unexpressed, and presents one of the saddest spectacles the human mind is called upon to contemplate. A strong man, in the prime of a useful life, with a future of even increased usefulness before him, has been stricken with death with comparatively short warning. His splendid constitution, and all the skill of the best physicians were powerless to check the hand of death. The blow is a terrible one, and the grief and sorrow felt throughout the town and country is everywhere apparent. The citizens regard his death as a personal bereavement. His wife and family have the deepest sympathy of all in their great and irreparable loss.

Late last fall, the Doctor, feeling poorly, went to Clifton Springs, in the vain hope that the treatment there would do him good, but such was not the case. He returned home after two or three weeks' stay, and gradually became weaker until he was finally forced to lay down.

Dr. King was a son of the late John King, L.L.D., and was born in the County of Longford, Ireland, in 1843, and was therefore, 57 years of age. He received the groundwork of his education from his father, subsequently entering McGill University, Montreal, at which place he commenced his medical course in 1863, graduating in 1867. At once commencing the practice in Baillieboro, he met with more than usual success; but in 1879, deciding to remove to a larger place, he chose Peterborough as a permanent location, where he soon built up a lucrative and successful practice. In 1878, the Doctor married Miss Morris, of Delaware, Ont., (a suburb of London) whose father had been for many years chief surgeon of the City Hospital, of Dublin, Ireland. The deceased was never known to refuse a sick call, no matter how poor the patient, and had gained the esteem, and we might say affection, of hundreds of people. He was an untiring worker, repeatedly taking special courses at some of the great medical colleges and hospitals in the United States. There were few physicians who were as well up in their work as Dr. King.

Dr. King, while a student, was one of nine young men who together spent their college vacation studying under the late Dr. Barnham. These young men were:—Dr. Boucher, Dr. Buller, the noted oculist, Montreal; Dr. Ford, Norwood; Dr. George Barnham, Dr. Coslett, Dr. Clouston, son of Mr. W. Clouston, Dr. Benson, Winnipeg, and Dr. Macdonald.

The bereaved leaves a widow and four children, the latter being Dr. D. C. King; who has just given up a lucrative practice in Michigan to come home and help his father, Lionel, who is completing his last year in medicine at Trinity University, Toronto; and Harry and Geraldine, both of whom are living at home.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon at 3.30 p.m.

West Peterborough Liberals.

The Conservative paper here, in referring to the meeting of the Liberals held on Monday night, says that Mr. Richard Hall will have the refusal of the nomination as candidate for the House of Commons at the elections which are soon to take place. It also says that the Times already told its readers—that the other possible candidates are Mr. J. B. McWilliams and Mr. J. H. McEllan, and also mentions Mr. George H. Elliott's name in this connection. Naturally it tries to belittle all of them, but makes a special stab at Mr. McEllan. This would indicate that that gentleman is to be feared, from a Tory standpoint. Our own opinion is that our contemporary is simply whistling to keep its courage up.

DEATH OF DR. MORRIS.

Father of Mrs. Dr. King Passes Away Suddenly Yesterday.

The sad intelligence was received yesterday afternoon that Dr. Wm. Morris, father of Mrs. Dr. King, had died during the morning at his home in Caro, Michigan. Mrs. King's sister, at whose house her father made his home, came down on a flying visit to see the doctor, intending to stay a week, but is forced to leave the doubly bereaved home of her sister this morning, on account of the death of her father. The late Dr. Morris was well known in Peterborough, having been here frequently visiting his daughter, and attending Dr. King's patients while the latter was away taking special medical courses. He was a graduate of Dublin University, and was for many years chief surgeon of the Dublin City Hospital.

He leaves three sons and three daughters—Dr. Wm. Morris, and Dr. Richard Morris, both of Michigan; and Mr. Harvey Morris, of Morrisburg, Ont., and Mrs. Dr. King, Mrs. Ladd and Mrs. Quinn. The interment will take place on Friday, at 11 a.m. the same hour as that of his son-in-law, Dr. King, here. Mrs. King has the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community in her double bereavement.

Memorial's Patrioticism.

A very successful concert was held in the Foresters' Hall, Zion, on Monday evening last, as a decided success. Mr. Josiah Smithson ably filled the position of chairman. The chief feature of the evening was a patriotic address by Rev. Mr. Symonds. Mrs. N. Swan played a couple of selections on the mandolin and also gave violin solos very nicely. Major Miller contributed a couple of military recitations in stirring style and some very acceptable vocal numbers were rendered by a Keene quartette composed of Misses Boyce and Hope and Messrs. Crinkbank and McCamus.

Dead in Ottawa.

Mr. John D. McMillan, formerly head master of the Separate schools here, died in Ottawa on Monday last. Mr. McMillan was a son of the late Mr. Hugh McMillan, of Smith. His death was quite sudden as he was in his usual health last week. Mr. McMillan was unmarried. His mother still survives and he has quite a large circle of relatives living in Smith township. The remains will be interred in Peterborough.

17 Years' Experience.

"When Postum Cereal Office first came out, I was glad to begin the use of it and stop coffee, but I had long been convinced that my sick headaches (from which I had suffered for 17 years) were caused more or less by coffee drinking. The headaches vanished like magic after the use of Postum began, and I can truthfully say that the first box of Postum Cereal Office did me more good than the use of coffee. For as we use any stimulant, but please do not use any more in public." Mrs. J. H. Morrow, Ind. Name can be furnished by Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

Feet on Newspaper.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Those who attended the George street Methodist Church on Sunday evening last, must have been well pleased with the pungent remarks of the preacher. Mr. Sherry is always interesting and eloquent, but on this occasion I think he exceeded himself. What struck me most forcibly was his reference to the press. He said that the party papers were to be relied on. "O for a paper," he said, "that would speak the truth."

Now, Mr. Editor, I am not a newspaper man, but it appears to me the above remarks in reference to the party press note the nail squarely on the head. But how about such papers as your excellent journal? Do they not, as a rule, speak the truth? Not beneath under the party lash, are they not free to say what they like?

I am both of think that all are black. I hope, nevertheless, that Mr. Sherry's strong censure of the press will not go entirely unheeded.

By inserting the above in your widely read newspaper, you will oblige

A CONSTANT READER.

Ans.—We thank our correspondent for his high opinion of The Times, which, we trust, is not altogether unwarranted. Newspapers are usually run as commercial enterprises. A journalist that would speak the "truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," would not be long in business, and its editor would probably be in jail. The whole fabric of civilization is so permeated with dishonesty, especially in the matter of politics, which is riddled with corruption, that not only the press but the pulpit has a duty to perform which will require heroic treatment. To the pulpit is given the work of looking after the moral end of the business, and just how well (?) this is being done is seen in almost every church. When ministers are afraid to speak the "truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth," it is hardly to be wondered at that newspapers are lacking in their efforts to exterminate evil-doing.—Ed. Times.

Majuba Hill.

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—Kindly give me the particulars of Majuba Hill fight, and oblige,

A READER.

Ans.—The battle of Majuba Hill was fought on February 27, 1881, between the Boers of the Transvaal and the British. The war then going on was fought by the Transvaal to regain its independence, it having been annexed by the British in 1877. On the night of Feb. 26 the British, under Sir George Buller, Governor of Natal, occupied Majuba Hill, a mountain on the border between Natal and the Free State. This mountain commanded the Boers' position. Early on Feb. 27 the Boers made a feint attack, under cover of which the columns of Boers reached the top of the hill almost unopposed. The British were outflanked and defeated with a loss of 85 killed—Sir George Buller among them—and 187 wounded and 60 prisoners. One account says that the British set no trophies, and were attacked while asleep.

An Irish Pope.

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—Please inform me if there ever was an Irish Pope, and if so, when?

J. H. R.

Ans.—There never was one. The only Pope who came from the British Islands was Nicholas Breakspear, who as Adrian IV was Pope from 1154 to September, 1159. He was an Englishman.

LADY NORA'S FLAG.

British Emblem of Bloemfontein Made by Gen. Roberts' Wife.

The British flag which now floats over the Orange Free State presidency at Bloemfontein was made by Lady Nora Roberts, the wife of General Lord Roberts. On his departure from England for the scene of the war Gen. Roberts took with him, as one of his most important pieces of luggage, this flag, attached by the hands of his wife. Lady Roberts had counted on the certainty of good news being made of this symbol of British power, and she is not disappointed. Her only son lost his life on December 5, near Colenso, and lies buried in a hero's grave in that city. He was the heir to the lordship of Kandahar, which must now pass to one not in the direct Roberts line. The general's wife has left for her consolation her two daughters, the Honorable Alice Mary and Honorable Ada Edwina Roberts. Lady Roberts is the daughter of the late Capt. Cole for me.

Encampment Meeting.

Hilwaite Encampment, No. 64, met this evening, and to the members attending it is promised that the most interesting meeting held since the Encampment was instituted will be on this occasion. Several candidates will present themselves for membership, business of importance will be discussed, and the membership report as an outcome of the meeting that business will boom as it never boomed before.

To Both Advice.

BOERS AT WARRENTON OPENED FIRE ON BRITISH

A Hall of Bullets Poured into the Village, But Notwithstanding the Large Expenditure of Big Gun and Rifle Ammunition
Only One Briton Was Hurt.

Brussels, March 28.—A private despatch has been received from Pretoria which says that President Kruger will now take chief command of the Transvaal forces.

London, March 28.—The Earl of Seaborn, Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, who was the principal guest this evening at the annual dinner of the Comparative League said that as a result of the war, the first principle was that the Boer republics should not be independent and that loyalty should not suffer more than disloyalty. In this discourse he contended there should be no idea of vengeance or any sentiments. Indeed the rebellious districts would be treated in a fashion that would command the support and sympathy of a majority of the Queen's subjects.

London, March 28.—The Pretoria correspondence of the Daily Mail telegraphing yesterday says: "General Joubert died of Peritonitis. The funeral will take place to-morrow (Thursday). The Government is pleading with the widow to allow a temporary interment there with a state funeral. Joubert always expressed a desire to be buried in a mausoleum on his farm. His successor in the chief command will probably be Louis Botha, now commanding in Natal."

London, March 28, 4 a.m.—General French who has arrived at Bloemfontein, from Thaba Nchu, says that Commandant Olivier has 6,000 men and is north of Ladybrand. Immense amount of stores have now been accumulated at Bloemfontein, and Lord Roberts' infantry is seemingly about to move. An impression which can be traced to the War Office, is abroad that the advance will begin next Monday.

Boer observation parties are hovering near Bloemfontein, but Lord Roberts has one hundred and thirty miles to cover before reaching the great position which the Boers are preparing at Kromstad.

Moving ten miles a day is probably the best he can do with field transport. Therefore he can hardly engage the Boers in force for two weeks. The reconstruction of the railway behind him may even delay an invasion of the Transvaal until May. Meanwhile all the important towns in the Free State with in Lord Roberts' reach are being garrisoned. Thaba Nchu, Philippolis, Ficksburg and Jagersfontein are thus held. Mr. Alfred Miller is touring in the disturbed newly-acquired territory investigating conditions and arranging the administration. He is understood to be getting materials for a report to Mr. Chamberlain concerning a plan of civil government.

London, March 28.—An Odean despatch to the Standard says: "There can no longer be any doubt as to the object of the warlike preparations now being completed in South Africa. Nearly 250,000 troops have already been mobilized for active service. The Black Sea squadron with transports, is held in instant readiness. The tension in the relations between St. Petersburg and the Sublime Porte becomes every day more acute. The position is looked upon with the gravest apprehension. If the Ottoman Government, supported by Germany, should prove stubbornly intractable with regard to Russia's concessionary demands in Asia Minor, serious complications must inevitably ensue. The Russian garrisons in this Caucasus and along the Armenian frontier have been increased four-fold and equipped for active service."

London, March 28.—Mr. Spencer Wilkinson, reviewing the military situation in the Morning Post, says: "The Boers seem to be taking advantage of the pause in the British advance to re-distribute their forces and to prepare for a new campaign. Boer and other reports speak of a concentration at Kromstad or some point on the line north of Bloemfontein. Trains are taking troops from Pretoria southward. The arrival of Gen. Gatacre's troops, to be followed in a few days by those of General Clements, will give Lord Roberts another strong division. It may be noticed that during March 28,000 fresh troops have landed at the Cape."

London, March 28, 5.15 a.m.—Lord Roberts has sent 14,000 troops to Glen, ten miles north of Bloemfontein, on the railway. This is a preliminary to the general advance.

Warrenton, March 28.—The Boers opened fire with artillery and rifles on the British camp to-day. The first shell burst while the British were of breakfast. A hail of bullets poured into the village. Many cattle were killed. An hotel that is used as a hospital and over which the red cross flag was flying, was fired upon. The attacking Boer force was large, but notwithstanding the enemy's heavy expenditure of big gun and rifle ammunition, only one Briton was wounded.

TWO LEFT OUT OF SIXTEEN.

But the Surviving Devonshires Continued to Hold Boers at Bay.

Cape Town, March 28.—Sir George White was accorded an immense reception here yesterday. Replying to an address, he paid a tribute to the late General Sir William Penn Symonds, who he said, first taught the Boers that the British soldiers could drive them from their strongest positions. He will sail for England to-day.

General White also related several instances of courage of British troops during the Ladysmith siege. He said: "During the attack on Caesar's Camp a remote corner was held by sixteen Mamelukes, who fought from three in the morning until dusk, when the Devonshires reinforced them. Fourteen lay dead, but the two survivors, one of whom was wounded, still held the position."

The same day, a sergeant with one of the guns had a leg and one arm shot off. He fell across the trail of the gun, and said 'Roll me out of the way and go on working the gun.'

Southampton, March 27.—Arrangements are being made to receive Gen. White, who will sail from Cape Town to-morrow. He has cabled an expression of his willingness to accept an address.

LENIENCY WOULD BE FATAL.

British Cabinet is Advised by Colonies Against a Weak Course.

New York, March 28.—Mr. Chamberlain has taken into his confidence the Australian delegates now in London, and consulted them about the South African settlement, says a London cable to the Herald. It is reported the Colonial Secretary has communicated with Premier Laurier of Canada on the same matter. What recommendations have been made by the Colonial statesmen cannot be stated authoritatively, but it is believed that they favor the application of drastic principles to the problem. It is understood that a strong intimation has reached the Cabinet from Cape Town that any policy involving leniency toward the rebellious Dutch will result in the wholesale conversion of loyalists into rebels.

A rumor is current in Parliamentary circles that the Government will soon issue a proclamation annexing the Orange Free State, an idea that the same course will be pursued concerning the Transvaal as soon as British arms are in a position to enforce the edict.

RUSSIA AND TURKEY NOW.

What the Mobilization of Troops Means Prospective Trouble.

London, March 28.—An Odean despatch to the Standard says: "There can no longer be any doubt as to the object of the warlike preparations now being completed in South Africa. Nearly 250,000 troops have already been mobilized for active service. The Black Sea squadron with transports, is held in instant readiness. The tension in the relations between St. Petersburg and the Sublime Porte becomes every day more acute. The position is looked upon with the gravest apprehension. If the Ottoman Government, supported by Germany, should prove stubbornly intractable with regard to Russia's concessionary demands in Asia Minor, serious complications must inevitably ensue. The Russian garrisons in this Caucasus and along the Armenian frontier have been increased four-fold and equipped for active service."

London, March 28.—The Ottoman Government, supported by Germany, should prove stubbornly intractable with regard to Russia's concessionary demands in Asia Minor, serious complications must inevitably ensue. The Russian garrisons in this Caucasus and along the Armenian frontier have been increased four-fold and equipped for active service."

ENGLAND HAS NOT LOST HOPE.

French Journal Says She May Still Obtain Delage Bay.

Paris, March 28.—The Gaulois, in an article dealing with the Delage Bay arbitration, says: "The Americans and English show impatience to receive the indemnity. Every day indicates that she has not lost hope of persuading Portugal to relinquish Loranca Maruana, and to all these remains of her colonial empire."

POWELL TRICKS THE BOERS.

Report that Supplies Have Reached the beleaguered Town.

London, March 28.—A despatch to the Daily Mail, from Mafeking, dated Friday, March 16, describes the humorous side of the siege. It appears that the colonials set up bottles (labeled the Boers to shoot at them, and then chaffed the enemy when the shots go wide. Another trick of the colonials is by persistent concertina playing to lure the Boers, excited by curiosity to raise their heads from the trenches, when they are promptly sniped. Desultory shooting is still going on.

WILD SCENES IN A KENTUCKY COURT.

Attorneys in the Gobel Case Pass the Lie and Make a Rush and Revolvers Are Drawn.

Frankfort, Ky., March 28.—The examining trial of Secretary of State Caleb Powers, charged with conspiracy to assassinate William Goebel, came within a hair's breadth of terminating in a riot this afternoon. A hundred men or more, with tightly clamped revolvers, were ready to fight, and but for the presence of mind of the officers in the court room a fatal outbreak would have probably followed.

The commotion arose during an argument between Colonel Thomas Campbell, the New York lawyer, conducting the prosecution, and Judge George Denny of counsel for the defense, as to the admissibility of certain statements made by witness Golden. Campbell declared that Judge Denny had said in his speech that he (Denny) had come armed on several occasions. Denny denied this. Campbell repeated the statement and Denny passed the lie, rising and seizing a chair. Thereupon both attorneys rushed at each other.

Instantly half the crowd started for the doors and windows, while the other half surged forward with cries. Many weapons were drawn. The officials acted promptly and courageously, staying the panic in its incipient. Mutual explanations were made when quiet was restored. Governor Brown arose and said that the scene showed that a great public uneasiness existed; that his client was in personal danger, at this time, and that but for the action of several men a terrible tragedy might have occurred. He asked therefore that court be adjourned.

"I saw a hundred men with their hands on their revolvers, rush toward this railing," the former Governor declared; "a moment more and many innocent men might have died. I insist upon adjournment, and want such safeguards provided to-morrow as will prevent such outbreaks."

Judge Moore finally adjourned court until to-morrow morning, and the court officers and attorneys left the room. It was ascertained then that in the mad rush Attorney John S. Harrod had received a serious scalp wound. Others were slightly bruised and scratched by leaping through the windows or being jammed through the doors.

The large doors at the main entrance to the court room were torn from their hinges as half a hundred persons tried to get through them simultaneously. The prisoner realizing that in the event of an outbreak he would in all probability be forced to slaughter, crouched in his chair. The Beckham soldiers outside heard the disturbance, and hurriedly fixed bayonets on their rifles and prepared to charge on the excited throng.

BISHOP HARTZELL UPHOLDS BRITAIN.

Interests of Civilization and Boer Treatment of Natives Call for Her Success.

New York, March 28.—Bishop Hartzell, who has been in charge of Methodist mission work in South Africa for four years, is spending a fortnight in London before sailing for America to attend the mission and general conference at New York and Chicago, says a cable to the Tribune from London.

He has been studying racial and political questions during the series of journeys in Dutch, English and Portuguese possessions, as has Mr. Sir Alfred Miller, Cecil Rhodes, President Kruger and Stays, Dr. Leyds, Dr. Jamieson, an other conspicuous men in South Africa. He talks about the war in a most temperate way, gives to the Dutch leaders and people credit for many excellent traits, and robust virtues, but does not hesitate to express his deliberate conviction that the English cause is just, and commands his sympathies.

Bishop Hartzell bases his opinion that England is in the right on three grounds:—

First, there is the broad argument from the interests of general civilization. England, with her ideas of civil liberty, stands against the Dutch countries their inferior progress, their retrograde ideas and their stagnant conservatism.

Second, there is the overshadowing importance of the native problem. The Bishop describes the increase of the black races in Africa as something almost incredible. That which he considers to be the most overwhelming problem of the whole continent is the development of the black races under the tutelage of the white man.

Third, the welfare of the Boers themselves. Pious, robust and patriotic they are also narrow, superstitious and ignorant, and the best thing that can happen is for them to be overwhelmed by the superior numbers of the British and be brought under the broadening influence of education and of English ideas of liberty.

THE CREDIT BELONGS TO BRITAIN.

The States Came Just in Time to Claim Kudos for Open-Door Policy in China.

London, March 28.—The Standard, in an editorial, dealing with the cabled extracts from the correspondence between the United States Government and European powers upon the question of the "open door" policy in China, says:

"The policy of the United States was one of passive watchfulness, while Lord Salisbury was fighting for the 'open door' in Shanghai and Manchuria. The Americans came upon the scene only after British diplomacy had won its victories."

"The admission of France and of Russia is very interesting. The real value of such assurances, which in no wise alter existing conditions, will only be seen when the disruption of China comes to pass."

The Daily News also claims for Great Britain the credit of inaugurating the "open door" policy. The Daily Chronicle says: "From England it was only to be expected that the answer would be favorable; but that Russia should have replied that she is happy to comply with the wishes of the United States bears eloquent testimony to the position which the latter power has assumed in the councils of the world."

With American aid the Daily Chronicle thinks England can regenerate China.

BELGIANS REBUKE THEIR PRESS.

Attacks Upon Great Britain Resented by the Members of the Government.

Brussels, March 28.—In the Senate yesterday Mgr. Kaemlin, referring to the late peace conference at The Hague said it would be regarded as having aborted because it had been followed by the South African war, "in which numerous lives had been sacrificed to greed."

M. Montiflore Levy then protested against the attacks made by the Belgian press on Great Britain.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. De Faverma, said he concurred in this protest. "The press," he added, "forgets what England has done for our country, which owes it a debt of profound gratitude. I deeply regret these attacks."

On Senator Picard remarking that the Belgians sympathized with the South African republic, the minister replied that the government an parliament had no right to express an opinion regarding foreign disputes.

COLONEL OTTER'S OFFICIAL REPORT.

Commander of the Canadian Contingent Describes the Battle of Paardeberg.

Ottawa, March 28.—The Militia Department received this morning Col. Otter's official report of the battle of Paardeberg, in which the Canadian troops took so prominent a part. Colonel Otter speaks in the highest terms of the highest terms of the bravery of the Canadian troops, and describes in detail the movements of the troops just before and during the battle. The report relates that on the night before the battle the Canadians marched

GEN. JOUBERT'S DEATH HEAVY LOSS TO BOERS

Their Great Commander-in-Chief Died in His Bed and Not on Field of Battle.

SHORT SKETCH OF THE DEAD GENERAL'S CAREER

Joubert Was Responsible for the Great Store of Boer Armaments.
Gen. French Reports That Commandant Olivier
Is at Grobelaar With 6000 Men.

London, March 28.—The fact that the Boers are committing much wilful and unjustifiable destruction to coal mines in Northern Natal may be an indication that they contemplate an eventual retreat from that territory, especially when it is remembered that their baggage is packed at Newcastle. The course just mentioned is of course designed to hamper British operations along the railway, for which coal is necessary, though it is questionable if the advantage accruing to the Boers from such acts of vandalism will counterbalance the huge indemnity which must be demanded in consequence of them. Methods, contrasted with the protection accorded by Gen. Roberts to property of the Boers in the Free State, cannot help but arouse unfriendly feeling against the Boers throughout Europe and will undoubtedly accentuate the feeling of bitterness in Cape Colony and Natal and make the terms of peace all the harder for the bachelors.

GEN. JOUBERT IS DEAD.

Pretoria, Monday, March 28.—General Joubert is confined to his bed and is seriously ill.

Lorenco Marques, March 28.—General Joubert is dead.

GENERAL JOUBERT'S CAREER.

The Man who was Responsible for the Great Boer Armaments.

General Petrus Jacobus Joubert, commander-in-chief of the Transvaal forces, better known as Blim Peter, was born about 50 years ago. He was descended from the old French Huguenot family, which settled in South Africa. He was born in Cape Colony, but was taken to his parents in the Orange Free State where he was taught from early childhood to shoot straight and hate the British. Of schooling he had but little, but his ambition prompted him to read the few books he could obtain, and he succeeded in obtaining a fair knowledge of history and languages.

Soon after the acquisition of Natal by the British he became a burgher of the South African Republic, and a daring fighter. He was so feared by the natives that the knowledge that he was at the head of a punitive expedition usually resulted in their surrender. He was elected Vice-President of the Transvaal in 1894, defeated Sir George Colley at Mafeking Hill in 1895, and acted as President of the Republic in 1895-96 during Kruger's absence in Europe.

He Preferred Force.

Gen. Joubert was always in favor of the use of force instead of diplomacy, and President Kruger on several occasions had great difficulty in restraining his hot-headed friend and colleague, notably in 1898, when Joubert, with Kruger, and Pretorius, was planning the rebellion to overthrow British rule in the Transvaal.

It was Joubert who organized the army of the South African Republic, dividing the country into 11 military departments with commandants field cornets, and lieutenants. To such a point of perfection was the system carried out when the present war was declared Joubert, it is said, had only to send seventeen detachments and within forty-eight hours the Boer nation was under arms.

What He Did.

It was due to Gen. Joubert that the South African Republic succeeded in annexing the immense stores of war munitions and provisions which have stood them in such good stead during the conflict now in progress.

Although known as "Blim Peter," he was nearly six feet in height and of stout build, his nickname being given him on account of his shrewd military tactics. William Cox, a newspaper correspondent, who was recently released from imprisonment at Pretoria, said in an interview at Durban yesterday that General Joubert was apparently suspected of half-heartedness, and Mr. Cox gathered that his life would be in danger at the hands of the burghers if Pretoria was besieged.

The wife of Gen. Joubert, who was a Miss Fraser, had been devoted to him throughout the campaign, frequently sharing his dangers in the field.

PILCHER ATTACKS LADYBRAND.

French Says Olivier is at Grobelaar with 6000 Men.

London, March 28.—Colonel Pilcher, who with the Canadians, relieved the town of Douglas in December, led a few mounted troops to Ladybrand, and drove in the Boer outposts, after which he held the town for a while. Soon, however, a superior force of Boers arrived and turned the tables. Col. Pilcher retreated, taking with him a captured Boer laager. There were a few casualties on each side. The attack of the Boers was probably made for the purpose of covering the withdrawal of Commandant Olivier's or some other convey.

The Chronicle issues a second edition containing a despatch from Bloemfontein, dated March 24, saying that General French's army has arrived there. He reported that Commandant Olivier is at Grobelaar with 6,000 men. They are moving north to join the Transvaal Boers.

BOERS AT CLOCCOLAN.

Mafeking, Basutoeland, March 28.—It is stated that Commandant Olivier's command, which is trekking towards Kromstad, reached Cloccolan, about 20 miles north of here, where it remained for 48 hours, in order to give the men a chance to recover from their fatigue and to rest the horses and oxen.

CANADIANS FORCED TO HALT.

Floods Prevent Our Troops from Advancing from Van Wyckesdorp.

Cannarvon, March 27.—It is reported that the British column under Sir Charles Farnes, including the second Canadian contingent, has been unable to advance from Van Wyckesdorp, owing to the floods, which have been without precedent for decades. The roads are quite impassable. It is also reported that the rebels are still gathering at Mafeking, waiting for the British troops to go further north, so that they may be able to raid Cannarvon. Colonel Hertzner, of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, is proceeding to Cape Town on sick leave.

CLEMENTS OCCUPIED FAURESMITH.

Boers Reported to Have Been Cut Off Near Ladybrand.

London, March 28.—The British High Commissioner, Sir Alfred Milner, arrived at Bloemfontein last night and was met by Lord Roberts and his staff. The reception of the Free State and the treatment of insurgents are doubtless being discussed.

General French, previous to returning to Bloemfontein, occupied the flour mill near Baiter, which are considered an important acquisition.

Reports from Rouxville and other towns say the surrender of arms to the British continues satisfactorily.

Gen. Clements' column entered Fauresmith on Jan. 27, occupying Jagersfontein on its way there.

Boers Re-Enter Ladybrand. A despatch from Maseru, Basutoeland, dated Tuesday, March 27, says apparently reliable reports say that the Boers are re-entering Ladybrand, under the presumption that the British troops have crossed the line of the Boer retreat toward Kromstad, and that a fight or surrender near Ladybrand is imminent. Maseru despatches are not distinguished for their accuracy.

Mafeking Well.

Further advice from Mafeking dated March 18, reiterates that all was well there, and that the garrison was not so tightly drawn.

Two Boer prisoners escaped from the camp at Himez on March 24. The sickness there is unabated, and many of the prisoners are in a serious condition.

BOER FORCE HAS ESCAPED.

Standard and Diggers News Says That Olivier Has Escaped.

Pretoria, March 28.—According to a despatch from Kromstad, Commandant Olivier has joined Generals Grobler and Lenners, who are safe. Gen. Delany is still sick at Pretoria, but will proceed to the front on Sunday. Trains are frequently leaving with burghers for the fighting line on this side of Bloemfontein.

The Standard and Diggers News says that it learns that General Olivier, Grobler and Lenners have arrived at a point sufficiently far north to relieve all apprehensions of the possibility of their being cut off. It is expected they will arrive at Windburg in a few days and effect a junction with General De Wet, when the Federals, it is declared, will formidably oppose Lord Roberts.

Reports received from the various banks of the Republic show that the cash holdings amount to £1,328,887 (£1,158,285) sterling.

ROBERTS MUST WATCH THEM.

The Boers in Northern Natal are Not to Be Neglected.

London, March 28.—The Times says: "We are liable to forget that the Boers are still in force in Natal. According to the latest reports they hold fortified positions on the Biggarsberg, and occupy Van Rensburg's Farm in force. Trains, their baggage wagons are packed at Newcastle, but that only means that they are prepared for a move of some kind. It is obvious that their presence in here cannot be ignored by Lord Roberts, and it is easy to see that he has more to think about than a simple forward movement from Bloemfontein."

A large contingent of foreign mercenaries have been landed at Loranca Maruana. They cannot have intended to move very carefully of the estimation in which they are held by the Boers or of the way really valuable assistance has been required. Among the number of Irish mercenaries was Mr. Michael Devitt, who has chosen the singularity in saluting a port of Loranca Maruana as a place likely to benefit his health. On discovering his mistake he will promptly proceed to the lofty tableland of the Transvaal. We wish we could assure him that his presence will be half as welcome to the Boers as his absence is to the people of this country and the Irish Parliamentary party here. The Russian reply to the Boer request for intervention in the war, that has been sent, because it elaborately parades platitudinous sympathy, calculated with an intention that the Boers want the wrong way to work, and it would have made no difference at all had they taken the right way.

Summary of Events Transpiring Within Our Neighbour's Borders.

COLLEGE GAME.
Washington, March 28.—The Georgetown University will play a game of baseball with the Maryland Agricultural college here this afternoon.

BOSTONS START SOUTH.
Boston, March 28.—Manager Seelye and the Boston baseball team left for Greensboro, N.C., to-day, where they will do their preliminary training.

SALES FOR PARIS.
New York, March 28.—Louis Stern, who was appointed by President McKinley as one of the Commissioners to the Paris Exposition, sailed for that point to-day.

MISSING ISLAND.
Washington, March 28.—The United States steamship Iriquois will shortly make a search for the missing Morrell Island, while she is engaged in the survey for a cable route in the Pacific. Several reports have reached the office that ships have sailed directly over the place where the island was charted. The officers say this may be owing to a mistake made by the early recorders, but they will verify the fact.

INTERVIEW.
Washington, March 28.—Chief Joseph, head of the Nez Percés, and his staff are here to have a personal interview with President McKinley. Chief Joseph wants the tribesmen to hold land in severalty and also wants the tribe removed to the old stamping ground at the foot of the Blue mountains, near Kamatis, Ore.

A MANILA HERO.
Manila, March 28.—Lieutenant Louis Kaiser, who as ensign on the great Concord, took part with Admiral Dewey at the battle of Manila, will be given a public reception and a handsome sword by the citizens of this, his native city.

MODERN WAGONS.
Jeffersonville, Ind., March 28.—Bids are being opened to-day by the United States Depot Quartermaster Barnett for 25 improved Dougherty wagons. These wagons will be used in the service and the Government reserves the right to reject or accept any of all proposals.

LOWER RATES.
Chicago, March 28.—The Chicago and Northwestern Railway has met the rate of the other lines and made a rate of $8.06 per capita from Chicago to St. Paul and Minneapolis through tickets in connection with the special one-way Colonist rate of $5, offered by the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Soo lines to-day and April 4.

LOTTERIES MUST GO.
Los Angeles, Cal., March 28.—Ah Wing and Ah Wong were brought to trial before a jury today for conducting a lottery. The authorities are raiding the lottery joints in North Los Angeles and South Spring streets. A number of other Chinamen are implicated.

BIG CONCERT.
Montreal, March 28.—A grand concert will take place at Windsor Hall tonight to raise funds to decrease the heavy debt on the Catholic High School. A choir of 200 voices has been trained to sing national and patriotic choruses. William Ludwig, the noted Boston baritone, will assist in the best local talent. Great interest is taken in the event.

SUPREME COURT JUSTICE RETIRES.
Washington, March 28.—Associate Justice Horace Gray of the supreme court was retired today. Mr. Hays from Massachusetts, was born in 1822, and appointed to the supreme court in 1881.

GOING WEST.
Washington, March 28.—President McKinley, Governor Nash of Ohio, Secretary Hay and other distinguished Ohioans will go to California to be present at the launching of the battleship Ohio during the middle of the summer. The presidential train will go West over a northern route and return via the Southern Pacific, New Orleans and Atlanta. If they have begun their speaking campaign by that time the President will be sure to honor the demand for speeches.

TEACHERS MEET.
Logansport, Ind., March 28.—The Northern Indiana Teachers' Association began a three days' session today. The meeting is largely attended. The northern state teachers work largely in union and much has been accomplished by these gatherings.

CHINESE MATCH.
Brooklyn, March 28.—Jackson W. Shewalter, the ex-champion chess player of America, and David Japowski, the champion of France, will begin a chess match of seven games at the Brooklyn Chess Club tonight.

ENTRIES FOR REGATTA.
Chicago, March 28.—Edward T. Belmont and St. Mayer left here today for the express purpose of securing the entries of the prominent eastern boatclubs, for the regatta to be held here on July 4.

REPUBLICANS MEET.
Jersey City, N. J., March 28.—The Republican city convention opened here to-day.

WARSHIP FOR ENQUINMENT.
Enquiment, B. C., March 28.—Her Majesty's Ship Arcturion is expected to arrive here today, to add to the naval strength here.

FIRST DEFENDERS' SURVIVORS.
Philadelphia, March 28.—The First Defenders' Association celebrates its thirty-ninth anniversary today. They have a proud record. On April 18, 1861, 500 Pennsylvanians reached Washington and were quartered in the Capitol Building. They were the first troops to reach the impregnable national capital in response to the President's call. The thanks of congress were subsequently accorded these first troops, and later the State of Pennsylvania conferred a medal of honor on each survivor.

REPRIETE EXPIRES.
Philadelphia, March 28.—On February 28, Governor Stone granted a reprieve to today to William Eggo, who murdered Mary Jane Lewis about one year ago. A further stay is not expected.

ENTRIES CLOSE.
New York, March 28.—The entries for the boxing and wrestling tournament for the Metropolitan championships, to be held at the Broadway Athletic Club in April, closed today.

GAS CASE HEARD.
Indianapolis, March 28.—The oral arguments in the case of the manufacturers of Grant and Madison counties against the Indiana Natural Gas and Oil Company were heard here today. The suit is to prevent the company from piping gas out of the state, and the outcome is of vital importance. It is being bitterly contested.

AUTOMOBILE ROAD RACE.
Nico, France, March 28.—The first of the big automobile road races scheduled for this spring was started here today from here to Marmulles and back, a distance of 400 miles. Ten thousand francs is the stake, and it will be closely contested.

ANNUAL HORSE SHOW.
New York, March 28.—The sixth annual horse show will be opened at Duane's Riding Academy this evening and will continue until the first. Some of the best show horses in the country have been brought into competition, and this show promises to excel any previous one held at the academy.

RAN A RACE WITH DEATH.
Harrow Heights by which a Man on a Railway Bridge Won.

A high trestle bridge more than a quarter of a mile long, supporting the single track of the Nickel Plate railroad, spans the valley of Grand river, east of Painesville, O. The bridge is little wider than the distance between the rails, and the ties are placed eight or ten inches apart, the space between being open to the river below.

A young man who crossed recently had a thrilling experience on the bridge. He had just passed the center when a fast train rounded the curve behind him. As the engine whistled he quickened his pace. With every step the train was rushing nearer, and there was not a moment to lose. Once the young man stumbled and seemed about to fall, but quickly regained his balance and hurried on. As he reached the place for which he had started the train was close behind, and he had just time to swing himself over the side of the bridge as the locomotive thundered by. The ends of the train were slippery with grease from dripping axle boxes, and his feet slipped wide as he left the track. His right hand, stretched blindly out before him, touched a round iron bar, bracing two parts of the bridge and, with a grip like that of a drowning man, his fingers clung around it. For a moment he swung in empty air. In another his left hand had found a place beside his right, and his feet touched the welcome edge of a brace below. With bleeding fingers clutching the slender iron bar that vibrated widely from side to side, moments seemed hours. At last the train passed, and the young man was able to climb slowly to the track above. Unnerved by the trying experience, he lay for a moment stretched across the rails and, then rising to his feet, with blanched face and unsteady limbs, made his way to firm ground.—Cleveland Leader.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important source of wealth to the colony, is in danger of ruin. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

DISAGREEABLE TRAITS

Sometimes They Impair the Usefulness of Otherwise Good Men.

Squire Granby was dead. The village people had gathered in the church to hear his funeral sermon, says The Youth's Companion. The old doctor, with his nephew, John, who was down from the city, sat in a back pew.

The minister told what everyone there knew to be the truth of the dead man. A faithful believer in Christ, a man of high integrity, in whose justice and honesty the whole community trusted, liberal to the poor, walking blameless under every moral law.

"Was all that true?" said John, as he and the doctor walked home. "Every word of it."

"And yet," said the young man, "I got the impression the other day at the funeral that neither his neighbors nor his family felt his death very deeply. Indeed, I fancied I saw a look of relief on their faces."

The doctor was silent for a moment. "You are too shrewd an observer, Jack," he said. "The squire loved to manage. He was a busy, energetic man, and he thought it his duty to look every man and woman who was not as busy and energetic as himself. His tongue was like a goad. He was a man, too, who never praised or encouraged anybody. His wife and children probably never heard a word of commendation from him in their lives, strive as they might."

"Then he complained incessantly of the weather, of his food, of the state of the church and the country; of all that his family did or did not do. When he came into the room you felt that a chilly fog had closed in upon you."

"And yet, in spite of these faults, the squire was faithful in his heart to his friends and to God. He probably never was conscious of these disagreeable traits, but they were so noticeable that his neighbors, and even his children and his wife, could not help a certain feeling of relief when he was gone."

"I wonder," said Jack. "If he knew, when he awakened in that other life, how depressing and unpleasant a Christian he had been in this?"

"And I wonder," said the doctor, "if there is no way for you and me to find out our petty faults—our disagreeable personal traits—in time to mend them here in this life?"

To seek advice.

Rome, March 27.—Archbishop Walsh, the obsequies of a visit here was to consult the Vatican regarding the course the Catholic clergy of Ireland should pursue on the occasion of Queen Victoria's visit to Dublin, will return to that city in time to be present on her majesty's arrival.

Short Story of the Day

SPANISH LOVE.

Listen!
I stand here holding my very breath
as that sweet, wild strain floats out to me.

It is the same maddening waltz picked on a guitar, accompanied by the tinkling of a mandolin that we waited on all those happy nights of the past.

The music of the guitar brings it all back to me with a sudden rush of bitterness.

One year ago to-night he and I waited together for the last time.

It was a glorious night, with a full southern moon hanging high in the far-away sky. The flowers sent up a hundred sweet odors from their dewy petals, seeming to invite us to a rattle among them. The low sibilance of a guitar was wafted to us on the balmy breeze, and he told me again the same story
I had listened to so often. Yet it became sweeter at each telling, as we glided through the many dances.

The hot blood surged through my veins and I meant to hear once more the tender voice and feel the hot breath fanning my face as he tells his love—now and then. No one can understand my feelings as we drifted on through that something yet chattering waits in the silvery, tempting light of the moon.

I loved him when I first saw him there among the roses. He was so different from our men; so young, boyish and handsome. He was a rich young Englishman, and I thought that he would not love me, only a little Spanish girl, but my deep love was drawing him on, and some day I hoped that he would be mine.

A year ago to-night we were at a ball, and after the first delicious waltz he left me, saying he would come back soon, and when he did return a woman was beside him. She was of the same delicious type of English girl, with languid blue eyes, brownish gold hair and perfect complexion. I thought her lovely, but so cold, no emotion whatever, even while leaning on him.

How glad I am that I feel, even if it be only pain!

He introduced her to me as a friend who happened to stop over in her travels, and I wandered aimlessly around, leaving him to enjoy his friend's company.

Finally I stopped behind some palms which formed a screen, and sat thinking of him. I was so happy and trusting in the security of his love. Suddenly I heard some one talking on the other side of the palms, and hearing my own name
I listened. How can I believe what I hear?

"Yes, my love, these Spanish girls are fleshy to flirt with. They can love with an intensity that would melt some men on fire, and I admit that I have quite enjoyed it all, but, you know, my darling, that I am true to you deep down in my heart, and I should have forgotten how to make love without some one to practice with, and she was the prettiest of the lot. You must not be jealous."

"No, Frederick, I am not jealous. It is not that, but she loves you. It is wicked of you to flirt with her. Every flame of her glorious eyes and every smile of the crimson lips are for you.
Here is a deep passion that she cannot overcome easily."

Oh, if she could have only known how easily I had overcome it. How easy he had made it for me!

The hot southern blood that rushes through my veins is even now burning with an intense hatred as with love an hour ago. As I stand there watching and listening, no one knows the pain that is tearing in my heart. Involuntarily I clutch the tiny dagger that is concealed in my dress. Oh, how quickly my love had been killed.

They move away and begin the dance
—the dance that should have been mine.
I still crouch behind the palms, my mind in such a tumult I scarcely know what I am doing.

She is gone now; gone with his kiss upon her lips. I saw them as he told her "Au revoir" on the other side of those same palms. He is looking and inquiring for me. I hear him say I must have gone home. I know where he will go to find me.

Slipping from my hiding place I run swiftly yet silently on to the training place. My guitar, the one he gave me lies on a rustic seat. I pick it up and my purpose grows stronger. Hearing a footstep I look up and see him coming toward me with outstretched hands and smiling face.

"Ah, Zazilia, my queen, why did you—
'Hush!' I cry, 'how dare you say that to me after all I saw; all I heard to-night. You start back, you wonder?
Do you think I am going to let you live to love her while I am forsaken? Never!'
I go closer to him as I speak; I see the smile leave his handsome face and a baffled look take its place. That one look is the last touch to my already blazing anger.

"I will kill you," I cry, my voice choking with suppressed fury.

"I should have known better than to trust anyone with a taint of Spanish blood, not to think of a full-blooded one,"
he muttered, turning away.

I could not bear his love or country insulted and maddened beyond endurance I sprang after him and as he turned his white face toward me again I plunged the shining dagger into his heart.
I drew it out quickly as he gasped the one word, "Zazilia!" and fell to the ground.

I stand holding the tiny dagger, dripping with his blood! It fascinates me; hides me spellbound. I cannot remove my eyes from it as the blood drips slowly onto the ground.

He will never tell her of his love against the thought fills me with a wild exulting joy and I am happy. Then I stoop and kiss the upturned face, kiss the already cold lips; fiercely passionately I kiss the wound.

The thought comes to me like lightning.
"What if I am discovered?" I turn toward the tiny chamber, where I carefully remove all traces of blood, then go to the window and look out. The room before me is one of exquisite beauty. I can hear the music and see lights sparkling back where that merry party is still dancing. The flowers seem more fragrant than ever; the little fountain throws its silvery spray far up and falls back with a musical splash, and there lying near it is the body of the man I have just killed.

I cannot see him lying half buried in the tall grass, but still I know he is there with wild white face in the moonlight.
How peaceful everything is! How different from the tumult that rages in my brain!

Throwing myself on the floor by the window I try to think. I cannot describe my thoughts. They are bitter, yet there seems to be a fierce pride in my heart at the thought that he can never love me again. Finally the horror and crime overcome me, and I pray as never before.

"Oh God, what have I done? Have I in my mad jealousy cut off the life of the man I love? Oh God, forgive!
forgive! forgive! Holy mother intercede for me!"

I kneel there clasping my hands and the little cross close to my aching heart, in a dumb, blind way, until the sun, peering over the line of heavy blue hills in the distance, reminds me that I must do something, yet I dare not move.

The pang at my head is maddening; my breath comes in short gasps; I fear detection, yet hardly care. Why should I care? He has gone and I can never be happy again.

I throw myself on my couch to try and collect my wandering thoughts, and rest. My mind seems slipping from me and I fall asleep and do not awake until the sun is shining.

I slip out on the balcony and they tell me he has been found dead, murdered.
I am calm and collected, showing no emotion; indeed I feel none. Don Lucas has been accused of it. He is my refused lover and has been heard to threaten Frederick. My heart gives a joyous bound. Yes, let him suffer for it. He hated Frederick, and I hate him.

Gathering a lot of crimson passion flowers I go to where they have placed my love. The room is silent and lone, and I slip in and put the flowers over the wound. Then kneeling down by him I again pray, though silently, for forgiveness for the deed, and for feeling glad that Lucas is accused.

When I raise my eyes she, the fair creature I loved, is watching me. Coming toward me she holds out her hands, but I draw back. She says softly—
"Don't be afraid of me. I am your friend, and—and we both loved him."

She takes my hand, her cool one, kissing back the damp hair from my brow, and my heart goes strangely out to her. She lays a bunch of pure white flowers on his breast.

"The flowers indicate the different nature of our love," she said.

"Yes," I answer, "red for passionate love, anger, sin and crime; white is the symbol of purity, devotion, truth."
She looks at me in a strange, puzzled way, and I press her hand, then turn and leave her alone with her love—and mine. When I reach the little fountain and glide up to me and cautiously hand me a note. Recognizing Don Lucas' writing I hastily break the seal.

"Zazilia, I know all. I saw all, but you shall never suffer. In this way I prove my love for you, but I will not suffer at the hands of others for it.
Rather than that, I shall kill myself.
Farewell!"

Shuddering I turn to question the lad,
but he has gone.

Mirrored enough they were both pillared over there side by side, and I care for both graves alike, planting passion flowers on both, and I can see the marble gleaming now in the moonlight among the dark green ivy, relieved of its crimson border. They are fitting emblems for both.

IS MARS PEOPLED?

Such a Claim Advanced by a German Scientist.

"Is Mars inhabited?" has been asked very often during recent years and has engaged the serious attention of many astronomers and especially of M. Camille Flammarion, a noted French scientist and author.

Some new light is now thrown on this subject by Professor Ernst Haeckel, an eminent German philosopher, in a book entitled "World Problems. After pointing out that men have been studying the heavens for more than 4,500 years and have only been studying themselves for the last half century he says we may safely assume that the many fixed stars whose light requires thousands of years to reach us are sure and are surrounded by planets and worlds similar to those we know. We may also assume, he holds, that thousands of these planets have arrived at the same stage of development as our world, and it naturally follows that on them the same conditions of life prevail as on this earth, and there is no valid reason why human beings should not live there as they do here.

Professor Haeckel takes care to explain that there are doubtless many planets the temperature of which is such that life, as we understand the term, cannot be sustained on them.
He thinks it very probable that there are types of animals and plants on some planets which are not to be found on the earth. According to him it is very likely that the bio-genetic process exists on Mars, Venus and possibly some other planets of our system, as well as on planets of other solar systems, but plants on these planets have reached a higher stage of development than has been reached by animals and plants of this earth.

If we assume that Mars is inhabited—and Professor Haeckel seems pretty well satisfied that it is—we must assume, he holds, that the men and women whose home is on the planet are not such as we, but of a far higher type. They may resemble us externally, but they are free from our physical defects and excel us in strength and gracefulness. It is in the intellectual sphere, however, that their superiority is most clearly shown. If there are human beings on these planets, says Prof. Haeckel, it is extremely probable that they far surpass ordinary men and women in intelligence.

Steel Combs.
A man who saw in a sidewalk showcase some steel combs and who wondered what steel combs could be used for found upon inquiry that they were used by farmers in combing fur.

There was one of these combs that looked much like a comb of the ordinary kind, coarse toothed for half its length and finer toothed the other half. And then there was one comb that had teeth for half its length, the solid and serving as a handle.

There are other steel combs that are used for a similar purpose, as steel combs made to comb dogs with. The dog comb looks somewhat like the fine toothed comb in its general shape, but it is larger, toothed on one side only and coarser toothed than the so called fine comb. The unteethed side combs of this sort are used on various kinds of dogs, including, for instance, long haired dogs like the French per-dant.

is carried too far."

"It was this way, your honor," ex-

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

Peace and War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilised world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creations of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilisation, the all-pervading ambition to subjugate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this beguiling land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis of this land from a remote and unexplored region to the centre of the world's attention.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the native tribes, the descendants of the Hottentots, have been the constant enemies of the Dutch and they in turn resisting the incursions of civilisation. In spite of this, no strenuous were the efforts of the civilised world to subjugate the continent, to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their conquests in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a life of the highest advantages of intelligence and luxuries of civilisation.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its history and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but the modern South African and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a pictorial history of the land, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it does an expenditure of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have entrusted for its authorship to one of the most distinguished and experienced of our countrymen, a man whose authority upon South African matters is world-wide acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having travelled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been as accurately and as thoroughly as any published, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including some of the important scenes of battle and a magnificently illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is the great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the finest and most beautiful buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Rebel is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxuriant vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenues of trees and fine buildings, the native life and customs, and the picturesque costumes of the Orangutans lend an air of peace and tranquillity, while the picture of civilisation and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, presents many attractions that really place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grivances" are substantially the same for the great war between Britain and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absent-minded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been solved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems:

Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absent-minded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in communities, the communities in clusters, and finally the clusters in constitutions, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as man generally is an animal who usually refuses to live the life spanned out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forthwith by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopulike brain cell is a living little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is conducted by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now the object of this "strife" is simply to avoid overwork, for each tiny cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in those patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupified, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now cease working, and the man sleeps like one dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken, the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Genes are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England for example, Cromwell was a hypochondriac and had violent, Dean Swift inherited insanity and was himself not a little mad. Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley," Charles Lamb went crazy, Johnson was another hypochondriac, Coleridge was a morbid maniac, Milton was of a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (modern ideas of madness are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their coming work has brought about various types of insanity as depicted or, to phrase it more correctly, induced disturbance of the mental equilibrium.

House Work

Seems easy to a man, but there is a great deal of lifting and reaching to do; a great many trips up and down stairs to make in the course of day's house work.

It's hard where a woman is well. For a woman suffering with some form of "female trouble" it is daily torment.

There are thousands of women struggling along, day by day, in increasing misery. There are other thousands who have found a complete cure of their disease in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It stops debilitating humors, cures irregularity, heals inflammation and ulceration, nourishes the nerves, and gives vitality and vigor.

It makes weak women strong and sick women well. It contains no opium, cocaine nor other narcotic.

A number of months I suffered with female trouble," writes Miss Agnes M. Washburn, D. C. "I tried various remedies, but none seemed to do me any permanent good. The doctor said it was the worst case of female trouble they ever had. I decided to write you for help. I received your 'Favorite Prescription' and used it as directed. I feel better than I have for years. My health is gradually improving. It is improving every day."

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

DOG EAST.

A black and white Cocker Spaniel pup, named "Buddy," was found on the corner of George and Front streets.

Temple of Fame.

The first regular rehearsal of the Temple of Fame will take place in the school room of St. John's church, on Friday evening, under the direction of Mrs. Dickson, of Fenelon Falls.

Apprentices Wanted.

The Times requires a smart boy for night work to set headings and run messages. Must be good at spelling. A fine chance for smart lad. Apply at Times Building, in daytime, or to Mr. F. Thomas, at night.

Victoria Park.

At a meeting of the directors of the Victoria Park, it was decided to again advertise for a caretaker for the park for the approaching season. Only one tender was put in for this job, doubtless on account of its being poorly advertised. An ad. in the Times would give the matter necessary publicity.

"THE TEMPLE OF FAME"

OPERA HOUSE, APRIL 30th

Tickets 25c and 35c.

The Opera House.

The "Mavis Brown" Company played again last night to a crowded house. The attendance appears to be increasing nightly. Last night "Jerry the Tramp" was presented, and as usual, everything was first class.

The Late Mr. McMillan.

The funeral of the late Mr. J. D. McMillan, formerly principal of the MURRAY-ST. Separate School, took place yesterday afternoon from the undertaking establishment of Mr. McPadden to St. Peter's cathedral and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery, where interment was made. It was attended by many old friends. Mr. McMillan was fifty years of age. Pertinence was the cause of his death.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Farmers are preparing for spring work. The sugar making time is now at hand.

Work has begun on the steamers on the upper waters.

All the roads leading into town are in a very bad condition.

The Merchants' Retail Association has a membership of over 50.

The annual spring thaw is now due and a good one may be expected.

A case of grossly insulting language is to come before the police magistrate this morning.

Hiawatha Encampment met last night, and a number of candidates were initiated.

Rev. John Bushell, M.A., of Norwood, delivered the address at St. John's church last night.

Mr. Harold Baptie, of Springville, is at the hospital, suffering from an attack of appendicitis.

The fire brigade was called out yesterday to extinguish a small blaze at the residence of Mr. Brown, 55 Downie street. The damage was slight.

The old gas lamp posts should be removed from the streets. A few of these are still standing and they do not add to the beauty of the street.

Invitations are out for a strawberry festival which will be held next summer in honor of the completion of the line of new granolithic pavements, R.S.V.P.

The Town Council attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Browncombe on Tuesday, testifying to the respect in which the deceased was held. The funeral was very largely attended.

The famous "diamond mine" near Madoc has been sold and the new company will erect a large stamp mill. Already 600 cords of wood have been contracted for to supply the engine.

The Council went into committee of the whole some time ago to straighten out the line of extras in the localities street bridge contract. The Council will go into the hole sure enough, over those extras.

At the Band Concert to-morrow evening in the Market Hall, Major Miller will recite Kipling's "Absent Minded Beggar." The band will also play the march which Sullivan has arranged under the same name as one of their numbers.

The Liberals have had a meeting and the Tories are making all sorts of wild guesses as to what was the outcome of it. A prominent Tory told the Times yesterday that Mr. E. B. Stone was to be the Liberal candidate. Stone would be hard to crack.

A lady sustained a severe fall on the pavement on Water street yesterday and had to be driven home. The ice has been chopped away by the town men, making it exceedingly dangerous for pedestrians. There will probably be another action against the town.

PERSONALS.

Mrs. W. J. Green is visiting friends in Toronto.

Mr. John Fanning, of Robert Fair & Co., is seriously ill.

Mr. W. D. Parker, was in Toronto yesterday on business.

Miss Cora McDonald, of Lakefield, is visiting friends in town.

Miss Dickson, of Fenelon Falls, is the guest of Mrs. D. J. Lundy.

Mr. J. H. Brandon, is in town, the guest of his sister, Mrs. W. H. Robertson.

Miss Lottie McWilliams, of Cobourg, is visiting friends in Peterborough and Lindsay.

The many friends of Mr. Wm. Butler will be pleased to learn that he is again able to be about.

We are pleased to see Mr. Thomas Cahill again around, after an attack of la grippe.

We regret to learn that the Mother Superior at St. Joseph's hospital is seriously ill.

Miss Florence Scott, who has been on an extended visit to friends in California, has returned home.

Mr. T. Arnold Haultin, of Toronto, is in town to see his father, General Haultin, who is seriously ill.

Mr. M. L. Strickland, passed through town on his way to Toronto this week, where he is spending a few days.

Mr. T. Bradburn and party are now in California, where they will remain a couple of months. They are all well.

Mr. D. M. W. Somerville, of Dr. Morrison's dental office, town, made a visit to his Lindsay friends on Saturday.

Miss Vane Moncrief, of Beauford, is seriously ill with scarlet fever. Dr. McClelland, of Peterborough, is in attendance.

Mr. J. H. Allan, ex-manager of the Standard Bank, Newcastle, is spending a day or two with his cousin, Mr. Robert Fair.

The many friends of Mr. Archie

Stetson will regret to learn that he has gone to the northwest, where he is likely to remain. Archie has many well wishers in Peterborough.

Mrs. W. F. Johnston, who has been seriously ill in the Nicholls hospital for some weeks, was operated on for appendicitis. The operation was successful, and the patient is doing as well as could be expected.

Mr. Chomley Strickland of New York, spent a few days in Lakefield, last week visiting his brother Mr. M. L. Strickland. He left on Monday for the Yukon where he has secured a good position in the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

Mr. Andrew Voss, of Toronto, has removed to town and will become a member of the 57th Battalion band. Mr. Voss was corporal to the Army and Navy Veterans' band, of Toronto, and was heard with much appreciation and pleasure at their concert here last June.

Mr. and Mrs. Fessenden have decided to allow their son, Mr. Jack Fessenden, of the Royal Military College, Kingston, to accept the commission in the Imperial Army which was proffered him. He will be attached to the General Service Corps. The Times joins in wishing Jack all kinds of good luck.

Sudden Death.

Mr. Wm. Frank, an old and respected resident, died very suddenly yesterday morning while waiting on the road from his residence, lot 22, con. 4, Emily, about four miles from Fenelon Falls, to his daughter's house, a short distance away, when he fell dead on the road. He was born in Ireland and came out to this country with his father, the late George Frank, when about seven years old. The family settled in Emily and Mr. William Frank lived there continuously until his death. Friends will be grieved to learn of the sudden nature of the occurrence. Mr. Frank leaves a wife and a family of five boys and three girls, all grown up. One daughter pre-deceased her father. The funeral takes place to-morrow afternoon at 1 o'clock to the Emily cemetery.

A Good Suggestion.

Shorter holidays at midsummer for the country schools is a question frequently discussed in rural school sections, where it is alleged that the summer months are the best ones for very young children to school. The advocates of this change claim that many of the children in the country live a considerable distance from the school and are unable to attend regularly during the season of bad roads and stormy weather.

Third Annual Wheel Show.

The third annual wheel show under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. will be held in Association hall on Monday and Tuesday, April 2nd and 3rd. The 1900 models will be exhibited and a musical programme is promised as well. The plan of the hall will be opened for exhibitors to select spaces this morning.

The World's Largest Man.

Yunnan-ge in Persia owns the largest man in the world. His name is Chang-Yan Min. He is seven feet three inches in his bare feet, and is proportionately broad, besides which he is a man of weight for he turns the scales at 325 pounds. He was formerly a coolie, and as he carried double loads he earned double pay. Now he guards the entrance to a mandarin's yamen and receives the remuneration of three soldiers.

Saved by Good Food

Read a doctor's words about

GRAPE-NUTS

"A short time ago I was called to a patient who had been given up by his physician. His stomach would not bear food and consequently, he got no nourishment and was slowly dying from exhaustion. I immediately put him on Grape-Nuts food and Postum Cereal Food. He could keep both articles on his stomach and neither caused him any pain. He had been using both the food and the cereal coffee and had gained so rapidly that I feel he will be out of bed in about a week." Dr. C. L. L. L.

The reason a delicate stomach can take Grape-Nuts food is that it is predigested by natural means during its preparation, and even a small babe can handle it as it causes no heavy work by the stomach and digestive apparatus, on the contrary, being predigested, it is quickly assimilated into blood and energy.

Greater Than Ever.

Cobourg Post.—From personal indications the number of tourists who desire to spend the season in Cobourg this year will be larger than ever. The Arlington, we learn from Mrs. Alexander, will be well filled early. Already many applications for rooms have been received from old patrons in New Orleans, Washington and other cities. Work is to be commenced at once making alterations and improvements, and by the first of June all will be in readiness for the reception of guests. Mrs. Smith, of the Columbian, is being deluged with applications from old and new patrons from all parts of the adjoining states, and she fully expects to have that house and the spacious annex, "Lakeview," filled to their full capacity. The Baltimore is also in demand, and every room will be taken together with the annex. The cottages will all be occupied and it is possible that a number of others will be taken. Altogether everything points to a busy season.

Was, War, and Remorse of War.

The universe seems to be in the throes of battle and foreign climes comes the rattle of musketry, the clash of swords, the shout of victory and the cry of the wounded. The Blue and the Gray; our country shows the meaning of these words, nobly fought for the cause each thought was right and now united in a common cause. In Paul Dresser's new song, "The Blue and the Gray," our thoughts turn back to '61 and '65, but the song tells in its famous author's best vein of the mother whose three sons gave up their lives for their country's cause. Not since his famous "On the Banks of the Wabash" has any song story created such a future among music lovers. "The Wabash" was heard from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The "Blue and the Gray" will be sung wherever the English language is used. Published by Howley, Haviland & Co., New York and Chicago.

Statement of Horace.

Mr. W. J. Pearson, of Montreal, spent yesterday in town, a guest of the White House, where he enjoyed some valuable business. A far load went forward to Montreal last night, and more will follow. Mr. Pearson was accompanied by his son, who went to Claremont last night.

ONESELF.

Slighting and rude are excellent. Wm. Balfour, Walter Fair and others, leave for Cobourg, Manitoba.

We are having every house filled and a chance for every good enterprising man to build a few houses.

Prof. Morrison, of Lindsay, has got a good musical class here.

David Mims has got the express here, and also carries the mail.

J. V. Thornton, T. A. McPherson, Samuel Grandy and others of our citizens have recovered from a severe attack of la grippe.

James Richardson and B. J. McQuade shipped a large lot of stock on Monday.

A number of our citizens attended the concert at Mount Pleasant, March 28, and were delighted with the Peterborough performers.

HIAWATHA.

Mr. Alfred Crowe met with an accident Monday night that might have been a great deal more serious than what it proved to be. He took his shot gun out to the woods where he was engaged chopping wood, and when about to lay it down the trigger caught in his hand and a true and caused the gun to go off. The contents entered one of Mr. Crowe's arms and scattered freely to other parts of his body. He is now doing nicely, however, and no serious results are apprehended.

Transient Traveller.

Sir,—I am one of the subjects which came up before the Retail Merchants' Association the other night was the matter of transient traders. How to deal with the great evil is a conundrum. The only way, to my mind, is to have a stringent by-law passed by the Council and have it printed and distributed amongst the members for ready reference. Then if a pedlar is caught he can be dealt with at once.

A merchant told me only a few days ago that half the storekeepers in town order their envelopes, address tags, printed wrapping paper, etc., from outside places. The other day I saw a huge pile of this stuff, which had been just landed from the station, piled on the sidewalk in front of Mr. Robert Neill's, who, by the way, is one of the executive committee of the Association. This is consistency with a vengeance. I could name many others who send out of town for goods that can be had here.

If the Retail Merchants' Association is to amount to anything, the members will have to set better example than this. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, etc.,

CONSERVATIVE.

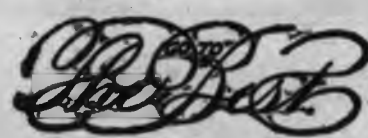

Peterborough, March 28.

We Beat the Heat.

Ed Tufts of Los Angeles was playing golf with a friend. When he drove from the third teeing ground, he sliced the ball badly and sent it away to one side. It stopped in front of a grazing cow. Ed Tufts came up just in time to see it disappear into the bovine mouth. When his opponent had made his hole, Tufts tethered the cow and, with many scattering thrashes of his club, drove the ball to the third hole. There he made his hole. He then turned and, seeing that he had made the hole in two strokes. His opponent calmly tethered the hole in seven and claimed the hole.

"But I made it in two," protested Tufts gleefully. "No, you didn't," declared the other. "You made it in six. You hit that cow of course, for I created every stroke," and Tufts conceded the hole.—San Francisco Argonaut.

GEN. PARSONS ABOUT TO ENTER THE TRANSVAAL

Boers Are Concentrating in Force Fifteen Miles North of Bloemfontein and Lord Roberts is Sending Forward Troops to Engage Them—Queen's Visit.

Allard North, March 29.—General Brabant and his staff have returned from Rouville and are now actively engaged in holding the southern frontier of the Free State. Detachments are being sent to strengthen the positions which have been occupied. It is evident that Commandant Olivier, now moving north, is being closely watched by Sir Godfrey Lambton, the British Commissioner, who is in communication with General French.

London, March 29.—Arrangements for the Queen's visit to Dublin are rapidly nearing completion. The detachments of Life Guards left London this morning to act as the Royal escort, and the trials of the Royal trains have been completed along the entire route. Mr. Gerald Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, who is just recovering from a serious illness, will leave tomorrow in order to welcome the Queen, who will probably be accompanied by Lord Lansdowne, Secretary of State for War.

London, March 29.—The Boers are concentrating in force about 15 miles north of Bloemfontein in the rear of Glen siding, and Lord Roberts is sending forward troops to engage them. The Seventh Infantry Division and part of Gen. French's cavalry have been sent up to join the 14th Brigade, and the two cavalry regiments that are holding Glen siding. It does not seem probable that the Boers will give serious battle in the face of open country north of Glen siding. Still their evident strength indicates more than a corps of observation. The Boers are displaying aggressive in all parts of the field of war. The Johannesburg Mounted Police, stationed by the Boers to be their best mounted command, are raiding the country near Bloemfontein, harassing the farmers who have given up their arms to the British and carrying off cattle. There is a Boer report from Natal that a Hottentot soldier of fortune, Colonel Gansel, is operating close to the Boer outposts on the border. The Boers have re-occupied Campbell and are in strength near Tanga and Barkley West. They sighted the British camp at Warrington Wednesday, and moved out of range that night. Yesterday (Thursday), two British guns fired on the Boer trenches, quieting their Mausers. Lord Methuen and the force that had been operating in the Barkley district, have been recalled to Kimberley by Lord Roberts. No explanation has been given for this, but the most of the troops are discouraged at being ordered back.

The Boers and disloyalists at Kennard have been dispersed and caused to retreat. General Parsons is about to enter the Transvaal unopposed.

Lord Roberts is making extensive arrangements to police all the Free State towns in the territory occupied.

Despatches from Maseru assert that the Boers have returned to Ladybrand from Clocolan, have taken up strong positions and sent pickets far in every direction to watch Batavia in the expectation that part of General Buller's army will invade the Free state from that side.

According to Pretoria advices Mafeking was bombarded for some hours on Tuesday. It is reported in London, in a well-informed quarter, that Lord Kitchener will be offered the post of Commander-in-Chief in India, succeeding the late Sir Wm. Lockhart, as soon as decisive successes have been obtained in the Transvaal and that General Sir Ambrose Hunter will succeed him as Lord Roberts' chief of staff. The Indian newspapers have been urging Kitchener's appointment.

London, March 29.—A despatch to the Daily Chronicle from Bloemfontein dated March 28 says: "The Boers are active north of Glen siding, about 15 miles from here."

Reinforcements of all arms are being sent from Bloemfontein, including the 7th division and a portion of General French's cavalry. The Johannesburg Mounted Police are still raiding cattle and harrying the disarmed burghers who are returning to their farms.

London, March 29.—The Duke of York has accepted from a resident of Cork a thousand packets of shamrock seed, which will be sown upon the graves of Irish soldiers in South Africa.

London, March 29.—The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Morning Post, telegraphing Wednesday says: "President Kruger boasts his intention to retake Bloemfontein within a week and it appears probable that the Boers are advancing in force southward."

BOERS' AMMUNITION.

Reports That It is Running Short not to be Believed.

London, March 29.—Reports that the Boer supply of ammunition is running low cannot be for one moment relied upon, as they disagree with what everybody knows to be the fact. The Boers prepared for the war years in advance, and not only purchased modern weapons but powder and shot to be used with them. That the immense stocks which they accumulated have been expended in less than six months is too good a story to be true, despite its publication in the Times. Such a tale demands too much from the credulity of the reader. Despatches regarding the condition of affairs at Mafeking must also be accepted with reserve, especially when they are published in the London Daily Mail, which has not distinguished itself for accuracy during the present war. That this journal should be able to obtain information regarding Mafeking only going back two days, while the War Office and General Roberts are about two weeks behind, is in itself suspicious enough to inspire caution. But when it is remembered that no other agency is able to tap the source from which the London Journal draws its information regarding Baden-Powell and the alleged tactics of his men in fighting Boers, suspicion becomes certain that such information has no basis in fact. Mr. Michael Davitt, who is in Pretoria, and is alleged to have been in contact with President Kruger, will perhaps be able to furnish the Boer President with as good a plan of campaign against the British as the one which resulted in the retreat of Paul Kruger, which Mr. Davitt enjoyed in Portland.

THE REPORT NOT TRUE.

Laurier Has Not Been Consulted by Mr. Chamberlain.

Ottawa, Ont., March 29.—There is no truth in the report that Hon. Joseph Chamberlain has been in communication with Premier Laurier in regard to settlement of the South African troubles.

WHAT BRITISH LIBERALS SAY.

London, March 29.—Speaking today at the breakfast of the Liberal agents at Nottingham, Mr. Harbert Gladstone, son of the late statesman, declared that nearly all the Liberals had agreed in regard to the settlement of the South African question that it was the duty of the Government to make a recurrence of the war impossible, and to show the world that British power in South Africa was predominant, and that the British flag must wave over the whole of South Africa.

POSTMASTER GENERAL RESIGNS.

High British Official and Member of the Cabinet Goes to Africa.

London, March 29.—The Duke of Norfolk has resigned the office of Postmaster-General. He is going to South Africa with the Sussex Yeomanry.

SERIOUS LOSS TO THE BOERS.

But Parisian Journals Agree That Kruger is Equal to the Task.

Paris, March 29.—5 a.m.—The Paris press is unanimous in eulogizing Gen. Joubert, whose death is considered a serious loss to the Boers. All the papers agree in thinking that a change in the chief command is bound to have grave consequences for the Boer operations. Many think, however, that President Kruger is fully equal to the task, and that, considering his military reputation, the resignation of the Boer chief is to become more and more doubtful.

THE AIR ALIVE WITH MISSILES!

Chaplain O'Leary's Thrilling Description of the Fight at Paardeberg Which Cost Canada Many Lives.

Ottawa, March 29.—Chaplain O'Leary writes the following interesting letter from Paardeberg to his brother, Mr. J. M. O'Leary, of the P. O. Department:

"My dear Brother—Well, at last we have been in it, and through it, and though our baptism of fire was a costly one, willingly would we go through it again. Canada may well be proud of her noble boys. And, or, that wild, mad charge against an invincible enemy. Never shall I forget it, nor shall I attempt to describe it, at least for the present. Hell let loose would give but a faint idea of it. On, we rushed through a hail of bullets, the air alive again with deadly missiles. On we rushed, madly, wildly tearing through brambles, stumbling over prostrate comrades, eager in the delirium of bloodshed and destruction which seized us all, to reach the enemy's trenches. And above the din of battle, oh, that wild, soul-stirring cheer, or, rather, that savage yell. Like tigers, our brave boys bounded over the open, but it was not to be. Darkness closed on us ere the position was carried and the day won. Darkness settled down on that well-fought field, mercifully casting a veil over its horrors. Then began the search for the dead and wounded. In the total darkness, for the least light drew the enemy's fire, we groped over the ground, everywhere our hands steeped in blood, blood, blood. From all directions faint moans, coupled with pitiful pleadings for water, water, reached our ears. Accidentally one would stumble over a friend. Then what pathetic scenes would take place—a message for home, 'Tell mother, etc., etc.,' or perhaps, 'Don't leave me, it won't be long.'"

"Monday morning we gathered our dead together and buried them, side by side, eighteen in all, in one broad grave, while I performed the last but consoling duty of committing them to the care of God's angels, when we would be far away from this fearful land. May they rest in peace, noble, brave boys."

INTERVIEW WITH KRUGER.

New York, March 29.—An interview with President Kruger, printed in the World today, has attracted a great deal of attention. In one paragraph of the article, which was the property of the South African Republic. It was granted on February 7, at Pretoria, and Secretary Helz was present. The correspondent says:

"Mr. Kruger explained at length the circumstances which led to the outbreak of the war. He said that the Boers had been asked to sell up Delagoa Bay, and then told of the message he sent to Lord Salisbury concerning it. He said he refused to have any more correspondence with Mr. Chamberlain, but frequently called to Lord Salisbury. In one paragraph he asked Lord Salisbury to allow foodstuffs to enter through Delagoa Bay or they would be compelled to feed the 4,000 British prisoners in Pretoria on maize porridge. Lord Salisbury did not reply, but a message signed 'Chamberlain' explained the embargo on food stuffs had been raised three days before. Mr. Kruger here laughed heartily when he told that Mr. Chamberlain's message was telegraphed back to Lord Salisbury with the query, 'Is it true?'"

"The President added: 'We have not heard from Mr. Chamberlain since.'"

MACRUM'S CHARGES FAIL.

An Effort to Conceal a Sensation out of Nothing.

Washington, March 29.—Charles Macrum, the American ex-consul at Pretoria, appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday for examination in connection with his charge that his letters had been opened by the British authorities in South Africa while in transit to Pretoria.

Chairman Hitt presented a letter from Secretary Hay giving in detail the department's view of the case. The letter stated that Macrum had made no representations to his department regarding the opening of the mails, but he (Mr. Hay) had mentioned the matter to the British Ambassador, who made enquiry of the

WOULD THEY FIGHT AGAINST FRANCE?

A Prominent Montrealer Discusses Attitude of Lower Province in the Event of War Between Great Britain and France.

Montreal, March 29.—L.O. David, City Clerk of Montreal, and the most intimate friend of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, writes to the local French papers a letter touching upon the view of French-Canadian relations to France and to England in case war were declared between these two countries. On this point Mr. David says:

"Suppose that war should break out between England and France, and that Sir Wilfrid Laurier should address the English Government in such terms as these: 'Gentlemen, we have done our duty every time that England required it of us; we have shed our blood and emptied our purses to help her triumph over her enemies, but this time the enemy is France, the Mother Country of French-Canadians; will you force them to fight against their own blood, against the flag which personifies all that they have been taught to venerate?'"

"It is conceivable that these wise and patriotic words would not be heard, and that the wisdom of those who should have acquired the right to compel respect for the feelings of their countrymen would not be appreciated."

British Government and was informed that they had no knowledge of such an incident having taken place and that if it had it was contrary to their instructions. Later Mr. Hay got a despatch from Cape Town from Consul-General Stowe, which said that two letters had been opened by the High Commissioner had made a satisfactory apology. A letter was also read from Mr. Stowe touching on the proposal for mediation, from which it appeared that the High Commissioner had said that he could not act in the matter. Mr. Stowe notified Macrum of this, but apparently the request never reached President McKinley.

Secretary Hay closed his note with some remarks on Macrum's desertion of his post. The latter had recommended Attibury as capable of taking charge if he were granted leave, but Mr. Hay had discovered that Attibury was a man of disreputable character. However, as Macrum in his state of mind was useless Mr. Hay finally told him to leave and put Attibury in charge.

The committee will make no report, in fact will do nothing beyond taking the evidence.

COLONEL DUKES OFFICIAL REPORT.

The Mayor of Cape Town Congratulated Members of Canadian Artillery on Their Fine Appearance and Magnificent Physique.

Ottawa, Ont., March 29.—The militia department has received an official report from Lieut.-Col. C. M. Dukes, commanding the brigade division of the Canadian Field Artillery, composing part of the second contingent, detailing the movements of the division from February 17th to 27th.

One of the most interesting items of the report is a copy of a letter received from the Mayor of Cape Town conveying to the officers and men of the R.C.A.A. most hearty greetings.

Part of the letter reads as follows: "The citizens are deeply sensible of the sacrifices which have been made by the Royal Canadian Artillery in journeying to our shores and undertaking the risks of a campaign in order to assist in upholding Her Majesty's authority in this country." The Mayor congratulated the Canadians on their smart appearance and magnificent physique and forwarded a supply of grapes to the men.

BOER GUNS DISCOVERED HIDDEN IN MINE SHAFT

General Clements Made Quite Haul on Wednesday
When He Occupied Faurès Smith.

BRITISH FIND SECURITIES WORTH $2,500,000.

Supposition as to Lord Roberts' Advance From Bloemfontein is the Topic of the Day and is Likely to Continue if the General Conceals His Moves.

London, March 29.—Gen. Roberts is undoubtedly making preparations to cross the Modder river, which runs fifteen miles north of Bloemfontein, and continue his march to Pretoria. In pursuance of this intention on Sunday last he sent three thousand cavalry and three thousand infantry, hoping doubtless to surprise the Boers and seize the railway bridge over the Modder at Glen siding. The Boers were not, however, to be caught napping, for three hours before the British cavalry reached the bridge the structure was practically destroyed by dynamite, thus necessitating a pause for repairs on the part of the British, who must keep the railway in running order behind them in advancing. The fact that General Roberts has sent out such a strong column is another indication that the general advance will not be long postponed, for the seizure of the bridge at Glen siding is one of the preliminary steps. There are several other bridges also to be seized and restored after the British cross the river, for the country between Bloemfontein and Kroonstad, the next objective of Roberts, abounds in streams which intersect the railway. The Boers meanwhile appear to be concentrating their forces for another stand in the Free State, and the British are likewise concentrating for an overpowering, onward sweep. It must not be forgotten that since General Roberts occupied Bloemfontein thousands of British troops have poured into South Africa. A great proportion of these have undoubtedly been diverted to Bloemfontein, though the censor does not allow the news to go forth, so that it is not possible to estimate what the Commander-in-Chief will have fully 70,000 men with which to complete the campaign in the Free State, even if he does not have more owing to the arrival of Generals Gatacre and Clements, who are working their way rapidly towards Bloemfontein, and will arrive there before the advance.

THE SPOTS OF WAR.

British Seize Securities Worth $2,500,000 at Bloemfontein.

Bloemfontein, March 29.—The military authorities have discovered in a Free State Government chest realizable securities worth $2,500,000 ($2,500,000).

BOER GUNS DISCOVERED.

British Force Find Two of them in a Mine Shaft.

London, March 29.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts, dated Bloemfontein, March 28: "General Clements occupied Faurès Smith today without opposition. One nine-pounder and one Maxim were discovered in a prospecting shaft of a mine where a large quantity of ammunition was buried."

"Arms are being surrendered gradually and the inhabitants are settling down."

"Colonel Fletcher visited Ladybrand on March 28. On leaving the town he was attacked by a party of the enemy, and one of his forces was wounded, and five are missing."

"During the skirmish north of the Modder River on March 28 five men were

APRIL 2nd THE DATE.

Critics Say That Roberts will Advance on that Day.

London, March 29.—Supposition as to Lord Roberts' advance from Bloemfontein is the topic of the day and is likely to continue so if the British Commander-in-Chief in South Africa shall conceal his movements as carefully as he has done in the past. April 2nd is set by various critics as the probable date of the departure of the main army from Bloemfontein. The movements of the cavalry force and part of the infantry towards Glen can scarcely be construed as an actual advance, though they undoubtedly point to the imminence of such a step. But only a small part of General Gatacre's force has yet arrived at Bloemfontein, and until that movement shall have been completed it is not likely Lord Roberts will start for Pretoria.

ROBERTS BEGINS TO MOVE.

Portions of His Troops Occupy Positions to the North.

London, March 29.—The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Morning Post, telegraphing Tuesday, says: "The 1st Coldstream and the 2nd Grenadiers are already at Glen. The 4th and 5th Cavalry brigades moved on Sunday. The fourteenth brigade followed to-day." "The three-span bridge at Glen was dynamited three hours before the guards reached it. The necessary repairs will delay a further advance for a time. General Gatacre's forces are now arriving."

The censorship has been relaxed with the return of Lord Kitchener to Lord Roberts' headquarters, and correspondents are now allowed to explain what is going on. Such cases as are supplied are misleading, and are meant to deceive both the enemy north of the capital and newspaper writers in England. The tactics adopted by the censor are those which were successful when Lord Roberts' advance toward Kimberley were under contemplation. Even the War Office does not know what is going on.

Col. De Ville Boer's Marais is about to see Roberts. He has been appointed Commander of the Boer foreign legion on the Free State. Boer accounts affirming the safety of the troops trekking from the south towards Kroonstad received confirmation from the correspondent of the Telegraph in Bloemfontein, who states that Commandant Grobler's force of about 6,000 men has succeeded in eluding the British cavalry.

Last night's Gazette contained the announcement of the appointment of Gen. MacDonald to command the third brigade, with the local rank of major-general, and promotion to the substantive rank of colonel in the army.

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Flourishing Amateur Performance in C. A. A. Hall Last Night.

The presentation of any of the immortal Shakespeare's dramas by amateurs is always considered a very heavy undertaking, but the audience that assembled in the C.A.A. rooms last evening were simply enraptured by the performance of the Merchant of Venice by the members of that society.

The young ladies and gentlemen who covered themselves with glory, were certainly most proud of last evening's success, which was considered by competent critics to be the best amateur production ever seen on a local stage.

Two scenes from the Merchant of Venice were presented. Scene III, "A Public Place in Venice," and the celebrated "Trial Scene." Mr. T. J. Bagley, as Shylock, the Jew, astonished the audience by his remarkably clever delineation of that distinguished character. His denunciation of the merchant was a clever piece of acting, and in the trial scene his portrayal of the character of the Jew was perfection in itself. He is certainly at home on the stage.

Miss Nellie McCabe as Portia covered herself with glory, and her rendition of the plea for mercy showed her to be possessed of extraordinary powers of a high order, and she should make her mark in the line of work, as her acting last evening was perfection in itself.

HIS SEVENTIETH BIRTHDAY.

Judge Weller Waited on Yesterday and Was Congratulated by His Friends.

The members of the local legal fraternity waited on Judge Weller yesterday, on the occasion of his 70th birthday, and extended their hearty congratulations. Mr. Dumble, the spokesman, in expressing the sentiments of those present, said that they congratulated the Judge, not so much, he said, on the fact that he had attained this ripe age, but on the fact that he was possessed of a sound body and sane mind, with every prospect of continuing his honorable duties satisfactorily, as in the past for along term of years. In conclusion he presented the Judge with a pair of velvet pipes, hoping that the salute to be derived from them would be increased by the remembrance that the pipes were the expression of hearty good will from the members of the legal profession.

Judge Weller, in response, said that he was as pleased as surprised at the kindness and thoughtfulness of the gentlemen of the profession, though it was but characteristic of them, and that the relations between himself and the profession had ever been cordial and most kind. He tried to do his duty and realized the importance of his position. He was gratified to know that the people were satisfied with his conduct of affairs. He intended the good will of all, but was especially pleased to have the respect and good will of the members of the profession.

Judge Weller's numerous other friends will join in the congratulations extended to him on this occasion. The Times joins in hearty congratulations.

Needed It in His Speeches.

"I tell you," exclaimed the alien individual, "that water is God's greatest gift to man."

"Are you a prohibitionist?" asked a bystander, taking him cordially by the hand.

"No, sir," was the conspicuous reply. "I sell milk."

London, March 30.—The War Office has issued the following from Lord Roberts:—To the Secretary of War.—Blenheim, March 30, 2.35 p.m.—Owing to the activity of the enemy on our immediate front and their hostile action towards the burghers who surrendered under the terms of my proclamation, I found it necessary to drive them from some kopjes they had occupied near the Kamek River station, a few miles south of Brandfort. The operation was successfully carried out by the Seventh, Tucker's division, assisted by the first and third cavalry brigades under French and Legat's regiment of mounted infantry. The enemy retired to Brandfort and our troops now hold the kopjes. Our casualties were:—Killed, Capt. Goring; wounded, Capt. Sellar, Lt. Col. Peble, Curgenon and Edwards, Lieut. REPLIES TO THE FRONT.
The Second Canadian Contingent to Proceed to Bloemfontein.

Ottawa, March 30.—"Cape Town, March 29.—Holland, Ottawa, Bloemfontein." This cipher cable was received last night by Mr. Andrew Holland from his son Edna, who sailed on the Milwaukee, on the 1st inst., with the second contingent of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, accompanied by a private code, arranged before his departure from Ottawa. It means:—"We are ordered to join Roberts' forces at Bloemfontein immediately. Ottawa boys well."

DELAGOA BAY AWARD NOT SATISFACTORY. Britain Gets the Worst of it and Result and Delay Deal a Blow at the Principle of Arbitration.

Berne, Switzerland, March 30.—The following is the text of the decision in the Delagoa Bay Railroad award:

1. The Portuguese Government, as the deciding party, is condemned to pay to the Government of the United States, and to Great Britain, the claimants together, in addition to the $28,000 paid on account in 1890 the sum of 15,311,000 francs in legal tender money, with simple interest on this sum at the rate of five per cent. per annum from June 15, 1890, up to the date of payment of said sum.

2. This sum, after deducting what is necessary to defray the cost of arbitration falling on the claimants and in addition to the balance of $28,000 paid on account in 1890, shall be employed in the payment of bondholders and other creditors, if there is need, of the Delagoa Bay Railway Company, according to their standing. The claimants will draw up a scale of distribution for this purpose. The Portuguese Government will have to pay into the hands of the Government of the United States, the sum which, according to said scale, shall accrue to McMurdo, represented by said Government in its quality of bondholding creditor of the first and second degree. It will pay the surplus to the Government of Great Britain for the benefit of all others having rights.

3. The delay of six months fixed by the terms of the arbitration, according to a note to be drawn up in accordance with clause 5 of the arbitration compromise, will be borne in equal parts by the three parties to the suit, that is to say, a third part by each of them.

5. The conclusions of the parties in so far as they differ from the above award are not valid.

The award is unanimous.

The Award Condemned.
A majority of the London papers are dissatisfied over the Delagoa Bay award, and some of them are indignant. The Times, Daily Chronicle, and Morning Leader, indeed, think the award reasonable, but the others hold that the arbitrated parties are justified in complaining that their wrongs have been most inadequately redressed.

The Standard says that the award deals a blow at the principle of international arbitration, which, so admirable in theory, is often so unsatisfactory in practice.

The Daily News declares that the award is as surprising as the uncomprehensible time taken to arrive at a decision.

The Daily Telegraph says the award is not generous. Compounded, instead of simple interest, should have been granted.

The Daily Graphic declares that the division of the cost of the arbitration is clearly unfair.

The Daily Mail holds that there is not the smallest trace of equity in the decision.

Editorials in several of the papers, including the Times, dwell bitterly on the Transvaal's action in the matter, declaring that it was part of the anti-British scheme which, they contend, began a long time before Jameson's raid.

Some of the papers express the hope that Great Britain will utilize the situation to acquire Delagoa Bay. They assure Portugal of British readiness to lend her the money to pay the award.

Representative of the South African Republic, Dr. Leyds, will find themselves face to face. Contrary to what was stated long ago, Sir Edmund Monson will not be away from Paris either by order, or proprio motu, but will accept M. Delcasse's hospitality, and, as already stated, Dr. Leyds has just arrived here with the same intention.

The difference, however, is that Sir Edmund Monson, who will spend almost all his time here during the exhibition, has before him the prospect of numerous official dinners, which he will attend as Her Majesty's Ambassador, whereas Dr. Leyds will appear on Saturday for almost the last, if not absolutely the last, time as a diplomatic representative, in any such capacity, for several reasons. In the first place, it is affirmed that the mission of the South African Republic, now on the way to Europe, is the bearer of a notification to him relieving him of his functions; and, secondly, even if this information is without foundation, everything goes to show that by the force of things and as a logical conclusion of present events these functions must shortly cease to have any raison d'être.

The Boers have now discovered that Dr. Leyds' reports, which induced them to believe that the powers were ready to intervene promptly and energetically in their favor, were the purest fiction.

THE RIDE OF FRENCH.

Correspondent Tells a Thrilling Story of a Great Event.

London, March 29.—For the first Great Britain has learned the dramatic details that marked the ride of General French into Kimberley. The correspondent of the London Times described it as follows:—"From Modder River, from Rensburg and from De Aar the cavalry, mounted infantry and Horse Artillery came in long lines, silently concentrating at Gras Pan and Honeycomb, Klouf. On Monday the march began, Ramdam, 8 miles to the south, was soon passed, and a sharp climb secured de Kie's drift, on the Riet. After a halt of a day the column moved on.

PRIVATE CORLEY'S WOUND.

It was inflicted while he was Aiding Another Wounded Man.

Mount Forest, March 29.—A letter was received last night by Mr. John Corley from his son, Pte. James H. Corley, of the 1st Co., Royal Canadian Regiment, who was wounded in the battle of Paardeburg on Feb. 18 last. The letter was dated from Newmarket, Cape Colony, Feb. 28—"We got into action," he says, "about 8 o'clock in the morning, and then Canada did her duty nobly. I got along all right until about three o'clock, and then I got a little too far up. A poor fellow in a Co. was yelling for a stretcher bearer. I forgot about the bullets, so called my companion, and off he went to him in the firing line. We had just reached him and opened the stretcher when a volley came whizzing and turned me head over heels. I thought I had seen my finish, but I only got a laceration in the wrist. It came out below the elbow, grazing the bone. I lay there from half-past three till dark." The letter was written with the left hand and the writer concludes by telling about the trip from the battlefield to the hospital.

FUNERAL OF DR. KING.

AN IMMENSE CORTAGE FOLLOWS REMAINS TO THE GRAVE.

The Floral Offerings the Most Magnificent Ever Seen in Peterborough—A Good and Noble Citizen Laid to Rest.

Honored in death as in life was the late Dr. Richard King, whose funeral was held yesterday afternoon. Hundreds of people from town and surrounding district, including nearly all the members of the medical profession of Peterborough and vicinity, and a large representation of fraternal friends and brethren from the Foresters and Workmen attended. During Wednesday, Thursday and Friday morning hundreds visited the family home to tender their sympathy with the bereaved family, and give for the last time on the face of the one whom they regarded so highly in life, now cold in death. Religious service, for the family and immediate friends, was conducted in the home by Rev. Archdeacon Allen, of Millbrook. The funeral cortege was one of the largest and most imposing ever seen in Peterborough, while the streets in the vicinity were thronged with hundreds. At the chapel in the cemetery Rev. H. Symonds and Rev. J. O. Davidson conducted the beautiful service of the Church of England, while Rev. Archdeacon Allen read the burial service at the grave.

THE FLORAL OFFERINGS.

The floral offerings were the most magnificent ever seen in Peterborough, showing not only the high esteem in which Dr. King was held, but also the affection which was entertained for him by the entire community. They were as follows:—
Mrs. King, an anchor.
Horse and daughter, pillow, with word "Father," in flowers.
Miss Nicholls and Miss Geraldine's school class, anchor of lilies and stocks.
Mr. J. J. McEwan, bouquet of white roses.
Mrs. T. G. Hazlett, anchor of white roses.
Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Mitchell, bouquet of white roses.
Miss Barrett, bouquet of white roses and stocks.
Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Pitt, wreath of white roses.
Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Craft, cross of white roses and stocks.
Mrs. Andrew McNeil, anchor of primroses and roses.
Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Stenson, bouquet of roses.
Mr. A. H. Peck and Miss Peck, bouquet of roses.
Miss Dickson, cross of roses and carnations and stocks.
Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Stevens, Lindsay, star of roses and carnations and stocks.
Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Quinn, Care, Michigan, cross of roses, carnations and stocks.
Mr. and Mrs. Munroe, bouquet of roses and lilies.
Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Robertson, anchor of roses, lilies and carnations.
Mrs. Wm. Davidson and Mr. Roger Davidson, wreath of roses and carnations.
Peterborough Lacrosse Club, wreath with bar across centre, roses, lilies and carnations.
Mr. Peter Hamilton, wreath of roses.
Mrs. and Mrs. H. Burritt, cross of roses and lilies.
Peterborough Baseball Club, cross of roses, carnations and lilies.
Peterborough Hockey Club, basket of roses, lilies and carnations.
G.O.O.F., pillow of lilies, carnations and roses.
Mrs. Archer, bouquet of carnations.
Messrs. J. A. Robertson, W. B. Little, W. A. Buchanan, G. Flavelle, H. Gardiner and T. B. Bunting, Toronto, a wreath of roses, lilies and carnations.
Medical staff Nicholas Hospital, wreath of roses, carnations and stocks.
Mrs. O. W. Rubidge, bouquet of lilies and stocks.
Mr. and Mrs. J. Young, Toronto, bouquet of lilies, tulips, carnations and roses.
Miss James, Toronto, bouquet of roses, carnations and lilies.
Medical staff of St. Joseph's Hospital, wreath of roses, lilies, carnations and primula.
Mr. and Mrs. M. Ostrom, cycle of roses and carnations.
Miss Davies, bouquet of stocks, carnations and roses.
Nurses and graduates of Nicholas Hospital, basket of lilies, roses and carnations.
Miss Bryson, anchor of roses, stocks, lilies and Lilly of the Valley.
Dr. Frank Butler, Montreal, lilies, roses, hyacinths, violets and carnations.
As the funeral cortege passed through the streets to the cemetery hundreds bared their heads in silent sympathy, while many a tear was visible. Expressions of the deepest sympathy and regret were exchanged on all sides at the demise of one who was so useful and so good. By the death of Dr. King Peterborough loses a gentleman who will long be remembered as a noble, self-sacrificing and lovable gentleman, whose only ambition was to relieve suffering and sickness wherever he found it, and who was never known to turn away from any one in need. That Dr. King is sure of a blessed hereafter, there can be no doubt, for charity, which "covereth a multitude of sins," was his grandest virtue.

When He Occupied Fauresmith.

BRITISH FIND SECURITIES WORTH $2,500,000.

Supposition as to Lord Roberts' Advance From Bloemfontein is the Topic of the Day and is Likely to Continue if the General Conceals His Moves.

London, March 29.—Gen. Roberts is undoubtedly making preparations to cross the Modder river, which runs fifteen miles north of Bloemfontein, and continue his march to Pretoria. In pursuance of this intention on Sunday last he sent three thousand cavalry and three thousand infantry, hoping doubtless to surprise the Boers and seize the railway bridge over the Modder at Glen siding. The Boers were not, however, to be caught napping. The bridge structure was practically destroyed by dynamite, thus necessitating a pause for repairs on the part of the British, who must keep the railway in running order behind them as they advance. The fact that General Roberts has sent out such a strong column is another indication that the general advance will not be long postponed. For the seizure of the bridge at Glen siding is one of the preliminary steps. There are several other bridges also to be seized and restored after the British cross the river, for the country between Bloemfontein and Kroonstad, the next objective of Roberts, abounds in streams which intersect the railway. The Boers meanwhile appear to be concentrating their forces for another stand in the Free State, and the British are likewise concentrating for an overpowering, onward sweep. It must not be forgotten that since General Roberts occupied Bloemfontein thousands of British troops have poured into South Africa. A great proportion of these have undoubtedly been diverted to Bloemfontein, though the censor does not allow the news to go forth, so that it is not unsafe to estimate that the Commander-in-Chief will have fully 70,000 men with which to complete the campaign in the Free State, even if he does not have more owing to the arrivals of Generals Gatacre and Clements, who are working their way rapidly towards Bloemfontein, and will arrive there before the advance.

THE SPOILS OF WAR.

British Seize Securities Worth $2,500,000 at Bloemfontein.

Bloemfontein, March 28.—The military authorities have discovered in a Free State Government chest realizable securities worth $2,500,000 ($2,500,000).

BOER GUNS DISCOVERED.

British Forces Find Two of them in a Mine Shaft.

London, March 28.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts, dated Bloemfontein, March 28: "General Clements occupied Fauresmith to-day without opposition. One nine-pounder and one Maxim machine were discovered in a prospecting shaft of a mine where a large quantity of ammunition was buried.

"Arms are being surrendered gradually and the inhabitants are settling down.

"Colonel Fitcher visited Ladybrand on March 26. On leaving the town he was attacked by a party of the enemy, and one of his forces was wounded, and five are missing.

"During the skirmish north of the Modder River on March 25 five men were wounded. Three are reported to be missing. Captain McKinnon-Stanley, of the Nineteenth Lancers, and five men of that regiment were taken prisoners."

APRIL 2nd THE DATE.

Critics Say That Roberts will Advance on that Day.

London, March 28.—Supposition as to Lord Roberts' advance from Bloemfontein is the topic of the day and is likely to continue so if the British Commander-in-Chief in South Africa shall conceal his movements as carefully as he has done in the past. April 2nd is set by various critics as the probable date of the departure of the main army from Bloemfontein. The movements of the cavalry forces and part of the infantry towards Glen are scarcely to be construed as an actual advance, though they undoubtedly point to the imminence of such a step. But only a small part of General Gatacre's force has yet arrived at Bloemfontein, and until that movement shall have been completed it is not likely Lord Roberts will start for Pretoria.

ROBERTS BEGINS TO MOVE.

Portions of His Troops Occupy Positions to the North.

London, March 28.—The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Morning Post, telegraphing Tuesday, says: "The 1st Coburgians and the 3rd Grenadiers are already at Glen. The Gordons and the cavalry brigade moved Sunday. The fourteenth brigade followed to-day. The three-span bridge at Glen was dynamited three hours before the guards reached it. The necessary repairs will delay a further advance for a time. General Gatacre's forces are now arriving."

The censorship has been revived with the return of Lord Kitchener to Lord Roberts' headquarters, and correspondents are not allowed to explain what is going on. Such cues as are supplied are misleading, and are meant to deceive both the enemy north of the capital and newspaper writers in England. The tactics adopted by the censor are those which were successful when Lord Roberts' advance toward Kimberley were under contemplation. Even the War Office does not know what is going on.

Col. De Ville Bois Mareuil is about to see Roberts. He has been appointed Commander of the Boer foreign legion on the Free State. Boer accounts affirming the safety of the troops trekking from the south towards Kroonstad received confirmation from the correspondent of the Telegraph in Bloemfontein, who states that Commandant Grobler's force of about 6,000 men has succeeded in ending the British cavalry.

Last night's Gazette contained the announcement of the appointment of Gen. Macdonald to command the third brigade, with the local rank of major-general, and promotion to the substantive rank of colonel in the army.

HE WASHED DISHES.

The Hard Job One Boy Had All the Way to Europe.

The girls who have complained in various keys because they had dishes to wash may be glad to hear of a young man who can look at the matter through their eyes, perhaps more so. He had shipped as "boy" on a cattle steamer for Europe because he wanted to save as much as possible on his transportation, and—but the rest of the story sounds better in his own words:

"About 4:30 in the morning I was awakened and told to go to work. I hastily dressed, for the first and last time on board, for during the rest of the voyage I took care not to undress. It seemed scarcely worth while. I arrived on deck and found the steward waiting for me. He showed me into the pantry, introduced me to 'Pan' and told me that my chief duty during the voyage would be to wash dishes.

"There was already a large pile of dirty dishes waiting to be washed, and I rolled up my sleeves, sized the hot water and began to work. I had these almost done when another and larger lot was brought in from the dining room. This proved to be the daily programme. I no sooner had one pile washed than others were brought in, and I was never done. I don't think I ever saw so many dishes before in my life, and I hope I never shall again. There were 60 passengers aboard besides the cattlemen, and six meals were served each day. From the dishes that came out to be washed, I think that each passenger must have used at least six plates at a meal."

Destroying the Point.

Every one knows the man who is notorious for so telling a story as to destroy its point. An English nobleman, Lord P., was noted for his success in this ruining the prosperity of a story. The author of "Collections and Recollections" exhibits a specimen of his lordship's peculiar art.

Thirty years ago two large houses were built at Albert Gate, London, the site and cost of which seemed likely to prohibit tenants from hiring them. A wag christened them "Malta" and Gibraltar because they can never be taken.

Lord P. thought this an excellent joke and ran round the town, saying to every friend he met:

"I say, do you know what they call these houses at Albert Gate? They call them Malta and Gibraltar because they can never let them. Isn't it awfully good?"

Some one told Lord P. the old riddle, "Why was the elephant the last animal to get into the ark?" to which the answer is, "Because he had to pack his trunk."

Lord P. asked the riddle of the next friend he met and gave as the answer, "Because he had to pack his portmanteau."

A Scotch Schoolboy. The following appears in a Glasgow paper. It would be interesting to know whether it has led to business. If so, the supply of grand pianos in Scotland must be considerably in excess of the demand.

A QUEER EXPLOSION.

NOW A MOUNTAIN LOCOMOTIVE CAME TO AN UNTIMELY END.

There Was Neither Fire in Her Furnace Nor Water in Her Boiler, and Yet She Managed to Blow Up in the Most Approved Style.

Mr. Henry Alquist, a prominent railroad man, relates the story of a curious wreck, the facts in which he will vouch for.

"It is such a remarkable thing," said Mr. Alquist to a reporter, "that I fear many will be inclined to brand it as 'pipe.' I have been railroaded now for over 20 years, and never in all my varied experience have I seen such a unique and complete wreck as the one I speak of—that of engine 1,120 of the Rio Grande Western. Railroad men will tell you that locomotives seldom explode nowadays, but 1,120 did and in a very peculiar way.

"At the time this wreck occurred I was holding down the job of train dispatcher at Soldier Summit, Utah, and a tough old job it was. Never been there, I suppose? Well, Soldier Summit is a station on the top of one of the Wasatch divides, a bleak and lonely place, where the Rio Grande Western has a roundhouse and coal chute located. At the summit are long snowbanks covering the tracks. These sheds protect the line from the winter. And it is only due to this method that a train ever gets over the mountain.

"On both sides of the mountain the line winds down in a succession of winding curves to leave the grade. Running off from the railway are switchbacks, which, diverging from the grade, run up into the hills and gradually come to a dead level. These switchbacks, as they are called, are so constructed that they can be thrown from any point on the grade. And if a train breaks in two while ascending the steep grade the runaway cars can be switched on to one of these spurs, where the breakaway finally stops after it has run up the spur as far as the momentum attained in its descent will take it.

"All heavy trains have an extra locomotive before the grade is reached. These are called helper engines and are kept in roundhouses at each side of the mountain with steam up.

"One night I got word from Clear Creek, a town in the western valley, that the 9:30 freight would be 20 minutes late on account of having to pull out a crippled engine, 1,120. She had burned out her fires and had to be hauled to Grand Junction for repairs.

"That night about 10 o'clock, after I had passed down the Salt Lake express, I heard the freight coughing up the long grade from Clear Creek. There was a snowstorm raging, and the wind howled around the station like the mischief. When the overcast 9:30 pulled into the shelter of the big snowbanks on the wind swept summit, the first thing I asked was, 'Where's the dead engine?'

"'Behind the doghouse!' shouted the 'ten.' But as I held my lamp above my head I failed to see it. I was just about to call his attention to it when, during a lull in the storm, we plainly heard the familiar rattle of the rails as the runaway engine flew at lightning speed down the mountain. No. 1,120 had broken loose and was tearing down the grade to destruction.

"I jumped and pulled the lever which opened the spur switches. This I knew would prevent a smashup, as the engine would run up on the switchback and come to a stop. But I was too late. Almost at the same instant I threw the lever a terrific explosion was heard from far down the mountain. The runaway had exploded."

"I thought you said a moment ago, Mr. Alquist, interrupted the Scripps man, 'that the locomotive was a dead one? If she had no fire under her boiler, how could she explode?'

"That was the only thing I couldn't understand myself," the railroad man replied. "I could easily see how the dead engine could break loose on that grade, and I could understand not hearing its descent during such a howling blizzard, but the explosion scared me. The only theory which in any way solved the mystery was that the old boiler was blown up by compressed air."

"You see, when the engine broke loose from the freight and started down the mountain the pistons in the cylinders began to act as air compressors. During the rough trip up the throttle probably jarred open, and as the speed increased with every revolution of her drivers her boiler was filled with compressed air. It was not long before these flying pistons had worked up a pressure of nearly 500 pounds to the square inch, which came in faster than it could escape by the safety valve, and before the old machine reached Clear Creek her boiler let go."

Wanted to See the President. The Washington Star says that a big, gawky country lad went to the White House the other day just as the president had gone out for a morning stroll.

"I want to see the president," he announced to the first man he met.

"Well, there goes the president now," said the man addressed, pointing to the president's retreating form.

"Burr my time!" the young man ejaculated. "He walks just like any other man," and the fellow struck out so that he could get close enough to see the president well.

DAYS OF CAVALRY OVER

LITTLE USE FOR MOUNTED MEN IN MODERN MILITARY OPERATIONS.

War on land as on sea, becomes less picturesque as it becomes more businesslike and deadly.

Under the new conditions of war, and above all in such a war as at present, the old heroic function of cavalry is at an end, and the great charges, which have been the most thrilling and splendid episodes of battles in the past, may never again be seen, says a London paper. War on land, as on sea, becomes less picturesque as it becomes more businesslike and deadly. The use of cavalry against infantry remains itself simply into a question of time. At Halkett, I think, the charge of the 660, from the moment the word was given until all that was left of them reappeared out of the smoke, occupied scarcely five minutes. In that interval of time, with modern weapons, cavalry would be utterly annihilated.

Even in the brilliant and terrible scene at Sedan, Gen. De Gallier led his squadrons in their splendid uniforms, only to be annihilated by the Prussian force. The most desperate efforts were utterly in vain, and no one who remembers that scene can believe that any cavalry charge could live against the fire of modern rifles and artillery under any circumstances. Unless they could spring out of the ground upon infantry they would melt away before the magazine rifle long before they could approach close quarters.

Assaults by the bayonet are abolished by the same conditions of course, any general who brought cavalry within a mile of a trench ought to be shot. To the British army the diminished importance of cavalry in battle is not a loss, but a gain. Our cavalry was wrecked in the peninsula and has been generally inferior to the French—though it is one of our characteristic opinions that a Frenchman cannot ride. The old role of cavalry may still be maintained in pursuit, although on that point the unhappy experience of the Eighteenth Hussars when their squadron was captured after Glencoe is not reassuring.

In reconnaissance, on the other hand, the work of cavalry is much more important than ever, and, at the same time, more difficult. An enemy who cannot be approached within anything much under two miles cannot be precisely located, and yet it is absolutely necessary that his general position should be discovered. It would be hard to say whether there is more risk in gaining such vague and partial information or in acting upon it.

AMERICA'S RICHEST CHURCH.

Old Trinity in New York Has an Income of $200,000 Yearly.

Trinity Church, New York, is the wealthiest church in America. The original church was opened for worship in 1697. This early church was maintained by the income from the "church farm," a royal grant from Queen Anne. Out of this income Rev. William W. Dix, first rector of Trinity Church, received a yearly salary of $4,100. To-day that same "church farm" is valued at from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000, and its possession makes Trinity the wealthiest single church corporation in the United States. Out of its annual income of over $200,000 Rev. Morgan Dix receives a salary of $25,000. This salary is more than double that of Bishop Potter of the diocese of New York, who receives but $12,500.

The rental of the "church farm" property constitutes the main source of Trinity's income. The property is scattered widely throughout the city. Much of it, however, lies in the near vicinity of the church. It is rented for various purposes—for public buildings, stores and tenements.

Among the considerable drains on the Trinity income are the expenses of the church proper and the support of the chaplain. Twenty-five thousand dollars go, as above stated, for the salary of Rev. Mr. Dix. Assisting Mr. Dix in the work of the church and the chapel are 15 vicars and 14 curates and they receive each from $5,000 to $10,000. The sexton of the church and the several chaplains receive $15,000 and each one is furnished with a deputy and an assistant.

The music of the church cost much. The many choir boys receive each one, from $24 to $100 yearly. The salaries of which there are 15, receive from $200 to $400. For the church itself there is a yearly musical appropriation of $10,000; for each one of the seven chapels, $7,500, making a total of over $200,000. The maintenance of excellent music in churches in right and admirable is conceded. "The church has ever held music to be a sustaining influence on the hearts of the faithful, and to all the faithful. A good voice is carried on by fidelity in the matter of its schools. For the maintenance of parochial schools the vestry yearly appropriates the sum of $22,000; for the maintenance of night and industrial schools, $6,000.

Trinity Hospital for the sick poor is maintained by the corporation at a yearly expense of $20,000. The corporation also makes provision of $1,000 for the support of seven beds in other hospitals. From the corporation income a yearly contribution of $100,000 to the poor of $2,000,000. The whole yearly cost of the maintenance of charities within the parish, which are supported out of the corporation income, averages $200,000; for charities without the parish, $50,000—a total of $250,000.

War, War, and Rumors of War.

The universe seems to be in the throes of battle as if from foreign climes comes the rattle of musketry, the clash of swords, the shout of victory and the cry of the wounded. The Blue and the Gray, our country knows the meaning of these words; nobly fought for the cause each thought was right and now united in a common cause. In Paul Dresser's new song, "The Blue and the Gray," our thoughts turn back to '61 and '65, but the song tells in this famous author's best view of the mother whose three sons gave up their lives to rid their country's name. From since his famous "On the Banks of the Wabash" has any song story created such a furor among music lovers. "The Wabash" was heard from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The "Blue and the Gray" will be sung wherever the English language is used. Published by Hawley, Haviland & Co., New York and Chicago.

DEADLY SNAKES.

Various Signs by Which Their Character May Be Recognized.

To distinguish between venomous and harmless snakes is easy in practice, but it is difficult to explain in words alone, as there is one external characteristic which distinguishes them. It is rather a peculiar, varying union of many separate marks that brands the dangerous reptile.

Generally speaking, all snakes may be divided into two great classes—those which have the head covered with numerous small scales, and those which have it covered with large, regularly set plates. Leaving out the alpine and the poisonous sea snakes, with which the hunter will have nothing to do, all snakes with small head scales move about by night and those with the large plates on the head by day. This may be known by their eyes, for the first have vertical pupils like the cat's, while those of the latter are generally circular in form. The long, active day snake, gliding about from bush to bush or hurriedly taking refuge beneath some protruding rock or tree stump, is harmless. Even should he be coiled in the sunshine he will flee from approaching danger. But a serpent nicely coiled in some secluded nook which instead of fleeing gathers himself closer together is most probably dangerous, particularly if he be more or less marked with a suggestion of irregular crossbars or whitish or dirty yellow and darker brown or blackish. This is the characteristic coloring of our most dangerous snakes, the rattler, the copperhead and the moccasin.

The following points embrace all the peculiarities of our American vipers, and the last two are especially noteworthy as the crowning proofs of venom:

- (1) Moving about at dusk or by night, generally on the ground, and very rarely ascending trees or bushes.
- (2) Seldom flying in alarm, but rather coiling for defense.
- (3) Colors generally subdued in tint with a suggestion of irregular crossbars of lighter and darker shades.
- (4) Tail short, body stout, neck thin, head flat and very broad, especially behind.
- (5) Scales broad, i. e., each scale has a ridge down the middle, which gives the skin a rough appearance like a rasp.
- (6) Head covered with small scales, sometimes larger over the eyes or nose.
- (7) Eyes with vertical pupils like a cat's.
- (8) Two pits or holes between the eyes and nose, suggesting fangs.
- (9) Two long, curved, perforated fangs in the upper jaw just in front of the eye, one on either side, or so shaped that they lie backward, hidden from view in a membranous sheath, but erectable at will.
- (10) Some of the first seven peculiarities may be found in harmless snakes, but it is only in the vipers that they are united.

—Outing.

How the "Gutter" Thinks.

There is a jolly mother in Brooklyn who has several grown up sons boarding at home with her, and they declare she wants to "boon" them all the time, just as if they were children. She laughingly repudiates their charge and declares that she merely wishes to advise an acquaintance that her boys are grown up. Her motherly love is not so much as it once was. Here is an example of the way she "gutters" them: At dinner the other night a big meat pie and a small roast duck were brought on together. The duck was intended for the father principally. The boys were death on duck, their mother well knew, but it would not make a mouthful apiece for them; so, addressing the boy who sat nearest her, she said, "Which will you have, Bobbie, duck or pie?" and at once began cutting the pie.

"Duck!" said Bobbie promptly. "No, Bobbie," answered his mother cheerfully, "you can't have duck, dear. Take your choice, my son, take your choice, but you can't have duck!"—New York Tribune.

New Zealand Oddities.

The crow in New Zealand strikes as sweet a note as any heard in the world, says Henry D. Lloyd in The Atlantic. The robin has no song and no red breast; the active bee is the greatest rat killer; there is a caterpillar which turns into a plant. These and some other productions of nature have done for New Zealand what kangaroos and emu have done for Australia. Rabbits and swine have been introduced for pleasure, spread like wildfire, and it is an attraction to be duly advertised in the sale of land that it has been cleared of swinebrier and fenced against rabbits, and then later the rabbit becomes a profit instead of a pest and is exported by millions to feed the English.

Let me call attention to one of the most universally popular mistakes that have to do with photography—that of changing supposedly excellent work into professional and using the term amateur to convey the idea of immature production and to excuse a tremendously poor photograph. As a matter of fact nearly all the greatest work in being and has always been done by those who are not merely for financial reasons. As the same implies, an amateur is one who works for love, and viewed in this light the best work of the popular class is in reality amateur. —Alfred Stieglitz in Scribner's.

Minnesota's First Book. The Rev. A. W. Dickenson, a agent for the American Bible society, says that the first book printed in Minnesota was a Bible. It was printed in 1838, about 12 years before the first issue of a newspaper in St. Paul. The Bible was in the Ojibwa language and was printed on the mission press at Lake Pepigon, Pine county, under the supervision of Rev. Mr. Ayer, who likewise had charge of the mission farm at that point.

THE ROMANCE OF JASON HALEY

BY H. L. MARSHNER.

It may have been the fresh crispness of the morning air, or possibly the misty tinkle of the cove in the thin milk bucket had something to do with it, but Jason Haley was undoubtedly happy.

As his hard brown feet, innocent of brogans, trod the well-worn path leading to the pasture, he whistled blithely and with enthusiasm, a never-failing indication of happiness in a country-raised youth of 23.

The wild roses pushed their flushed little faces through the tangle of blackberry briars along the lane, and the bluebirds and "chickadees" whistled cheerily as if in attempt to outdo their human competitor.

Reaching the barn, Jason sent an echoing call across the level field—"How cow! So-so cow!"

The cows, grazing in a far corner of the pasture, wandered toward him with occasional expectant and half-suppressed moans.

Jason squatted beside the old milky cow and had begun to milk her when a sound behind him caused him to spring to his feet, his stiff red hair upright and his eyes projecting.

"Oh, won't you please help me?" Upon the tall fence, her dress securely held by malicious briars, swayed a young woman.

Her arms were filled with goldenrod, and upon her face struggled various emotions.

"Yes'm!" responded Jason with alacrity.

He reached the fence barely in time to catch the young woman in his arms as she lost her balance, the spray of goldenrod falling upon his head in a yellow shower.

Jason had seen many women, at meetings, and at the homes of neighbors, but he mentally decided that none of them, not even Emily Morrison—could approach this young woman, who, flushed and laughing, was engaged in gathering up her goldenrod.

Her brown hair was blown about her face, and her eyes—

Jason turned frantically away from those brown eyes and groped blindly for his bucket.

"Oh, I'm keeping you from your work!" exclaimed the young woman repentantly. "It was so kind of you to help me. If you ever come to town you must call on us at the hotel. I'm Miss Ewing."

"She vanished down the lane, casting a smile over her shoulder which caused Jason to overturn his half-filled bucket. When Jason reached the house with his foaming buckets his mother's voice reached him.

"May-son! O-o-oh! Jay-son!" "Land sakes, boy," she commented, snatching the buckets, "why'n't you take all day. There's company in the parlor."

"Company!" Jason's heart stood still. "She's Miss Ewing from town," continued Mrs. Haley in a stage whisper. "Pot at a bench!"

With one wild desperate leap Jason reached the ladder leading to his room above, where he threw himself upon the shuck mattress in an agony of embarrassment.

At last he aroused himself from his feverish reverie and hurriedly began to clothe himself in his plain brown Sunday suit, adding a pair of painfully new shoes and a maroon tie. A tangle of gorgeous damask drooped artistically from his upper pocket and his red hair was brushed into two fearful twists above his ears.

When Mrs. Haley's voice, raised in tones of protest, reached him Jason slowly descended the ladder and appeared in the kitchen, his face stern with embarrassment.

Miss Ewing was seated at the table. "Miss Ewing," said the old woman, dragging the unwilling Jason forward, "this here's Jason, my boy. He's th' livin' image of his paw, him as I was telling you 'bout."

"Jason," where's your manners, boy? Shake hands with Miss Ewing!" Jason complied and sat limply into a chair opposite the fair guest.

The plum colored coat persisted in hanging up in the back and the arms thereof were far too short. Jason was acutely conscious that the maroon tie was slowly rising over his celluloid collar.

Before the meal was half over, however, the charm of the city trained girl broke the ice of country embarrassment and soon the trio were laughing and chatting like old friends.

Jason was in heaven. As he gazed across the table at the merry face of the guest, however, a sudden thought came to him.

"Suppose he should have such a girl across the table from him at every meal!" It was too much. The thought came as Jason was taking a gulp of milk and was productive of a gasp which rang far and wide over the table.

It was accompanied by a cough which would have done credit to one of Jason's prized horses.

"Why, Jason!" exclaimed the mother reproachfully, "you shouldn't eat the food. What'll Miss Ewing think?"

She arose and thumped Jason upon his broad back with motherly energy.

The visitor with rare presence of mind arose and hurriedly began to clear up the table.

"Why bless your poor heart!" exclaimed Mrs. Haley in delight. "You ain't a-go' to do nothin' uv th' kind. Let Jason Right years ago I was taken sick with typhoid fever, after which I had pleurisy, with water in my side, and a bad cough—raising blood. This left me helpless, so that I could not work for two years. My case seemed to puzzle the best physicians. I became somewhat better, so that I could do some light work, but last winter I was taken with a severe attack of grip which left me unfit for work again. On the 5th of May, 1899, I began taking OUR NATIVE HERBS and in a fortnight I felt better. After taking it one month, my cough and blood raising stopped, altogether. Now, I am able to do my own work and my recovery is due entirely to OUR NATIVE HERBS.

take you out to see th' homes an' th' little pigs."

"Oh, I do love little pigs!" declared Miss Ewing. "I had one once, a little pink one."

"There's three pink ones," blurted Jason. "But th' pen's a little dirty."

"I don't mind," declared the visitor. "Can you lend me a sunbonnet, Mrs. Haley?"

As Jason proudly indicated the squirming mass of young pigs, the visitor clasped her hands in delight.

"Oh, the dear little things," she said. "You kin have one," said Jason. "Take 'em all!"

"Thank you, Mr. Haley. It's as good of you as can be, but I couldn't keep it at the hotel, you know."

Leaving the pen Jason and his fair charge wandered over the entire farm, the future owner thereof pointing out the various spots of interest.

Even the light shoes were forgotten and the maroon tie crawled unlooked for or the rim of the collar.

"Now, Miss Ewing," said Jason, beaming with pride, as they stood upon the crest of a little hill, "this is th' prettiest sight in th' country."

"Them purple beech woods' Henderson's wood, and thers th' river across thers—see it? An' down thers th' meadow's the turnip."

Miss Ewing held her breath in genuine delight.

"Oh," she exclaimed, "it's beautiful. You don't know, Mr. Haley, how it feels to be in the country. Only city people can understand how sweet and pure and beautiful it all is. I'd give anything if I could live in the country always, with just such a scene before me."

"You kin!" exclaimed Jason, hoarsely.

"It's yours if you want it. Take th' whole place—th' farm, an' th' homes an' th' pigs, an' me!"

"Look here!" interrupted Miss Ewing. "do you see that cloud of dust? It must be Mr. Hammond driving out for me. He was to come at noon. You see, we are to be married in September. Let's hurry to the house."

At the stable Jason stopped abruptly. "Good-by," he said. "I got to go feed th' horses. I hope you an' Mr. Whitehead-come'll be—"

The remainder was heard only by the horses.

Presently from his post in the loft Jason heard the sound of wheels and the murmur of voices.

"Good-by, Mrs. Haley."

"Good-by, Miss Ewing, come ag'in. I don't know what ails Jason. He ought to be here to say good-by. He ain't never acted this way before."

The whirling of wheels and the clatter of the huge gate died away and Jason began to throw down hay to the horses. But he did not whistle.

BRITISH TROOPS AGAIN AMBUSHED BY BOERS!

A Battery of Six Guns, Together With Convoy, March Right Into Trap Set for Them.

BRITISH COMPELED TO EVACUATE THABA NCHU.

The Men and Guns Captured With Small Loss of Life, as the British Thoroughly Surprised—Lord Roberts Message to Joubert's Widow.

Bushman's Kop, March 31.
The British force commanded by Col. Broadwood, consisting of the 10th Hussars, Household Cavalry, two Horse Batteries and force of Mounted Infantry, under Col. Pilcher, which has been garrisoning Thaba Nchu, was obliged in consequence of the near approach of a large force of Boers to leave last night. Col. Broadwood marched to the Bloemfontein waterworks, south of the Modder, where he encamped at four this morning. At early dawn the camp was shelled by the enemy from a near point. Colonel Broadwood sent off a convoy with the batteries, while the rest of the force remained to act as a rear guard. The convoy arrived at a deep space where the Boers were concealed, and the entire body walked into ambush and was captured together with six guns. The loss of life was not so great, since most of the British had walked into the trap before a shot was fired.

Cape Town, March 31.
The departure of the British transports with the Boer prisoners for St. Helena has been delayed in consequence of the increased sickness among the prisoners. Three died today and twelve died during the week. Arrangements are being made to prevent overcrowding. The prisoners did not complain of their food. Many of Gen. Cronje's men when captured were completely worn out with the hardships they had undergone and little strength was left them for fighting. Moreover, the confinement on shipboard is very irksome to men who have been accustomed to outdoor life.

Maseru, Basutoland, March 31.
Mr. Steyn is reported to have gone to Ladybrand to stir up the burghers there to renewed resistance. The Boers have removed from the immediate vicinity of Platteburg and taken up accommodation position adjacent. The Dutch who surrendered their arms at Ladybrand, are now suffering seizures of their lives stock.

Pretoria, March 30th.
President Kruger said in public today that the last expressed desire of the late Commandant General Joubert was that he should be succeeded as Commandant General by Louis Botha.

London, April 2, 4.30 a.m.
Lord Roberts' own report of the ambush, if yet received by the War Office, has not been published, and no account of the affair is available to the public except the despatch from Bushman's Kop nothing can be said, therefore regarding the exact extent. Evidently Col. Broadwood thought it necessary to retire in haste from Thaba Nchu as he marched all through Friday night apparently followed by a considerable force of the enemy. The convoy and guns had to pass through a deep spruit which the Boers had occupied. Six of twelve guns, comprising two batteries, all the wagons, and it is feared, many men fell into the hands of the Boers. The hope is expressed here that Gen. Clive will recover the convoy and guns, but this is hardly likely in such a difficult country, and it is probable that the next news will be that after a stiff fight, Gen. Clive has extricated Col. Broadwood from his difficult position. It is possible the affair may revive Boer hopes. Great things are expected by the Boers of the new Commander-in-Chief, Gen. Botha, who has made his reputation wholly during the present campaign. Foreign officers serving with the Boers have expressed surprise at his clever tactics. The proof of continuing activity in the Free State will compel greater circumspection on the part of the British, and will probably delay the march of Lord Roberts northward. Detailed accounts of the fight at Karee siding, estimate the Boer force variously from 3,000 to 5,000 men. Brabant's Horse occupied Wepener last Thursday unopposed.

Lord Methuen has issued the following at Kimberley—"I have received instructions that if any disturbance occurs west of the Vaal River, my force is to return and publish the rebels immediately."

London, April 2.
The Times publishes the following from Mafeking, Basutoland, dated Friday March 30.—"Gen. Oliver has just passed Jammersburg with a large body of men, four guns and 800 wagons. The column extended 30 miles, and was accompanied by many women and children."

Bloemfontein, Friday, March 30.
Lord Roberts has sent the following despatch to President Kruger—"Have just heard of the death of Gen. Joubert and desire to offer my sincere condolence upon the sad event. Would ask you to convey to Gen. Joubert's family an expression of my most respectful sympathy with their sad bereavement and to assure them also from me that all ranks of Her Majesty's forces share my feelings of deep regret at the sudden and untimely end of so distinguished a general, who devoted his life to the service of his country, and whose personal gallantry was only surpassed by his humane conduct and chivalrous bearing under all circumstances."

ARE TREKKING NORTH.

Lord Roberts Reports that the Boers are Leaving Brandfort.
London, March 31, 11.45 a.m.—The War Office has posted the following despatch from Lord Roberts, dated at Bloemfontein, March 30, evening—
"Reports point to the enemy's leaving Brandfort and proceeding in a northerly direction. The casualties in yesterday's engagement were: killed, 2; wounded, 3; rank and file, killed, 10 (query, 19); wounded, 159; missing, 3."

A FIERCE BATTLE.

Description of the Fight Near Karee Siding Station.
Bloemfontein, March 30.—The attack upon the Boers holding the kopjes near the Karee siding station, a few miles south of Brandfort, was made by Tucker's seventh division, with the co-operation of French's cavalry. The attacking troops included a large force of Australian, Colonel Knight, with four hundred New South Wales Mounted Infantry, included in Le Gallia's brigade, attacked the right flank.

A long chain of kopjes was held by the Boers and there was severe fighting all along the line of attack. The approach was very steep, like a fortress, and the troops were unable to make headway until the infantry made an attack upon the front. The cavalry went around the right flank of the Boers and used their Vickers-Maxim guns.

An army hospital was established in a cottage under the shelter of a large kopje. The Boer shells came right over the kopjes and landed near the hospital, which it was found necessary to evacuate.

The Boers slowly retreated until Brandfort, taking their dead and wounded with them. Meanwhile the cavalry, including the Australian Horse, and the Sydney Lancers, under Captain Cox, brigaded with Porter's brigade. The Carbineers, Scots Greys and the Inniskilling received a severe shell fire. The Boers had evidently marked the range, as when the troops advanced the enemy's fire was less accurate.

The Colonials displayed great coolness under fire. Many Boers were killed in the cavalry's flank attack.

The Boers fled and all our troops pushed forward and now hold an excellent position upon the large kopjes recently held by the Boers.

The farmers are in the larger fighting having the women and the children up on the farms, which they are confident the English will not touch. Many of these farmers would surrender their arms but for fear that the Johannesburg police would attack their farms in revenge for their so doing.

The Boers are known to hold Brandfort in some strength—probably five thousand. Reinforcements are afraid to move direct to their support and are content with holding their position, which is threatened by the cavalry advance.

The whole action was rather insignificant. Many regiments received their baptism of fire and showed splendid coolness. We have now secured a fine natural position facing the huge plain before Brandfort.

Mr. Rudyard Kipling was present during the fighting.

WEPT AT JOUBERT'S FUNERAL.

Aged President Rowed with Grief Over the Loss of His Friend.
New York, March 31.—In describing the funeral of General Joubert, a despatch to the Herald says—
The aged President, as he delivered an address of farewell over the body, sobbed in grief. Before the funeral train left President Kruger broke down completely, sobbing out again and again that his brother, his right hand man, was gone. Why should he alone be spared to live and see the old

VERY SLIM GRUB FOR THE SOLDIERS.

The Provisional Battalion on Garrison Duty at Halifax Get Bread and Cheese, and Consequently Strike.

Halifax, March 31.—The garrison of Halifax, a force of the Canadian militia, has been engaged in mutiny, and the Imperial forces remaining here have been called upon to discipline the colonials.

Ever since their arrival, a large number of the members of the provisional regiment have been in bad humor. Two men from Ontario were consigned to the guard room for assaulting a private from Quebec. The private fared badly, but his injuries were not considered serious enough to admit him to the hospital. His assailants have been held for court martial.

A corporal belonging to Ontario was also thrashed in one of the out houses and those who committed the assault were promptly placed under arrest.

Creed or nationality were not factors in the disturbance. It was simply fighting among the men.

Only Cheese for Breakfast.
Two companies, consisting principally of men from London and Toronto, refused to respond to the bugle call for drill yesterday morning. When the hour arrived for breakfast the men had been only served with cheese.

They objected to this fare, and demanded bread and coffee, and positively refused to drill unless their demands were complied with.

When the corps was paraded in the square for drill, twenty men failed to put in an appearance, and held out until bread was served them. It seems that the men had not received the food they expected on the run to Halifax. They were marched to the brigade that had fought for the country's liberty—taken, one after another from the people.

"Gen. Joubert's death," said the President, "is an irreparable loss. His life and deeds, they are the history of the Republic."

President Kruger said it had been the General's dearest desire to see Gen. Louis Botha elected in his place.

WARM TRIBUTE TO "BOERS."

Lord Kitchener Praised the Aged Field Marshal's Military Sagacity.
New York, March 31.—A batch of mail correspondence received today from London contains the following—
"I had always wished," writes the Lord of the Sudan to a correspondent, "to serve under Lord Roberts, and I am thankful

RUSSIAN DEMANDS ON THE COREANS.

Insist Upon Having Possession of a Choice Seaport and Lien on an Island.

Seoul, March 29.—The Masampo question has assumed another phase. Some days ago Pavloff demanded, in similar terms to those formerly so effectively employed at Peking, that Corea shall not alienate in any form any portion of Kojedo, otherwise Cargodo Island, to any other power. Yesterday at an Imperial audience, for reasons not given, but surmised, Pavloff modified his original demand, asking instead of Atkinson Point another site within to have had this opportunity. He is a very tower of strength."

Such magnificent praise from Gen. Kitchener shows not only that he is above all petty jealousy, but settles definitely the rumors that Roberts was only a figurehead. That man nearly 70 years old could do all that Roberts has done in South Africa in the way of mental and physical labor never ceases to be a theme of praise and wonder in England.

DAVITT WAS WELCOMED.

Members of the Transvaal Government Received Him With Open Arms.
Lorenzo Marques, March 30.—Mr. Michael Davitt was welcomed at Pretoria on behalf of the Government by Reitz, Secretary of State, and Grootboom Foreign Secretary. Mr. Davitt proceeded first to Kromstad, and purposes making a long stay at Johannesburg. The Free State

GALLANT MAFEKING HOLDING OUT.

The Locally-Made Gun, Searchlight and Ammunition Are Working All Right.

London, March 31.—Even the details of the engagement yesterday at Karee siding station, a few miles south of Brandfort, fail to instill much interest here. It appears to have been a one-sided affair, although the Boers stoutly held their ground for about three hours, when, foreseeing the danger of the British cavalry enveloping their flanks, the burghers withdrew on their main body at Brandfort, which, according to Lord Roberts, they seem to have decided better to relinquish, with the view, doubtless, of occupying a prepared position further north. There will probably be a general shifting of camps on the part of the British, the new position being made the base of a further advance as soon as the railroad shall have been repaired.

Lord Roberts today reported to the War Office that he has despatched news from Colonel Baden-Powell, at Mafeking, up to March 10th, when the general health of the garrison and its spirit, were good. The locally-made gun, searchlight and ammunition were working well, the food was holding out well, and the paper currency which the British commander has issued was satisfactory.

baracks the morning of arrival without breakfast, and were promised a hot dinner. Instead, they were served with bread and cheese, which fare was repeated at supper. A similar diet was served out for breakfast yesterday to all but two companies, who got cheese only, which caused the men to go on strike.

Soup and Bread.
The same trouble was threatened at dinner. The men were promised meat, instead of which they got soup and dry bread. Remonstrance brought forth another promise of meat for supper, which was fulfilled, and it now looks, as though there would be no further trouble on that score.

It should be stated that similar hitches in food supplies are common at Imperial stations when a corps takes up new quarters.

Blue Noses Complain.
Another wrinkle is in Company H, Nova Scotia. It has only 78 recruits. Commanding officers of local battalions decline to send men here to recruit in H. Company, because the Government has appointed Lieut. Beardmore, of Toronto, as one of the officers for Company H, Nova Scotia, when the three officers should all have been Nova Scotians. It is claimed that one of the officers should have been selected from the 93rd Battalion, and this corps resented the insult by not sending a man to enroll. It is claimed that Lieut. Beardmore was not an officer of the Canadian Militia at the time of the establishment of the provisional regiment.

Basid meets at Kromstad, on Monday.
Cronje has written to a friend saying that his treatment by the British leaves nothing to be desired.

A large quantity of Transvaal bar gold is lying here awaiting shipment, but the agents are afraid to export the bullion lest it should be seized as contraband of war. The French bank at Johannesburg is a large holder, and the Portuguese bank is also believed to be buying gold.

VAIST ARMY IN THE FIELD.

Closes on 175,000 Men—An Austrian Pro-French Officer in London.
London, March 31.—Count Strenberg, an intelligent Austrian officer, who has been lunching and dining in the west end of London, after serving in the field with the Boers at Mafeking and elsewhere, has asserted that the best method of fighting the Boers is to strike one blow after another, and not allow them time to get their breath. Experienced campaigners probably lay bare the real cause of inaction when they refer to the magnitude of the transport arrangements required for feeding and moving large armies at long distances from the sea.

The number of regulars and colonials now in the field cannot be much below 175,000. There may be mobility and forced marches when this big army has once started, but there must be intervals of delay before it is ready to move. Bloemfontein must be converted into a great center of military supplies before the general advance can be ordered.

QUEEN'S VISIT TO ERIN.

Her Majesty in Good Health and Able to Stand the Trip.
London, March 31.—The Life Guards, couriers, carriages, pots and pans, and other Royal paraphernalia have already gone to the Emerald Isle, which eagerly awaits the Queen Victoria to follow.

How Her Majesty will be received, and the prospects of her doing in Dublin have quite overshadowed all other topics, even in a week which has been marked by the annual inter-Varsity boat race, the resignation of the Duke of Norfolk as Postmaster-General, the announcement of the Delagoa Bay railroad award, and the rumors of possible war in the far east. Great Britain's own war in South Africa has almost been forgotten, so uninteresting has been the progress of peace in the Orange Free State compared with the stirring accounts of battles which the British people had grown accustomed to read daily.

The Queen is said to be in excellent health and well able to bear the strain of the trip to Ireland. She commences her journey April 2, and stops on board the 'Royal yacht Victoria and Albert,' landing at Kingstown April 4. In anticipation of Her Majesty's progress through the city, the streets of Dublin are already gay with flags and decorations.

A curious feature of the preparations at the Viceroy's Lodge, where the Queen will stay, are the pots and pans already referred to. Her Majesty is tremendously particular about her kitchen arrangements and those of the Viceroy's Lodge were found to be quite below the Royal standard. Consequently, no less than 80 copper fricadeau-pans, 84 sauce pans, 50 copper stock pans, and many other varieties of cooking utensils have been sent to Dublin especially for the visit.

The Earl of Dunblair, who goes to Ireland as chief of the Royal entourage, and Lord-in-waiting, holds three Irish titles and was formerly aide-de-camp to the Lord Lieutenant.

Edith Louisa's Dead.
London, Ont., March 29.—John Ooto, for over fifty years identified with the business interests of this city, died this morning. His estate is likely to amount to $200,000. He leaves a son, who will inherit his wealth.

Escal's Elephant.
Washington, March 29.—From the port of San Juan, Puerto Rico, during February, 1899, the total exports were $279,044, compared with only $13,212 in February, 1898. In 1899 8 per cent. of the total exports went to the United States, while in 1898 there was shipped to the United States only 1 per cent. of the total exports.

LORD PAUNCEFOTE WILL RECEIVE HIS REWARD.

British Ambassador at Washington to be Made Viscount for Distinguished Services.

LADY MINTO'S VISIT TO THE AMERICAN CAPITAL.

The First Lady of Canada is Receiving Much Honor at the Hands of Prominent Americans—Great Britain and the War in South Africa.

Washington, April 1.—It is rumored here that Lord Pauncefote will soon be raised to the rank of Viscount, as a further reward for his consenting to remain in service instead of retiring on his pension of $8,000 a year, as he is entitled to do. If this is done, no one will congratulate His Lordship more warmly than his American friends. Lord Pauncefote appears to be the only envoy to this country who has succeeded not only in gaining the good will of Americans and Englishmen but also of Canadians who are said to be congratulating themselves on his continuance in office. This feat in itself is sufficient to stamp Lord Pauncefote as a diplomat of the first water, and it may be anticipated that his stay in Washington will be prolonged, not merely for a few months, but more likely still for a few years, since after the conclusion of the war in South Africa, it will be more than ever necessary for England to have a man of his diplomatic caliber in the American National Capital, owing to the fact that the Canadians who have rendered the home government such valuable services in the South African trouble, will be more than ever eager that their interests at Washington should be cared for.

It has been generally supposed that Lord Pauncefote was sent to this capital in the first place as the result of an intrigue against him. At that time, the post was that of a Minister Plenipotentiary only and was not considered anything equal to that of permanent head of the Foreign Office in London, then held by him. It is now positively stated, however, that it was Lord Pauncefote himself who appealed for the mission at Washington. It was shortly after the unfortunate Lord Salisbury episode, and Lord Pauncefote was far-sighted enough to see the almost unrivaled opportunities that existed at Washington for restoring the sadly diminished prestige of English diplomacy, and of rendering invaluable service to his country. Moreover he had always felt a particularly warm sympathy for America and Americans, and was convinced that he would feel at home in Washington.

TREATY RATIFIED.

The Senate has ratified the treaty between England and the United States relative to the estates of citizens of one country who die in the other. Article four was amended so as to provide for the return of the provisions of the agreement to dependencies of the United States "only upon a direction of the law making power of the United States" thus relieving the treaty of the criticism that it conferred too great power upon the President.

He drafted the treaty conferred upon subjects of Great Britain in the United States and upon those of the United States in Great Britain.

other Royal paraphernalia have already gone to the Emerald Isle, which eagerly awaits the Queen Victoria to follow.

MAIL ARRANGEMENTS.

The Post Office Department has given notice of the mail arrangements for Cape Nome, Alaska, during the coming season. Four round trips will be made from San Francisco, Cal., by ocean steamer sailing from that port about May 26, July 6, July 25, and August 15, 1900. Three round trips will be made from Seattle, Wash., the steamer sailing from that port about May 26, July 6, July 25, 1900. For the season of navigation postmaster will accept parcels, as well as letters, for registration for Nome, Alaska; for St. Michael, Alaska; for all post offices on the Yukon river in Alaska; for St. Michael, Alaska; and all offices north of St. Michael. Up to the sailing of the steamers registered letters only, and not parcels, will be conveyed to Alaska over a route from Skagway through Dawson and down the Yukon river.

H. E. L. Brown, the American mining engineer, whose claim of some $5,000,000 against the Transvaal government was set aside by President Kruger after being allowed by the courts, passed through this city on his way from Mexico recently. Speaking of the African war, he said—

BRITAIN'S TURN.

"The tide seems to have at last turned in favor of the English, but it could not well be otherwise in the end, when the superior resources in wealth and men in England had to draw on were taken into consideration. But Pretoria has yet to be taken and wicked fighting and enormous loss of life to the English soldiery between Lord Roberts and the Boers for goal, and when he leads the Guards into the capital of the Boer Republic, he has promised, they, I think, will be a badly diminished organization. Across the Vaal river the country becomes broken and mountainous, and will afford to the Boers innumerable natural fortresses from which to fight, and of which I do not doubt they will take full advantage and render the price of the conquest of the Transvaal heavy indeed."

LADY MINTO.

Among the recent visitors to the Capitol was a party composed of Lady Minto, wife of the Earl of Minto, Governor-General of Canada; Mrs. Drummond, and Mrs. Frewen and Arthur Duff, of the Governor-General's staff. Earlier in the day Lady Minto accompanied Senator Wolcott to the White House to call upon the President.

CANADIAN PENSIONS.

The following pensions have been granted to residents of Canada. Original widows—Catherine Dauphinee, Marriotte's, Nova Scotia, $12 per month; Charlotte E. Winn, Toronto, Ontario, $8.

What Does This Mean.

St. Petersburg, March 31.—Russia has asked Turkey's permission to pass troops and war ships through the Dardanelles.

Get the Chinaman.

Munich, March 31.—The Chinese general Pannu, who has been terrorizing and devastating the province of Panang, has surrendered to Brigadier General Kobbie, and is being brought to Munich.

Rebels March on Bolivar.

New York, March 31.—The Venezuelan Government official reports that severe fighting occurred near the city of Bolivar on March 22, says a despatch to the Herald. General Pantoja, commanding the Government troops, it is announced, defeated Gen. Hernandez. His forces killed 223 of the revolutionists, took 80 prisoners and captured a large quantity of arms and ammunition.

Get Five Years Each.

Montreal, March 31.—James Baxter, broker, and Ferdinand Lemieux, accountant, who were committed a week ago of the crime of conspiring to wreck the Ville Marie Bank, were this morning sentenced to five years in St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary by Judge Wurtelle. Before the judge proceeded to deliver sentence, Baxter made an appeal for mercy, claiming that he was innocent. Ferdinand Lemieux, who was previously sentenced to two years for sending a false report of the bank's affairs to the Government and will commence to serve the second term after the first is finished, making seven years in all.

Canadian Desperado.

Ogdensburg, March 31.—Melville Hall, who is claimed to be a Canadian desperado, was brought from Halesboro, New York, to this city on Wednesday, by Chief Inspector Murray, of Toronto, an arraigned before the United States Commissioner Gray, charged with a number of serious crimes. Hall spent two years in the Central Prison, Toronto, for terrorizing a large area of country, while working on the improvement of the St. Lawrence canal. After his release he resumed his old crime, and after leading the police a wild chase, was finally run to earth at Halesboro.

SHAVING ACCIDENTS.

THE BARBER DISCUSSES THEM WITH THE MAN IN HIS CHAIR.

Chances to Cut Throats That Are Not Often Taken Advantage Of—Narrow Escapes From Serious Mishaps—A Father's Dream.

"Did it ever strike you," asked the little barber, "how easy it would be for the man that shaves you to kill you?"

The man in the chair sat up quickly and looked carefully at the barber, who was feeling the edge of the razor with one finger. The barber smiled to reassure his customer and said:

"It seems a queer question, I know, but it is a wonder to me that there are not a number of people killed in that way every year. It would be the easiest thing in the world for the barber as he wielded his razor to make one sweep with it and sever the jugular vein, and you would be dead almost on the instant. Suppose, for instance, that the barber should go insane. There would be nothing to prevent his doing such a thing, and you would have no warning nor any opportunity to save yourself."

"There is always a chance of a serious accident happening to the man in the chair. I have seen a number of such accidents and have a horror of even nicking the man I am shaving. In fact, such an occurrence makes the feel out of sorts for the rest of the day. It was only a few days ago that I almost had an accident that gave me a great fright and completely unnerved me. I was shaving a young man, and in passing from one side of the chair to the other a button of my waistcoat caught in his hair. It pulled a trifle, and he moved his head suddenly just as I went to put the blade to his face. I came within an ace of slashing him, and only a quick jump back saved him. The perspiration stood out on me, and I had to call one of the other men to finish shaving my customer."

"But the worst accident I ever saw in a barber shop occurred while I was working in a small town in the west. One of the patrons of the place was a business man whose 8-year-old daughter was lying at the point of death. Her father put in most of his time at her bedside. One afternoon while she was asleep he came in here to get shaved. He was so exhausted through lack of sleep that he fell asleep immediately after he had taken his seat in the chair next to the one behind which I was at work."

"He dreamed that some one had come into the place to tell him that his child had died. With a cry of alarm he started up just as the barber laid the razor against his neck. Into the flesh it sank. He was not yet thoroughly awake, and as he imagined that some one was holding him back from his child he threw out his hand to free himself, and his fingers closed over the blade of the razor. So dazed was he that he could not realize what had happened, but sat there in the chair, with the blood streaming from his throat and fingers."

"The man who had done the cutting was the first to act, although half crazed. He hurried for a doctor while we stanchied the flow of blood the best we knew how. Even as the doctor was at work sewing up the wounds a messenger came to say that the little girl had died suddenly in the greatest agony, calling for her father just before she died. He was under the influence of ether at the time and did not know, but afterward, when he heard of the circumstances attending her death, he insisted that he had heard her call as he lay there asleep in the chair and that it was her cry that had caused him to make his sudden movement."

"For years after the accident he continued to shave in the same shop where it had occurred, and it was never mentioned. He carried a reminder of it for the remainder of his life. In addition to the scar on his throat, the fingers of his right hand were all drawn up and useless."

"Sudden movements while in the barber's chair are always apt to be attended with serious results, and I could recall dozens of instances where it has been only the merest chance that has prevented serious if not fatal mishaps. Nine times out of ten where the person getting shaved receives a nick and lays the blame on the barber he should thank the wielder of the razor that it was so quick action by the barber that prevented a bad cut. A slight nick often would have been a case for the doctor or coroner were it not for the watchfulness of the barber. Here yesterday I happened to draw blood from a young fellow's face near his ear, and he made a great fuss about it, until I showed him that it was only the sudden withdrawal of the razor which resulted in the slight nick that prevented him losing a good part of his ear. Then he was grateful and thanked me, besides promising to be more careful in the future."

"But there are other ways the barber has of getting even," continued the little barber after relating one side of his customer's face. "There is no need of his slashing a man. He can inflict injuries that will make his victim decidedly uncomfortable, and at the same time the latter will not be aware of what is being done." What the barber meant by this last remark his victim did not ask.—New York Sun.

THE ARCTIC MOSQUITO.

It Is About the Most Terrible Insect Pest in the World.

"Nothing that has ever been written about the arctic mosquito begins to come up to the real thing," said a guest in the St. Charles corridor the other evening. "I went up the Yukon river in the summer of 1898, representing the Alaska and Dominion Trading company, and we struck mosquitoes as soon as we got into the hills. They are twice as large as our familiar bayou species, and their sting is like the prod of a hot needle. They sweep along the valleys in dense clouds, and if they catch a man unprepared they are liable to blind him before he can escape. I heard stories of children being stung to death and can readily believe them."

"Whenever we went ashore we wore heavy hat nets and took the utmost precaution, but were certain to suffer more or less. One of our party cut the tongue out of his shoes, and a narrow line of sock was exposed under the lacing. Next day he was bitten there at least a hundred times, and his feet were so terribly inflamed that the shoes had to be cut off."

"Another man, a fireman in the boat crew, got drunk on Alaska whisky one afternoon and lay down to take a nap in a corner of the engine room. I noticed him a little later and was horrified at the solid brown mass of mosquitoes that had settled on a small exposed section of his cheek and throat. In an hour his face was swollen out of all resemblance to anything human, he was unable to swallow and was burning with fever. It was a week before he was able to be about. I saw a number of cattle near Fort Hamilton that had been made stone blind by stings near the eye."

"The arctic foothill mosquito is without doubt the most terrible insect pest in the world."—New Orleans Times.

The Times requires a smart boy for night work to set headings and run messes. Must be good at spelling. A fine chance for smart lad. Apply at Times Bookstore in daytime, or to Mr. P. Thomas, at night.

The Chambers' Inquest.

The inquest concerning the death of Mr. W. R. Chambers, which occurred in Montreal some days ago, is still in progress. There is nothing definite shown as yet. That the deceased met with foul play is generally conceded. The police of Montreal are endeavoring to unravel the mystery.

Lost.

On Saturday afternoon between ten and twelve o'clock in the market building, or on Water street, a small black leather purse containing six one dollar bills and three cents. Finder will be rewarded by leaving same at Times Bookstore.

The Dominion Elections.

The Times stated some time ago that the Dominion elections would take place at an early date—probably in June. This seems to be verified by the activity shown by the Liberals in many places. The Peterborough Liberals intend holding a mass meeting in a few days or weeks, to nominate a candidate. In West Northumberland the campaign has already been opened, and a number of meetings are announced. Stirring times are ahead.

A Serious Mishap.

Last Saturday afternoon, while superintending the shipping of a cargo of horses at the C.P.R., Mr. T. Cavanagh met with a serious mishap. One of the animals becoming frightened kicked down an iron guard rail, which struck Mr. Cavanagh on the head with great force, fracturing the skull and opening up the head and face. Dr. Mohr was soon in attendance and put several stitches in the wound. Mr. Cavanagh, we are pleased to say, is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

Omitted.

Amongst the list of floral offerings in connection with the funeral of the late Mr. King, the following was accidentally omitted:—Mrs. W. Walsh, a wreath of roses and carnations; Trustees Nicholas Hospital Board, wreath, carnations, violets, roses and stocks; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Graham, wreath of roses, carnations and primula.

A Peterborough Recruit.

Amongst those who were recruited for the North West Mounted Police in Toronto last week, was Mr. Frank Barrett, son of Mr. Cole Barrett of this town. Mr. Barrett is an exemplary young man, and fond of the woods, where solitude exists. He will make a first class mounted policeman.

Mr. W. J. English assumes his duties as Market Clerk this morning.

The members of the "Merchant of Venice" Co., were photographed Friday by Mr. R. M. Roy.

The Times has received a very neat pamphlet from the Church of Christ Scientist, Peterborough, giving a history of Christian Science.

An action for seduction has been begun in the High Court of Justice here, the defendant being a prominent resident of a neighboring village.

Mr. J. H. Cobb has again been awarded the contract for looking after the Victoria Park, this tender being $242. The other tenders were—Jordan Bros., $250; B. Cooney, $265.

Campbellford Lodge, No. 259, A.O. U.W., has resolved to carry the insurance of Capt. John D. Mackey, a member of that lodge, who enlisted with the Canadian contingent to South Africa.

Mr. Wm. Fair, a native of Cavan, well known in Peterborough, after living in the west for several years, has removed to town, taking up residence at 111 Stewart street, an dis engaging in the real estate business with T. Hurley & Co.

A new enclosed air light has been introduced into the Golden Lion, an idea Mr. Fair brought with him from New York. Two lamps have been installed at present and others will follow which will create a complete revolution in the lighting of this store.

Sugaring has commenced and a little syrup has been made, though there has been no satisfactory runs yet. The snow being deep in the woods many have up to the present only tapped the convenient trees. None of the maple product was offered on the market on Saturday last.

JUDGED BY THE PAST.

We are willing to be judged by our past service to the people as druggists. We always devote our best energies to those who call on us to have their wants supplied.

PERSONAL.

We regret to learn that Mr. W. C. Ackerman is laid up with a gripe.

Mr. A. J. McClellan, who has been confined to the house, is able to attend to business again.

Minden Echo:—Mr. Christopher Leary, of Peterborough, is at present on a visit to his friends here, and looks remarkably well for a man of his years.

Mr. Henri Bourassa, M.P., who lectured in the Collegiate Institute course at Lindsay Friday evening, spent the morning in Peterborough and was driven around town by Mr. R. R. Hall, who also took Mr. Bourassa through the Canadian General Electric works.

Miss Staunton and Miss M. Brown, of town, have passed their second year examination at the Metropolitan school of Music, Toronto, with first class honors, taking the highest percentage in the history of the Conservatory. They are pupils of Mr. P. W. Owens, formerly organist of St. John's church. Their many friends in town will congratulate both teacher and pupils on their success.

The Late Mrs. Dunford.

The Millbrook Reporter says:—The hand of Death has again laid its grasp upon one of our number and taken to her eternal home another of our most respected life-long residents. The deceased, whose maiden name was Mary Ann Curley, was born in Wiltshire, England, seventy-four years ago, where she resided until womanhood, and at the age of twenty-four married him who now mourns her loss. Forty-three years ago they joined the great throng of fortune seekers in the then New World, and arriving in Canada, came out to Millbrook, which has always been their home, with short exceptions. The late Mrs. Dunford was much loved and highly respected by all who knew her. Her cheerful disposition and well-stored mind made her companionship very enjoyable, and there has been universal regret and sorrow amongst her many friends at her call to her home above, which came on Thursday evening last. Her illness had continued for some weeks but previous to that her health was very good, in fact no serious sickness came near her until her final attack. The funeral on Saturday last at Gardiner's Cemetery was attended by a large number of friends, the Rev. Dr. Cade, on the Methodist church, with which body she had worshipped most constantly all her life, conducting a suitable service at the house. Two sons, Henry G. of Millbrook, and John of Peterborough, together with the bereaved husband, were left to sorrow over the absence of "a vanished hand," yet to be glad also that the influence of one so good and true still lives with them.

ERRORS ARE IMPOSSIBLE.

Owing to the perfected system followed by us in the compounding of drugs and the filling of prescriptions, errors or mistakes are never made. We guarantee at all times the purity and quality of our drugs, and our moderate prices give universal satisfaction.

Our Stock of Toilet Requisites Will Interest You.

Paine's Celery Compound—the kind that never fails—is in stock. For many years this wonderful medicine has commanded world-wide attention because of its prompt and permanent cures. Come direct to us for Paine's Celery Compound. John Nugent, Druggist, Peterborough, Ont.

CHURCH NOTES.

There was a Fanny Crosby service of song at the Murray street Baptist church, yesterday evening, only her hymns being sung. Mr. Bawton delivered a short sermon.

At All Saints' Church yesterday, the Lenten series of sermons were continued. In the morning the subject was "Elijah," and in the evening "The Lord's Prayer." There was a special offering for the superannuation fund.

The following appears in the columns of a contemporary, sent in by a correspondent:—"The Rev. Mr. Moore, of Peterborough, occupied the pulpit here on Sunday, and preached a very eloquent sermon to a large congregation. His was a grand impression on the minds of the people as to his abilities as a preacher."

Napoleon Bonaparte, when a poor lieutenant, took the agency for a work entitled "L'Histoire de la Revolution." In the foyer of the great Palace of the Louvre can be seen today the great Emperor's canvassing outfit, with the long list of subscriptions he secured.

George Washington, when young, canvassed around Alexandria, Va., and sold over 200 copies of a work entitled "Bydell's American Savage."

Mark Twain was a book agent. Longfellow sold books by subscription. Jay Gould, when starting in life, was a canvasser.

Daniel Webster paid his second term's tuition at Dartmouth by handling De Tocqueville's America, in Merrimack county, New Hampshire.

U. S. Grant canvassed for Irving Columbus.

James O. Blaine began life as a canvasser for a Life of Henry Clay. Bismarck, when at Heidelberg, spent a vacation in canvassing for one of Blumebach's hand-books.

The editor of this G. F. J., at one time sold postage stamps.

Death of Mr. T. O. Kemp.

A despatch to the Toronto World refers as follows to the death in Seaford of Mr. T. O. Kemp, who for over 20 years has been manager of the Ogilvie Mills in Seaford. He had been ill for nearly two years, and for the past six months has been confined to bed most of the time. As a shrewd and careful business man he had few superiors, and as a citizen he was enterprising and took a deep and active interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of his adopted town. His death is in every way a great loss to the community. He was a native of Ontario and his remains will be taken there for interment on Monday. He leaves a widow and family of three sons and one daughter, the latter being now in Germany pursuing her musical studies.

COFFEE VS. PBEACHER.

People Poisoned by Coffee Should Leave It.

"I have been a great coffee drinker for years and it has kept me in a bilious condition, with more or less neuralgia, as the result of general ill-health produced by coffee drinking. I have discovered that coffee is a rank poison to my system. Since we have been using Postum Cereal Food Coffee, we not only find it a delightful beverage with all the good qualities of coffee, but it has none of the injurious effects."

"Any person suffering from nervous troubles, caused by the poisons of coffee, should be able to get rid of the sickness in short order. If such a person will leave off the cause and take up Postum Food Coffee. There has been no coffee used in our home for a considerable time."

"People who are poisoned by coffee should leave it off, because when one sins against his body, he dishonors God. For our bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghost." It would seem that any one conscious of the bodily distress that coffee brings, would have no trouble in leaving it off when Postum Food Coffee can be secured. Rev. John M. Linn, Pastor, M. E. Church, South Campus, Chicago, Ill.

Transient Traders.

Editor Morning Times:

Sir,—I noticed a letter in your valuable paper a few days ago, dealing with transient traders. Your correspondent forcibly pointed out the fact that the Merchants' Retail Association, if they desire to be protected in the matter of pedlars and transient traders, must set an example themselves. As I take it, the idea of the whole thing is to cultivate the habit of dealing with one another, instead of sending our money out of town. Surely, when members of the exclusive committee of the Association get their printing done in Toronto and elsewhere, they cannot expect the rank and file of the society to be less obedient to the rules in this regard.

Now, Mr. Editor, I hope the members of the Association will "turn over a new leaf" in this respect. Let us agree to help one another and in this way, and this way only, will the Association be a success.

Thanking you Mr. Editor, I am, yours, etc.,

A RETAILER.

Ans.—Our correspondent is right. The members of the Association should be loyal to each other, as a first duty. While on the subject of printing, it might be well to ask what is the difference between sending to Toronto for printing and buying newspapers the type for which is set up in Toronto? Many of our merchants evidently forget that the Times is a home production, through and through even to its illustrations, while our local contemporaries are not. Every dollar that is spent in producing this great family journal, excepting of course the white paper, goes into wages that is spent amongst the merchants of the town. We ask the merchants of the Association to bear this in mind, and if they are true to what they profess, the Times will have a boom that will enable us to produce a paper equal to the best city sheet.

JOBS ABOUT THE WAR.

Boys on the Battlefield and Those on Their Way to the Cape.

Twenty-five addition bushmen are going to the front from Tasmania so that the full contingent consists of 1,313 men.

Nazareth House, Hammondsmith, has received a telegram from Nazareth House, Kimberley, saying, "Sisters safe and well."

The American Consul at Cape Town cables that the food stuffs on the Ma-shona have been released, and that the Government will buy them.

The first stores to reach Kimberley after their relief were 144 cases sent by the Red Cross commission from Cape Town. These were a priceless boon.

Lord Salisbury is about to lose another private secretary, Vincent Newport being ordered to the front with his regiment, the Royal Scots Militia.

Inquiries made into the origin of the false report about the relief of Ladysmith, circulated by the Windsor Council, show that it is traceable to a police official, who was utterly mistaken.

New South Wales has expressed through Lord Beauchamp, its wish to supply transport wagons for South Africa, and is trying to ascertain from Lord Roberts what class of wagons he requires.

Private N. De Verdon, now serving with the Queenslanders in South Africa, is a son of the late Sir George De Veron, the first joint-general, for Victoria, and a nephew of Mr. Edward De Verdon, Q.C.

The New South Wales Minister of Education, addressing a number of teachers who had volunteered, advised them that they came across a spy or a traitor not to shoot him, but to tie a rope round his neck and drown him like a dog.

President Kruger's pipe has been the subject of a judicial notice in Dublin. Students of Trinity College broke the windows of a firm of tobacconists because it was said, they had once presented a pipe to the President of the Transvaal Republic.

At Holy Trinity church, London, the first Sunday after the relief of Ladysmith, it was given out that Lady White and her daughters desire to return thanks to Almighty God for the relief of Ladysmith and the safety of Sir George White and his force.

Reuter's correspondent says there is reason to believe that many skilled Belgian and Dutch artillerymen have been engaged and imported into the Transvaal from April, 1896, in regular batches up to the eve of war. They received £50 in cash, the same amount on arrival at Pretoria, 10s a day pay, and grant of land. Specialists also accompanied the new guns.

The Law Times calls attention to the fact that the operation of the Wills Act is suspended in the case of soldiers serving on the field. In consequence of this it is open to a soldier to make his will on the battlefield by word of mouth. His will is also valid even though he be a minor, who he makes it, and a subsequent marriage does not annul a will so made, as would ordinarily be the case.

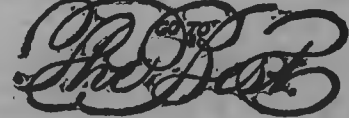

The Mayo raf Mafeking, r. Frank Whiteley, is a Yorkshireman, who has led a most adventurous life. He left Bradford when a youth and roamed about the then unknown regions of Bechuanaland, hunting big game and trading in ivory. It was he who for years was the chief adviser of Khama, the chief of Bechuanaland, and who was responsible for the conversion of the savage into one of the most enlightened of the native rulers.

One of the officers of the Salvation Army sent to South Africa writes:—"I spent the whole of yesterday afternoon with the soldiers at Fort Napier. The vanguard of the Queen was telling me how the Gordon Highlanders acted at the storming of Dundee. Just as they were nearing the Hoers a number of men in the Boer line shield up their guns and yelled, 'For God's sake, don't shoot, ladies! We are Scotch, haven't fired a shot at you!' It appears they stayed too long in the Transvaal and were commandeered and compelled to fight."

How far men can do hard work without stimulants was answered by a boy of the Solicitor-General, who presided recently over the annual social meeting of the Royal Courts of Justice Temperance Society. Sir Robert Finlay said they could do without a feeling of gratitude and pride that British soldiers were commended by one of the greatest leaders of the day, and one who had done so much for the moral well-being of the British army. It had been found, Sir Robert asserted, that the soldiers did their work much better under a system of total abstinence than under any other.

THOSE CAPTURED GUNS STILL HELD BY BOERS.

The Story That They Have Been Recaptured by British Not Credited in London.

GENERAL METHUEN'S DIFFICULTIES INCSEASING.

He Has Boer Lagers or Guerilla Bands on Three Sides of Him, and Will be Obligated to Watch Carefully His Communications on the Orange River.

Bushmans Kop, Sunday April 1.—The Boers who were hidden in the spruit when the British guns were captured yesterday, were commanded by Rehman, a German-American. The receipt of the despatch rattles the disputed point, arising from the discrepancy in the despatch from Bushmans Kop of Saturday, and Lord Roberts' despatch of yesterday referring to the time the engagement between the British and Boers occurred, which is now shown to be Saturday, and not Sunday as might have been judged from the message of the Commander-in-Chief.

Bushmans Kop, Sunday April 1.—The Boers retired this morning when they discovered the British scouts, leaving two Dutch military attaches, one of them dangerously wounded in the hands of the British. All the wounded are doing well. Every one agrees that but for Col. Broadwood's splendid handling of his troops not a member of the force would have escaped. The Boers are still holding the waterworks and the line of hills behind them.

London, April 3 12.10 a.m. Queen Victoria left Windsor Castle at half-past nine last evening, en route for Ireland. Her Majesty is accompanied by Princess Christian and Princess Henry of Battenburg.

London, April 3, 4.40 a.m. The latest news from the front adds little to the public knowledge of the convey disaster. No credit is given to the report that the Boers numbered between 8,000 and 10,000. The general belief is that there could not have been more than half that number. Lord Roberts' own despatch, dated 2 hours later than the Daily Chronicle's, says nothing about the guns being recaptured, the story therefore, looks doubtful. Little news has arrived from other points. Kenhardt was formally re-occupied Saturday. The report that the Boers are massing in the vicinity of Taungs and Klip is confirmed. Lord Methuen's difficulties are apparently increasing. He has Boer lagers or guerilla bands on three sides of him, and he will be obliged to watch carefully his communications with Orange River.

London, April 3.—The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Standard says that the Prince of Teck was in charge of the transport, but is safe.

London, April 3.—The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Daily Chronicle, telegraphing Sunday and describing the loss of the convey, says: "The Boers opened with a murderous fire. It was simply slaughter. The affair drove the convey far away, leaving the traps, and it was impossible for our men to hit the hidden enemy. Our gunners fought bravely, trying to save the guns, but our people were greatly hampered by the Kaffirs who ran hither and thither looking for cover from the fearful fire that poured in on all sides. Meanwhile the enemy were hotly pressing Colonel Broadwood, whose mounted troops were completely surrounded. The British showed magnificent bravery. The officers were quite cool and composedly directing operations. The opportune arrival of reinforcements saved Colonel Broadwood from annihilation. It is reported that two guns have been recaptured. The whole force is retiring on Bloemfontein."

London, April 3.—The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Times, telegraphing Sunday with reference to the capture of the convey says: "The whole affair was a flash intended to frighten Free States who were desirous of surrendering to Lord Roberts. When Gen. Colville arrived all thought he was almost destitute of mounted men and had marched 18 miles, he determined to turn the river crossing some point lower down than that occupied by the enemy. Accordingly Gen. Smith-Dorrien's brigade, including the Canadians, attempted another drift, which turned

ESCAPED FROM A BOER PRISON.

Two British Officers. After Many Thrilling Adventures, Make Their Escape From Pretoria.

London, April 2.—A despatch from Lorenzo Marques, dated to-day, announces the arrival there of Captain Haldane, of the Gordon Highlanders, and Lieut. Le Mesurier, of the Dublin Fusiliers, who escaped from Pretoria, after perilous adventures. It appears that after Winston Churchill's escape the sentries were doubled, electric light was installed, additional barriadees were constructed and the officers were confined in the Model School after 8.30 p.m. Captain Haldane says that after several unsuccessful attempts they succeeded in cutting of the electric light, but even then the street lamps precluded an attempt to escape, and they decided to hide in the space beneath the building, to which a trap door has previously been secretly constructed. It had been announced that the officers would be removed elsewhere in a few days, when the two men hoped to be able to escape. But the removal of the prisoners was postponed and the two men in the damp, subterranean dwelling began to despair, and commenced digging in different directions in the hope of finding a suitable exit.

The work was most arduous as they had only a screw-driver and a skewer with which to dig the ground, which was very hard. The imprisoned officers on March 16 heard somebody say the officers would be removed the following day. After passing twenty days under ground in a cramped position and subsisting on a little food and water supplied by some of their fellow-prisoners who were in their confidence their delight at the good news was indescribable. The following morning they heard the officers above leaving, and all day long the room was filled with curious visitors looking at the clever carvings on the walls drawn by the prisoners. When evening came the noise ceased, and Haldane and Le Mesurier crept to the trap door. They were so weak that they could hardly walk. Gradually recovering, they made their way to the courtyard, got over the railings and reached the street.

Here the despatch ends, but more of it is expected.

RELIEF OF MAPEKING.

General Roberts Says it is Engaging His Earliest Attention.

East London, April 1.—The Mayor of this city has telegraphed to Gen. Roberts appealing to him to hasten the relief of Mapeking, where the troops consist almost entirely of residents of the colony led by British officers.

General Roberts replied that he was pleased to assist the citizens of East London and that the relief of Mapeking was engaging his most earnest attention.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S VISIT TO THE EMERALD ISLE.

Old Dublin Clothed in Bunting and Her Citizens Bubbling Over With Enthusiasm.

THE VISIT MAY BE PROLONGED A FULL MONTH.

There Will be a Great Muster of Military Forces and the Channel Fleet Will Anchor at Kingston—The Entry to Dublin Will be a Most Brilliant Pageant.

New York, April 3.—The London correspondent of the Tribune cables as follows regarding the royal visit to Ireland: Dublin, April 2, 1 a.m.—The Queen's visit to Ireland is one of the wisest acts in her reign. Dublin has accepted it, in advance, as an act of womanly grace, designed to express her appreciation of the work of the Irish generals, and the loyalty and gallantry of the Irish soldiers. Lord Mayor Pile is a Nationalist and a staunch follower of Redmond, but he has shown good political instinct in adapting himself to the situation. The irreconcilable minority under Harrington has sought to stir up strife and is threatening a renewal of the agitation this week, but the Lord Mayor has the people of Dublin behind him, and will not endanger his political future when he meets the Queen at the city gates, on Leeson street, and presents the civic sword and official keys. He has taken the cue from Redmond that there is no politics in the Queen's visit, yet he is too shrewd a politician himself to offer any resistance to the public feeling in Dublin, which has been strongly influenced by the compliment paid by her to the city in holding court here for the season. The city is already in holiday colours in honour of her coming, and the route which she will follow for eight miles is continuously decorated with gaily decorated masts, streamers and flags. The cordiality of her welcome to the Irish capital cannot be doubted. Some threats are heard that there will be serious trouble, and even rioting, if Orange processions are seen in the streets, but it is not likely that the Queen's visit will be marred by any unpleasant incidents. There are no official announcements respecting the length of the Queen's stay in Dublin. It probably depends upon the temper of the people here. If there are any political disturbances she will shorten it. If she is convinced, on the other hand, that her tribute to the loyal services of the Irish soldiers is appreciated and tends to promote good feeling, she will prolong her stay to a full month.

She is prepared to make a long visit, and cannot Dublin for several weeks into a capital of imperial splendour. Her court will be held in semi-State, precisely as at Windsor. The grand coach of State is already here, with a score of the best carriages and landaurs from the royal mews at Buckingham Palace. From 7 to 10 horses, including her famous greys, and now at the stables of the Vice-Royal Lodge. A large retinue of coachmen, postillions and servants have already arrived there. There will be a great muster of military forces, and the Channel Fleet will be at anchor at Kingston. The Queen's entry into Dublin promises to be a most impressive and brilliant pageant, and there will be a long series of State functions and social revels while she is here. Her tribute to Irish valor is sincere and sympathetic, but it is paid with royal dignity and stately magnificence. The effect of this royal progress to a capital hitherto neglected and despised can hardly fail to be beneficial. Her visit is well timed to gratify Irish pride. It is made at a time when Englishmen are sobered with responsibilities and fascinated by the glories of empire, and when the loyal colonies have shown how strong is their attachment to the mother country. The Queen has, however, suddenly turned to Ireland, when her subjects were thinking of the power and resources of a world-wide Empire, and has virtually said: "How could we get on in great emergencies without Irish generals like Roberts, Kitchener, White, French, and Kelly-Kenny to command our armies, or without the splendid fortitude and gallantry of the Irish soldiers?"

DUBLIN IN GAY ATTIRE.

Dublin, April 2.—The British Channel squadron has arrived at Kingston for the Queen's visit, which is awaited with intense and ever-growing enthusiasm. Dublin is rapidly filling up. Already the hotels are crowded and train load after train load is arriving from the provinces. Grand stands have been erected in the streets, which are profusely decorated and soon it will be difficult to find space for hanging another flag. A general holiday has been proclaimed for Wednesday throughout the County of Dublin. As a last attempt at a counter attraction, the extremists have placarded the city with an invitation to the citizens to join a monster procession of Nationalist societies, which, according to programme, is to start from the Town Hall committee rooms on the night of Her Majesty's arrival. It is probable that the demonstration will be forbidden.

LEAVE WINDSOR TO-NIGHT.

London, April 2.—The Queen and Princess Christian and Princess Henry of Battenburg, with the royal suite, will leave Windsor Castle at 9.30 to-night in a special train for Holyhead, where they will take boat for Ireland. The train will stop several hours en route to allow the Royal party to sleep.

It will reach Holyhead about 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. Breakfast will be eaten there, and the party will cross the Irish Sea escorted by warships. Kingston will be reached at 11 a.m. The Queen and her party will dine and sleep on board the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, and will land at 11.30 a.m. on Wednesday. They will drive to the viceregal lodge in Phoenix Park, which they will reach before luncheon.

Gentlemen, Your Board of Works beg leave to report and recommend as follows:—

1. That the street pay lists be certified to by the Chairman of this Board before being paid.

2. That the matter of the purchase of a new water cart be referred to the Chairman of the Board and the Town Engineer with power to act.

3. That Mr. Ward having written that the Town sewer pipes used on Mr. Bogue's contract were returned by him, Mr. Bogue be paid $6.29 retained from him on account of the pipes.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The report was adopted as read.

APPOINTMENTS & LICENCES.

Ald. Weir presented the following report:—

Gentlemen, Your Committee on Appointments and Licences beg leave to report and recommend that Messrs. T. McKee, John Kincaid, T. H. McGrath and Wm. Aldridge be appointed Assessors of the year at $150.00 each, the work to be divided in the same way as it was last year.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

BY-LAWS.

A by-law providing for a grant of $300 to the Peterborough and Ashburnham Horticultural Society passed its several readings.

A by-law appointing assessors for the current year passed its several readings.

Rose for Fire Dept.

Ald. Dawson moved, seconded by Ald. Robertson, that the corporation seal be affixed to the contract of March 17th for the purchase of 200 feet of carbide hose at 90 cents a foot for the fire department.—Carried.

Ald. Corkery moved, seconded by Ald. Robertson, that the Mayor, Town Clerk, Town Solicitor, and Ald. Denne and Oke, be a committee to meet the Private Bills Committee in reference to the town's bill providing for additional exemption to the Canadian General Electric Co., which comes before the local legislature to-day.

Ald. Savers moved in amendment, in point of economy, he said, seconded by Ald. Robertson, that the Mayor, Town Clerk, Town Solicitor, and Ald. Denne and Oke, be a committee to meet the Private Bills Committee in reference to the town's bill providing for additional exemption to the Canadian General Electric Co., which comes before the local legislature to-day.

The amendment was carried.

The matter was then, on motion of Ald. Denne, referred to the Finance Committee for consideration.

Council then adjourned.

BILLS OVER A CENTURY OLD

There is a bill for groceries, etc., furtains one or two items of furniture.

Apparently the undergraduate took over rooms already furnished at a valuation, and certain articles had to be bought new, such as a hearth brush, a mop and a "Holland gutch." He knew not what this means, but cost 2 shillings 9 pence (43 cents).

The undergraduate would seem to have lived in a room furnished in a most reckless manner. On Oct. 24 he was charged 2 shillings for Hyson and 1 shilling 6 pence for Congo. On Nov.
he is charged 2 shillings for tea and in the same day, which looks odd, 6 shillings 6 pence for tea. On the 9th of the month he buys a new teapot, the old one, one supposes, worn out with hard service. However, this tea lasts him till the end of the term, so that his tea costs him for the two months no more than 11 shillings, or $2.75, and as the price of tea at this time varied from 8 shillings to about 25 shillings we may conclude that he got through no more than a pound during the term.

In other words, this young man took for breakfast a slight repeat of weak tea and bread and butter. Dinner was then served at 12, so that breakfast was only what the Indians call a "chota heart." On sugar he spent 4 shillings, which means six pounds at 6 pence a pound. On candles he spent 24 shillings 3/4 pence, or about 3 shillings a week. He burned wax candles, mold candles and "wax twist." Salt was a shilling a packet. On two occasions he bought sand. Was, then, the floor of his room sanded? It would seem so.

Uncle Sam's Elephant.

Washington, March 30.—From the port of San Juan, Puerto Rico, during February, 1899, the total exports were $79,004, compared with only $18,212 in February, 1900. In 1899 8 per cent. of the total exports went to the United States, while in 1900 there was shipped to the United States only 1 per cent. of the total exports.

Short Story of the Day

BRAVERY REWARDED.

Gertrude Marshall drove her father to and from his office on days when it was pleasant enough for an open carriage. She was a good horsewoman, but one day a newspaper blew up into the horse's face and he bolted. They had gone a couple of hundred yards when a young man leaped from the sidewalk and flung himself at the horse's head. The horse dragged him a few feet and then stopped, panting and trembling. Though Gertrude's face and lips were white, she did not faint. After brushing his clothes a bit the young man inquired if the fair occupant of the carriage were hurt.

"Not hurt," said Gertrude, in a voice that trembled, "but rather frightened. Would it be asking too much that you drive me to my father's office?"
The young man took his seat by her side and the horse, now perfectly docile, caused no further trouble, and they reached their destination in safety. The young fellow preserved a distant silence during the drive, and when she alighted from the carriage Gertrude saw that he was anxious to get away. But she had decided that her father must thank him in some way for his timely aid and bravery.

"I hate to bother you further," she said, "but would you take me in and find me a chair?"

They found Mr. Marshall just getting into his coat when they reached the office.

"Papa," said the girl, "the horse ran away just now, and this young man stopped him at the risk of his life, and then drove me here. I want you to thank him," and the old man saw by his child's eyes that something more than mere thanks must be given the rescuer.

"It was nothing, sir," began the young man, "I—"

"Nothing," blurted Mr. Marshall,
"nothing to save by daughter's life?
Had anything happened to Gertrude I should have gone crazy, sir. I cannot thank you enough. Words are of no avail in these cases. Come to dinner with us now, and we will talk it over."

Gertrude, standing beside her father, putted his big arm as she gently secured the invitation.

"I thank you both," said the young man, "but I must return to the office.
I was on business when fate put it in my way to render a small service to your daughter."

"May I ask what office you are in—as also your name, young man?" inquired the bluff banker.

"My name, sir, is Gerald Allen, and I am mere clerk in Blank & Co.'s office."

Mr. Marshall felt a gentle pressure on his arm and enquired if the young man should care to change his position for one which would be more lucrative to him. The young man's eyes brightened at once.

"Now, see here," said Mr. Marshall, after he had heard the few words Gertrude whispered in his ear, "for some time I have been looking for a man who writes a good hand, who is quick and trustworthy (and I know you are that). In short, I want a confidential clerk and private secretary combined. Would you be willing to accept such a position?"

"Mr. Marshall," said Gerald Allen with flushed face, "I fear you will find that too great a reward for my assistance to-day."

"Tut, tut," said the old man; "I cannot reward you for that, but you will accept my offer?"

"With thanks, sir," said Gerald.
"Then I will speak to Blank and you can take your position here next week. In the meantime we will look for you at lunch on Sunday."

Thus it was that Gerald Allen rose from a poorly paid clerk in a small office to a salaried private secretary in one of the largest banking houses in Boston, and thus it was that he met Mr. Marshall's gentle daughter and lost his large, honest heart to her.

But he would not tell her of his honest love, because he regarded himself as being in a lower sphere of life than his divinity, while the pretty Gertrude wondered if she had given her affections to a man who was indifferent to her.

One morning Mr. Marshall asked his secretary if he were a relation of a certain Oscar Allen, formerly of Plymouth.

"Yes," said Gerald, "he was my uncle, but I have not heard from him for years."

Then his employer showed him an item in the morning paper inquiring for relatives of the late Oscar Allen.
Inquiries of the lawyer who had charge of the deceased man's affairs showed that Gerald was heir to almost half a million dollars. When Gerald heard this he almost shouted for joy, for now he could woo his little sweetheart without feeling that he was imposing on her.

Accordingly, that afternoon he betook himself to her home and found her seated beside the open window embroidering a dainty bit of linen.

Something in the young man's eyes or manner gave the girl an inkling of what was coming, and she talked of all subjects under the sun and so gayly and rapidly that he could not guess how her heart was fluttering under her blue dress.

"Gertrude," he said at last, let me talk now. I came here to ask you to be my wife. I love you, dear, oh, so much. Ever since the day I first drove by your side until now. I feel I must speak or go mad. Can you not love me a little bit, dear?"

"Not a little bit," said Gertrude, softly, "but a great deal," and she hid her pretty rosy face in her lover's shoulder.

Origin of Diamonds.

The origin of diamonds, which for so long has been a debated question, appears to be explained by a recent discovery near Kimberley.

In both the Indian and the Brazilian diamond fields the gem occurs like a pebble in certain gravelly strata, but has not been traced back to any rock that gives any indication of its genesis. After the discovery of diamonds in the river sand of some South American rivers a peculiar material of a brownish buff color which turned to a dark bluish tint, was found. It became darker as the miners dug down. The diamonds lay in this material, together with several other materials, such as garnets, iron ores, augite, olivine, etc. Excavations, begun systematically, were eventually carried on on such a large scale that near Kimberley they reached a depth of more than 1,400 feet.

Here the rock is about as hard as ordinary limestone. The blue ground is found only in limited areas. The rocks around are of dark shades, banded with hard sandstone, in which sheets or dikes of basalt or some material which was once in a molten condition are occasionally found. The blue ground fills a sort of shaft of colossal size in these other rocks and is itself cut up by similar dikes. The opinions of geologists differ as to whether the gems are produced where they now lie or have been formed of some volcanic explosions. Experts now tend to the belief that the blue ground in which diamonds were found is not the true birthplace. The boulders are often watermarked and may have rested for ages in an ancient gravel at the very bottom of sedentary rocks of the district. In course of time volcanic explosions shattered the rocky floor in which the diamonds were imbedded, of which the boulders were only samples, and dispersed it, together with the overlying materials.

It is believed that this is the true explanation of the formation of the diamond bearing blue ground.

Tea Drinking and Cold Feet.

Professor Hutchinson, F.R.S., reports the case of a lady who could not take tea because it made her feet icy cold and wet with perspiration.
She thought that the cold was chiefly affected and that the hands were also made cold, but not so markedly as the feet. Mr. Hutchinson had long been familiar with the fact that tea made the feet of some persons cold, but did not know that cold perspiration attended it. He believed the coldness to be caused by contraction of the arteries, inasmuch as the feet shrank. Alcohol had usually an opposite effect.

HEALTH IN APRIL.

Use The World's Greatest Spring Medicine.

Paine's Celery Compound

It is The One Remedy Gladly and Universally Recommended by the Ablest Doctors.

It is well known that almost every condition of winter life has been detrimental to the health of thousands of men and women.

The blood has become clogged and impure; the skin is unhealthy and muddy; showing eruptions and pimples; the eyes are dull and sunken;
the nerves are unsteady; there is loss in weight, and stomach troubles, rheumatism and neuralgia make life a misery by day and night.

Paine's Celery Compound is the only spring medicine that the best physicians are now recommending, because no other remedy can so quickly bring new and vigorous health to the ailing, half-dead and broken-down.

Paine's Celery Compound cures disease by first purifying the blood and enriching and strengthening the nerves. It makes the weak strong;
it regulates and invigorates the entire nervous system from the brain to the minutest nerve filament.

Seeing that the experience of tens of thousands has proven that Paine's Celery Compound is the greatest of all spring medicines—the one remedy that the world could not lose today at any price—it is foolish and suicidal to defer its use. One or two bottles used at this season will surely banish all symptoms of disease and fit you for the work and duties of spring and summer.

When you are buying Paine's Celery Compound see that you get the genuine with the name "Paine's" and the "Stalk of Celery" on the label; other compounds are frauds and deceptions.

Rebels Beaten at Bolivar.

New York, March 31.—The Venezuelan Government official reports that severe fighting occurred near the city of Bolivar on March 22, says a despatch to the Herald. General Panaloma, commanding the Government troops, it is announced, defeated Gen. Hernandez.
His forces killed 223 of the revolutionists, took 80 prisoners and captured a large quantity of arms and ammunition.

Too Small.

Uncle 'Zek' Watson was accustomed to seeing good sized squares of cup cake, 'lection cake or gingerbread on the supper table, and when he had his first plate of ice cream in a city
restaurant he looked with some dis-
favor upon the macaroons and small
sponge drops which accompanied it.

"How do you like it?" asked his niece, who was doing the honors of
the city for her uncle.

"The ice cream is first rate," said
Uncle 'Zek'. "I call it extra good.
But when you come to these things,"
he added, lifting one of the sponge
"lady fingers" and surveying it doubt-fully, "I presume to say they're all
right enough, what there is of 'em,
but there isn't enough of 'em; just
nothing but gape and swallow!"—
Youth's Companion.

Books.

When I consider what some books
have done for the world and what they
are doing, how they keep up our hope,
awaken new courage and faith, soothe pains, give an ideal life to those whose homes are hard and cold, bind together
distant ages and foreign lands, create
new worlds of beauty, bring down
truths from heaven, I give eternal thanks for this gift—James Freeman Clarke.

Woe of Millionaire.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had renewed his business and were to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 50 years.
When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were next day for their partnership. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane.

Both were shrewd in business.
Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a peasant, and would do nothing but ruin.
Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one,
and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pecked the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Rich Londoner Dead.

London, Ont., March 28.—John Coots, for over fifty years identified with the business interests of this city, died this to $300,000. He leaves a son, who will inherit his wealth.

They Keep me Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, explaining his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the tarantulas (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the tarantulas are well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have descended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the

A Race With the Sun.

The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 600 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m.

Should he find his unending day memonious, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had not a short time before.

THE PARIS SHOW.

The Paris exposition catalogue will contain 100,000 names.
The parks of Milwaukee will be part of the exhibit of that city at the Paris exposition. A series of photographic views of the public parks of that city will be shown.

It took a bid of 275,000 francs to secure the privilege of letting out seats for the Paris exposition of 1900. For the 1899 exhibition the successful bid for the monopoly was 25,000 francs.
Germar Must of Indiana is personally supervising an elaborate exhibit for his state at the Paris exposition. One of the features of this will be a series of large photographs to show the progress of the "good roads" movement in Indiana, where there are now 50,000 miles of graded and grouted highway.

LORD PAUNCEFOTE WILL RECEIVE HIS REWARD.British Ambassador at Washington to be Made Viscount for Distinguished Services.

LADY MINTO'S VISIT TO THE AMERICAN CAPITAL.

The First Lady of Canada is Receiving Much Honor at the Hands of Prominent Americans—Great Britain and the War in South Africa.

Washington, April 1.—It is rumored here that Lord Pauncefote will soon be raised to the rank of Viscount, as a further reward for his consenting to remain in service instead of retiring on his pension of $3,000 a year, as he is entitled to do. If this is done, no one will congratulate His Lordship more warmly than his American friends. Lord Pauncefote appears to be the only envoy to this country who has succeeded not only in gaining the good will of Americans and Englishmen but also of Canadians who are said to be congratulating themselves on his continuance in office. This feat in itself is sufficient to stamp Lord Pauncefote as a diplomat of the first water, and it may be anticipated that his stay in Washington will be prolonged, not merely for a few months, but more likely still for a few years, since after the conclusion of the war in South Africa, it will be more than ever necessary for England to have a man of his diplomatic caliber in the American National Capital, owing to the fact that the Canadians who have rendered the home government such valuable services in the South African trouble, will be more than ever eager that their interests at Washington should be cared for.

It has been generally supposed that Lord Pauncefote was sent to this capital in the first place as the result of an intrigue against him. At that time, the post was that of a Minister Plenipotentiary only and was not considered anything equal to that of permanent head of the Foreign Office in London, then held by him. It is now positively stated, however, that it was Lord Pauncefote himself who appealed for the mission at Washington. He was shortly after the unfortunate Lord St. Albans episode, and Lord Pauncefote was far-sighted enough to see the almost unparalleled opportunities that existed at Washington for restoring the sadly diminished prestige of English diplomacy, and of rendering invaluable service to his country. Moreover he had always felt a particular sympathy for America and Americans, and was convinced that he would feel at home in Washington.

TREATY RATIFIED.

The Senate has ratified the treaty between England and the United States relative to the estates of citizens of one country who die in the other. Article four was amended so as to provide for the extension of the provisions of the agreement to dependencies of the United States, only upon a direction "the law making power of the United States," thus relieving the treaty of the criticism that it conferred too great power upon the President. As drafted the treaty conferred upon subjects of Great Britain in the United States and upon those of the United States in Great Britain "the law right in acquiring, possessing, or disposing of property" as is possessed by the citizens of the country itself. The words "acquiring" and "possessing" were stricken out.

MAIL ARRANGEMENTS.

The Post Office Department has given notice of the mail arrangements for Cape Nome, Alaska, during the coming season. Four round trips will be made from San Francisco, Cal., by ocean steamer sailing from that port about May 25, July 5, July 25, and August 15, 1900. Three round trips will be made from Seattle, Wash., the steamer sailing from that port about May 25, July 5, July 25, 1900. For the season of navigation postmasters will accept parcels, as well as letters, for registration for Nome, Alaska; for St. Michael, Alaska; for all post offices on the Yukon river in Alaska; for St. Michael, Alaska; and all offices north of St. Michael.

Up to the mailing of the steamers registered letters only, and not parcels, will be conveyed to Alaska over a route from Sitka, through Dawson and down the Yukon river.

R. H. L. Brown, the American mining engineer, whose claim of some $5,000,000 against the Transvaal government was set aside by President Kruger after being allowed by the courts, passed through this city on his way from Mexico recently. Speaking of the African war, he said: "The tide seems to have at last turned in favor of the English, but it could not well be otherwise in the end, when the superior resources in wealth and men England had to draw on were taken into consideration. But Pretoria has yet to be taken and wicked fighting and enormous loss of life to the English soldiers lie between Lord Roberts and this wished-for goal, and when he leads the Guards into the capital of the Boer Republic, as he has promised, they, I think, will be a badly diminished organization. Across the Vaal river the country becomes broken and mountainous, and will afford to the Boers innumerable natural fortresses from which to fight, and of which I do not doubt, they will take full advantage and render the price of the conquest of the Transvaal heavy indeed."

LADY MINTO.

Among the recent visitors to the Capitol was a party composed of Lady Minto, wife of the Earl of Minto, Governor-General of Canada; Mrs. Drummond, and Mrs. Frewen and Arthur Gwyn, of the Governor-General's staff. Earlier in the day Lady Minto accompanied Senator Wolcott to the White House to call upon the President.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

Peace and in War—A splendid lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambezi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and heeded to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn resenting the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beautiful and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intelligence and luxury of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but, nestled in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a pictorial history incident to the progress of the war, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude.

In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wynne Flemming, an African whose authority upon South African matters is world-wide acknowledged. This gentleman, born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambezi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of each stage in the progress of the war.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest and finest buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxurious vegetation and glorious climate, its wide acres of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals lend an air of peace and tranquillity, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred million of dollars are invested, has been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grivances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

The report that the Bell Telephone Company has issued orders prohibiting its employees in the "central" from eating lunches on account of the complaints of subscribers is indignantly denied.

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absent-minded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shied for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems:

Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absent-minded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter is its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in communities, the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as soon as generally is an animal who usually refuses to live the life spanned out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forthwith by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopuslike brain cell is a living little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is conducted by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now, the object of this "strike" is simply to avoid overwork, for each tiny cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in those patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupefied, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now cease working, and the man sleeps like one dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken, the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Geniuses are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and, singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England, for example, Cromwell was a hypochondriac and had visions, Dean Swift inherited insanity and was himself not a little mad, Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley," Charles Lamb went crazy, Johnson was another hypochondriac, Coleridge was a morbid man, Milton was of a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (modern ideas of madness are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity as depicted or, to phrase it more softly, induced disturbance of the mental equilibrium.

In The Summer

Of life a woman may find herself fading and failing. She doesn't understand it. She goes to doctors, who treat her for this or that, but she gets no better. She grows frail and pale. She can just "drag about the house," but has no pleasure in life.

Many such women have taken advantage of Dr. Pierce's offer of free consultation by letter, and have been restored by Dr. Pierce's treatment to perfect health. There is no more wonderful medicine for women than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Its action upon the womanly organs is at once apparent in the decrease of pain and the increase of strength. It cures female weakness and such diseases as take away the strength and beauty of women.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence private. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"Before I commenced to use your medicine I was in a bad condition (for eight years) and my doctor tried to write Mrs. Lettie Askew, of Garysburg, Northampton Co., N. C. 'They, of course, gave me at the time some relief, but it did not last long. I was some days in my bed and some days I dragged about the house. I have used five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and five of the Golden Medical Discovery, and four vials of the 'Pellucid' and I feel like a new woman, and I want the world to know it."

The action of the "Favorite Prescription" is assisted by the use of "Pleasant Pellets" when the bowels are irregular.

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

Making Them is a Very Dangerous Trade

Perils That Result from the Manufacture of Nitroglycerine.

Nitroglycerine and its peculiarities are little known, even in localities where it is made. People generally give it wide berth, and know several number know how it is manufactured. Probably in no place in the United States is there such a great amount of the explosive used as in the Indiana oilfields, says The Philadelphia Press. Indiana has four nitroglycerine factories, and they are seldom visited by curious people.

The explosive is made from a composition of acids and glycerin. It is generally pale yellow in color, and quite colorless when pure. It is odorless, and has a sweet, pungent, aromatic flavor. If touched by one's tongue, or even brought into contact with the skin, it will produce a severe headache. A large tank, called an agitator, is where the fluid is mixed, and the mixture is composed of equal parts of nitric and sulphuric acid. Inside the tank are several paddles, like those of a churn, and it is here that the real danger exists. The paddles are put in operation and a steady stream of sweet glycerin is turned into a vat until 250 pounds are thoroughly mixed with the 1,500 pounds of acid. The chemicals coming in contact produce an intense heat, and in order to obviate the danger of fire, the tank and several paddles encircling and running through the vat. At 85 degrees F. a red vapor, almost like fire, arises. If cutting off the supply of glycerin in the agitator does not lower the temperature, it is time to say farewell. Before 90 degrees are reached nothing but atoms of the structure and its contents are left.

Colonel William A. Myers, of Bolton, N. Y., was the man who made and exploded the first round of nitroglycerine in an oil well. He built the first factory in the United States, near Titusville, Pa., in 1868. Up to that time powder had been used to torpedo oil wells. It was then that an explosive that could be discharged under water was found in nitroglycerine. Colonel Myers' father was a Philadelphia chemist and taught his son how to make it.

The first well torpedoed was on Colonel Mills' lease, near Titusville, and the charge consisted of only two and the charge consisted of only two pounds. Oil was worth $9 a barrel then, and a torpedo that would double the production of a well was worth almost what the maker chose to ask for it. Colonel Myers built 12 different factories in different parts of the oil regions from 1868 to 1888, when he retired from the business. Only one of the original factories stands intact to-day. Myers made several fortunes and spent his money like a prince, but, fortunately for him, he still has a snug sum laid by.

"An operation for appendicitis," the surgeon assured the sufferer, "is rather a serious thing, of course, but it is not necessarily an alarming one, and it will demonstrate, moreover, just how much fortitude you have."

"Yes," replied the patient; "I suppose I will show just what's in me. Go ahead,"—Chicago Tribune.

A Baking Torment.

The creek is again in an angry mood, the water being very high. The ice, however, is pretty well cleared out, and unless the water continues to rise, their will be little damage done.

Apprentice Wanted.

The Times requires a smart boy for night work to set headings and run messages. Must be good at spelling. A fine chance for smart lad. Apply at Times Bookstore in daytime, or to Mr. F. Thomas at night.

His Thumb Amputated.

Albert Turcotte, an employee of the knob department of the Lock Mfg. Co., met with a painful accident yesterday morning. A drop hammer which he was manipulating crushed the thumb of his left hand and it was found necessary to amputate it. Dr. Pleson performed the operation. Mr. Turcotte has been an employee for twelve years and it is the first accident which has occurred to him.

For Adoption.

Boy two and one half years old. Protestant. Town and County. Apply to Secretary of Children's Aid Society.

County Maps.

An Excellent Photo.

Mr. G. F. Whitten, photographer, has just placed on view an excellent group picture of the students of the Business College. It is 30x40 inches in size and there are 102 figures in it.

Lakefield Canal Work.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of Lakefield, was in town yesterday and favored the Times with a call. He says that high water is likely to interfere somewhat with work on the canal at that point. The water is gradually rising and is bound to be very high this spring, on account of the great depth of snow in the woods.

Not Good Advertisers.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

Arrangement for the Institutions for the Present Month.

The Ministerial Association met yesterday morning in the Y.M.C.A. parlor. The Rev. Herbert Symonds, M.A., president, occupied the chair. There were also present Rev. Messrs. Kilgour, Bennett, Davidson, Crossley, Moore, Armitage and Foster.

Arrangements were made for Hospital and Protestant Home as follows—
Nicholls Hospital.—April 2, Rev. H. Symonds; April 9, Rev. J. E. Moore; April 16, Rev. S. J. Shorey; April 23, Rev. J. C. Davidson; April 30, Rev. J. Bastow.
Protestant Home.—April 4, Rev. H. Symonds; April 11, Rev. J. E. Moore; April 18, Rev. S. J. Shorey; April 25, Rev. J. C. Davidson; May 2, Rev. J. Bastow.

The Rev. J. C. Davidson brought attention to the deliverance of the Grand Jury with reference to the inadequate provision made for the aged and infirm, and deplored the legions that appeared to prevail in the community. The committee appointed to consider a deliverance for next meeting. The members are Rev. Messrs. H. Symonds, J. C. Davidson, Dr. Torrance and W. A. Guntion. The Rev. J. E. Moore, Ph.D., gave a very able and eloquent address on the Resurrection.

Appreciative remarks were spoken by the members present.

The Rev. J. C. Davidson will give the paper for the month of May.

A Shady Transaction.

On Saturday morning the police were informed that a certain kind of hay which was weighed on the market scales had concealed therein two boys, who for a bribe of ten cents each had loaned themselves to increase the weight of the load. A warrant was issued for Frank Walsh, an Otonabee farmer, as being the man who benefitted by the transaction and he was seen on the street and questioned in regard to the matter. He stated, however, that he had sold no hay on the day in question, but that his brother Fred had done so. Fred was accordingly brought in from the farm near Keene by Constable Stewart, yesterday morning, but he was able to elude himself and informed the police that they had the right man the first time when Frank was in the tolls. Fred was released, of course, and the police are now on Frank's trail. The matter will come before the court this morning.

Nicholls Hospital.

Appended is the report for the month from the Nicholls Hospital—
No. of patients remaining in hospital—25
No. treated ..... 48
Pay patients ..... 35
Free patients ..... 12
From town ..... 29
From other places ..... 19
Cured ..... 30
Improved ..... 2
Died ..... 1
Dr. Scott, physician for the month.
In attendance on private patients, Drs. Halliday, Boucher, Greer, Carmichael, Eastwood, Brown, Young, McCullough.

Norwood to Pay.

Norwood will have to pay for the maintenance of Ward Colby at the Toronto Industrial School. The matter came before Police Magistrate Dumble yesterday, and it was clearly shown that Colby had not been a resident of Peterborough within a year. Peterborough will thus save $2 per week for five years. Due credit should be accorded Chief Hazel for following this matter up.

Strathcona's Horse.

A concise and complete history of the formation of "Strathcona's Horse" is given in the April Canadian Magazine by Lieut. Cooper, Q.O.B. One of the features of the article is a complete list of the officers and their previous service. There are pictures of Lord Strathcona, the review at Ottawa, Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressing the corps, the parade at Montreal, a group of the Western horses, the Montevideo, and a magnificent group of twenty-four officers. The embarkation scenes are cleverly described by Emily P. Weaver. These articles are worth preserving and are not the only excellent features of the April number of our national magazine.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Bert Bellegam is in town for a few days.

Mr. M. J. McClellan spent Sunday in town with his family.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard, of Lakefield, favored the Times with a call yesterday.

Mr. Lionel King has returned to Toronto to resume his studies in medicine.

We are pleased to learn that Mrs. W. F. Johnston, who has been seriously ill, is recovering.

Mr. Percy Strickland, of Lakefield, was in town yesterday and favored the Times with a call. He says that high water is likely to interfere somewhat with work on the canal at that point. The water is gradually rising and is bound to be very high this spring, on account of the great depth of snow in the woods.

Dr. Pentland, of town, received word from Collingwood yesterday of the death of Miss Nellie Pentland, daughter of Mr. Edward Pentland, in the 20th year of her age.

Messrs. W. J. Sims and A. L. Davis, left yesterday for Syracuse and other cities in New York State for the purpose of purchasing additional machinery for the Trent Valley Pulp Co.

The little girls who conducted the patriotic bazaar, were, through the kindness of Aid. Deane, photographed by Mr. R. M. Roy.

The steamer Alice Ethel, of the Trent Navigation Company, is undergoing extensive repairs prior to the opening of the season's business.

Captain Chas. Calcott commenced yesterday morning to fit up the steamer Eclipse for the season's business. She is at the Wolfe street wharf.

By the horse and bicycle mutually looking out for each other's rights, there will be a kind of doubling up for wheel and whoa when wheeling begins.

Citizens of Fenelon Falls have contributed material for making trousers for the newly-organized baseball club of that town. Here is an example worthy of imitation.

Mr. Chas. Gundersen has already sent out 11 sets of harness with set-tires to the Northwest. The last set were sent out with Mr. Thomas Franks, of Emily. This shows that there is considerable immigration to the west this season.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

In a cricket match at Modder River, South Africa, G. Dawday cleared bowled seven wickets in two overs, four of them with consecutive balls.

The opening cricket game of the season will be started on Easter Monday at the oval, between Surrey and London County teams.

The annual meeting of the Marylebone Club will be held May 2nd, at Lord's, London. The members will be asked to confirm the following alterations in the laws of cricket, recommended by the committee—1. Six balls to constitute an over. 2. Declaration permissible on and after the luncheon interval on the second day. 3. The side which leads by 150 runs in a three day's match, 100 runs in a two day's match, or 75 runs in a one day's match, shall have the option of calling on the other side to follow its findings.

The smallest score made in an innings in a first class match in Australia is 23, by South Australia against Victoria. The lowest score in England was made by the Oxford University team against the Marylebone Club's eleven, 13 runs.

George Griffin, who was a member of the Australian teams that played in 1887, 1888 and 1889, has scored over 10,000 runs in first class matches. He has made seven centuries.

The organization of the Baseball Club was effected last night. The meeting was held in the Oriental Parlors and was attended by over fifty enthusiasts. The feeling was strong for a good season of ball playing, both with foreign clubs and with clubs composing a city league.

The following officers were elected—
Patron and Patronesses—Mr. and Mrs. J. Kennedy; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Stratton; Mr. and Mrs. C. F. McGill.
Hon. President—G. W. Hutton.
First Vice President—C. LeBrun.
Second Vice President—H. R. H. Kenner.

Secretary Treasurer—R. A. W. Hay.
Manager—Graham.
Executive Committee—M. Lyall, E. S. Clarry, C. Butler, Sam Ray and W. Salisbury.

Messrs. McCabe and C. Graham were appointed delegates to the convention of the Midland League at Port Hope next Monday.

The outlook for the game is very bright and there should be lots of sport in town this summer.

Will Chamber's Sad Death.

The jury in the inquest over the remains of the late W. R. Chambers, who was found in a dying condition on the street at midnight in Montreal, brought in an open verdict. There seems to be little doubt that the young man was murdered, although not the slightest clue can be secured that will throw any light on the mystery. The deceased's friends in Peterborough will be sorry to learn that the murder remains has not been discovered.

(NOTE.—The Times does not hold itself in any way responsible for the opinions expressed by its correspondents.—Ed. Times.)

Why Are the Walks Low?

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—People do not seem to understand why the pavements are laid so low down that they are covered with ice and water from early fall until spring. I can tell you, Mr. Editor. It is because it was to the interests of the contractors that they were not built up. It would mean more material and as the contract simply provides for so much per yard, surface, it stands to reason that the less material that is used the better for the contractors.

But why the Town Engineer failed to do his duty, I am not able to explain. Your readers, however, can surmise.

RATEPAYER.

About the Transvaal.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Please state (1) When was gold first discovered in the Transvaal? 2. What is the Rand? 3. What is the Boer War? 4. Where did the Boers come from originally? 5. What does Oom Paul mean? 6. Who fired the first shot in the war between the Boers and British?

SUBSCRIBER.

Ann.—1. Gold was found in the Transvaal in 1875 or thereabouts; in 1885 the Rand valley was proclaimed a public gold field. 2. Rand means edge or cliff, and by extension the country above and beyond the cliff. 3. The Boer patois or dialect. 4. From Holland and France. 5. Uncle Paul. 6. The Boers, when on October 13 they blew up an armored train and shelled the wreck; fifteen British soldiers were killed in the wreck and the shell fire.

SERIOUS RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

Neither son Thrown Out on the Road Roadway and Seriously Injured.

Lindsay, April 2.—While Mrs. John Brown and son Herbert, of Lifford, were driving into Lindsay Friday behind team of spirited young colts the animals took fright and ran away when near Mount Horeb. Herbert leaped out and endeavored to catch them by the heads, but was knocked down, trampled on, and run over. Mrs. Brown was thrown out a couple of hundred yards from the starting point, and was very badly injured, sustaining a fracture of the right thigh, dislocation of the knee cap, and several very painful bruises.

Some parties came along a few minutes later and rendered every assistance possible to Mrs. Brown. Herbert was in a semi-conscious condition when picked up. They were driven home, where Drs. White and Jeffers dressed their injuries. Mrs. Brown's making satisfactory progress, but her son, who is suffering from concussion of the brain, is not yet out of danger.

Between one thing and another inflicting this Irish visit, Victoria should hardly go there without kissing the Blarney Stone.

GENERAL CRONJE SAILS TO HIS ISLAND PRISON.

The Captive Commander, Colonel Schiel and One Thousand Boers Go to St. Helena.

BOERS AMAZED AT BRAVERY OF TOMMY ATKINS.

Commandant Blake, With the Irish Brigade, Was With the Boers in Saturday's Engagement—British Government Unaware That an American Commanded.

London, April 3.—The War Office has been informed by the Associated Press that it has no information as to who commanded the Boers in the affair leading to the capture of the British guns, but it places no reliance whatever in the supposition that an American citizen or anyone connected with the United States took part in it.

Bushman's Kop, Monday, April 2. Hearing that the waterworks were destroyed the correspondents of the Reuters Telegram Agency rode forward to-day. Arrived at the top of the hill a volley was fired at him, and a moment later a man appeared on the top of the crest calling on him to stop firing and saying he was unarmed and desired to talk with him, the correspondent dismounted and that this man was an American who declared that he accompanied the Boers only as a sightseer. He said that never in his life had he seen such magnificent pluck as that shown by the British Saturday, and he asserted that not only himself but the whole Boer army were profoundly touched with admiration at their gallant bravery.

It appears that the Boers never doubted their ability to capture the whole British force and were dumbfounded at the courage displayed and the mastery way in which the force was able to escape from the death-trap. The correspondent's informant refused to give any information regarding the Boer forces, or their movements, but it appears that the present force was detached from Kroonstad, joined the detached forces, and again divided north to Thaba Nchu, one portion following the other and meeting Col. Broadwood's retiring forces. The burghers engaged consisted of Schoeman's commando which was accompanied by many foreigners. Commandant J. I. Blake was present with the Irish Brigade and other foreigners.

The fight was marked by many acts of individual courage, and their countrymen in other parts of the Republic are being expelled wholesale from the Transvaal. On the other hand the Boers are so demoralized that it is impossible to induce many, now on furlough, to return to the front. They are generally adverse to defending Biggarsburg and are divided with reference to the wisdom of continuing the war. President Kruger has prevailed on Mr. Steyn to make one big stand before surrendering.

Cape Town, April 3. General Cronje, Col. Schiel and one thousand Boer prisoners sailed for St. Helena to-night.

BOERS MAKE A STAND. They are Trying to Over the Withdrawal of the Guns.

London, April 3.—Lord Roberts' despatches seem to finally dispose of the earlier report of the recovery of the guns, and the fact that the Boers remain in occupation of the waterworks is taken as an indication that they intend to make a stand sufficiently long to recover the withdrawal of the guns and wagons to a place of safety, although the absence of definite information regarding the movements of General French's cavalry makes it difficult to estimate their chances of success.

A despatch from Maseru, Basutoland, dated Monday, April 3, says the Earl of Rothes, who is acting as war correspondent for the Daily Mail in South Africa, and who left there April 1, on his way to Thaba Nchu, has probably fallen into the hands of the Boers.

CENSOR HARD AT WORK. Mutilated Messages Indicate Developments at the Front.

London, April 3.—Press messages from the seat of war to-day are greatly curtailed and mutilated, which indicates that there are developments at the front.

CANADIANS WERE SUCCESSFUL. Second Contingent Pacifics the District of Van Wyckville.

London, April 3.—The alarming increase in the mortality among the Boer prisoners at Simonstown has induced the authorities to promise to remove to the mainland the prisoners who are not going to St. Helena.

A despatch from Van Wyckville, dated Monday, April 2, indicates the pacifica-

TRYING TO RESCUE THE LOST GUNS.

It is Probable That Gen. French is Making a Detour to Cut Off the Enemy.

London, April 3.—The sequel to the capture of Colonel Broadwood's guns, have arrived there quite as early as baggage and men has not yet been told, though it is to be hoped that it may prove a bright one. There is a chance, though remote, that the canon and convey may be recaptured. It will be remembered that Lord Roberts' official account of the affair yesterday stopped with the Ninth Division to the rescue and its arrival upon the scene of action followed by General French with two cavalry brigades in support. As to the further whereabouts of General French nothing is known, for there is no mention of him in the fighting which resulted in the rescue of Broadwood's column and the pressing back of the Boers. A second despatch from the Commander-in-Chief states that the British are still in touch with the Boers, though the engagement has not been renewed. It also appears that the Boers hold the waterworks from which Bloemfontein obtains its supply. The absence of any reference to General French is bound to raise hopes that he may be engaged in an effort to surprise the Boers and recapture the guns. It is quite possible that he may have been ordered with his cavalry to make a detour to the north for the purpose of intercepting the enemy in the act of carrying off their valuable trophies. If General French had intended to proceed direct to the waterworks he would have arrived there quite as early as the infantry, for he did not start out much later and should have been able to overtake them. The fact that he did not do so and that the infantry arrived and engaged the enemy for a considerable period without assistance from the cavalry brigades inspires the theory that General French is working out other plans, the success or failure of which must be heard of very quickly. Sufficient attention has not been drawn to the forced march of the ninth division from Bloemfontein to the scene of fight. The division, which includes the Canadian contingent, marched 18 miles from daylight to 2 p.m., a truly notable achievement under the burning African sun. It must also be noticed that Smith-Dorrien's brigade, in which are the Canadians took a prominent part in the action which resulted in saving Broadwood's force from capture. In crossing the Modder to come to close quarters with the enemy the brigade undertook a turning movement, the Gordons and Cornwalls leading and the Shropshires and Canadians in support, which was successfully accomplished. The list of casualties in the fight is not yet to hand and consequently it is not known to what extent the Canadians and their fellow soldiers suffered, if at all.

HOW FIVE GUNS WERE SAVED. Major Taylor Warned Those in Charge and They Halted.

Bloemfontein, April 3.—A Boer commando, under Dewet and a German called Reichmann, out-maneuvred Colonel Broadwood. At daylight the Boers opened a musketry fire as the camp upped. The Boers pushed out towards Bloemfontein, followed by U and Q Batteries of the horse artillery. The road leads over a drift, where the varying nullahs and a railway embankment, under construction, formed a cul de sac. The enemy occupied. As the wagons dropped into the dip the Boers diverted them, without giving the alarm to the remainder of the column. U Battery was captured at point blank range. Major Taylor managed to slip away, and with Q Battery and Roberts' Horse, acting as escort. The latter galloped back. The enemy then opened a murderous fire at 200 yards range, stampeding the mules of U Battery, the drivers of which dismounted by order of the Boers. Q Battery retired 300 yards and gallantly attempted to save the situation. Eventually ten men and one officer were left fighting the battery, and seeing that it was useless to stay the officers extricated five guns, with a pair of horses to each. The cavalry broke through the cordon to the north.

Col. Broadwood, the leader of the ill-fated column, belongs to the 13th Lancers, and was appointed to command Warren's Light Horse at the beginning of January. He is 37 years of age, and was one of Lord Kitchener's most trusted lieutenants in the expedition to Khartoum. He has been spoken of as an officer with a future, and a comrade in the Egyptian army described him a year ago as a man who always sleeps with one eye open.

ALL the accounts of the fight from a British source concur in stating that Col. Broadwood's force of about 1,000 men was outnumbered by the Boers 8 to 10 to 1, and the arrival of the infantry division including the Canadians, along with French's cavalry, alone prevented the annihilation of Col. Broadwood's command.

According to the Standard's correspondent, one of the Princes of Teck was in charge of the convey, but which one is not indicated. He adds that the Prince is safe.

CANADIAN COMMISSIONERS. If the 44 Offered Are Taken Up More Will Be Offered.

London, April 3.—In the House of Commons to-day the Parliamentary Secretary of the War Office, Mr. George Wyndham, said that if all the forty-four commissions in the army offered to Canada were filled the Government was quite ready to offer further commissions.

LANDROSTS ARRESTED. Free State Officials Who Have Been Playing Spy and Traitor.

Springfontein, April 2.—General Gatacre has gone to Bloemfontein to visit Lord Roberts.

Several landrosts have been arrested in small towns north of this place. They are suspected of giving information to the Boers.

BOERS HOLD WATERWORKS. British Shells Fail to Dislodge Enemy from Their Position.

Bushman's Kop, Monday, April 2.—The Boers are still occupying the waterworks, which the British shelled yesterday afternoon, the Boers replying.

JOINED THE BRITISH. Gen. Prinsoo, Former Free State Commandant Deserts Transvaal Forces.

Boer Camp, Small Dell, March 30.—Twenty-eight British prisoners have arrived here.

General Ian Prinsoo, former Free State commandant, who has been arrested on charge of high treason, is supposed to have deserted to the enemy.

THERE WERE MANY ACTS OF GREAT GALLANTRY!

Lord Roberts Sends His Official Report Regarding the Lamentable Loss of Guns.

A DESPERATE FIGHT MAY NOW BE IN PROGRESS. A Report That a Boer Commando Is Engaged With the British Sixty Miles South of Kroonstad—A Canadian Gunner Killed by Horse and Killed.

London, April 2.—The War Office has posted a despatch from Lord Roberts as follows: "Bloemfontein, April 2, 10.30 p.m.—In continuation of my telegram of March 31st there has been a considerable delay in getting accurate returns of the casualties, as the action took place twenty-two miles hence. The telegraph cable has been interrupted several times, cloudy weather has interfered with signalling, and although three have been no engagement since the force is continually in touch with the enemy.

Acts of Gallantry. There were many acts of conspicuous gallantry displayed during the day. Q Battery remained in action under a crossfire, at 1,200 yards, for some hours, the officers serving the guns as the casualties reduced the detachments. Several gallant attempts were made to bring in two guns, the teams of which had been killed, but at each attempt the horses were shot.

The Essex, Munster, Shropshire and Northumberland Mounted Infantry and Roberts' Horse covered the retirement of the guns from that position to the crossing of the drift found by the cavalry two miles further south, and withstood the determined attacks of the enemy, who in some cases, advanced within a hundred yards. Suddenly Surrounded. Q Battery of the Royal Horse Artillery was suddenly surrounded in the drift, and the officers and men were all made prisoners without a shot being fired. But Major Taylor and a sergeant-major succeeded in escaping in the confusion. Five guns were captured at the same time. Further details to-morrow.

A BATTLE IN PROGRESS. Report that a Boer Commando Is Engaged With British.

New York, April 3.—The Journal's London correspondent says that a Boer commando has marched 80 miles south from Kroonstad and its advance guard is now engaged in a desperate battle with Lord Roberts' force.

THE BOER REPORT OF IT. First They Claimed a Victory, Then Later Admitted Retreating.

Pretoria, Saturday, March 31.—There has been heavy fighting between Brandfort and Bloemfontein. The Wakkerstroom and Ermelo commandos attacked 7,000 British and drove them back, with heavy loss.

According to the reports of the wounded who have arrived here, fighting occurred all along the line. The federal troops held positions on the side and top of the mountain, while the British positions were on the opposite side of the hill. The British charged repeatedly, but were repulsed. The latest reports say that the federals were holding their own, but the final result of the fighting is not known here. The federal loss was nine killed and wounded.

Reports from Brandfort received later state that 2,000 attacked 3,000 British successfully, but that 13,000 British reinforcements arrived and the federals were compelled to retire. The federal loss, according to these reports, was slight.

PREMIER SCHREINER OBJECTS. He Thinks the Boer Prisoners Should Not Go to St. Helena.

London, April 3.—In the House of Commons yesterday, answering a question on the subject, the Government leader, Mr. A. J. Balfour, confirmed the statement that Premier Schreiner had expressed an objection to the removal of the Boer prisoners to the island of St. Helena. The Government, he added, had fully considered the objection, but was unable to alter its policy of sending a certain number of the prisoners to St. Helena. He explained that this policy was specially dictated by military considerations.

FIGHTING AT MAFEKING. Heavy Cannonading and Plummer's Column Reported Driven Back.

Pretoria, April 1.—Cannonading was again heard in the direction of Brandfort Saturday, and it is reported that very heavy fighting occurred Saturday around Mafeking.

It is added that Col. Plummer's relief column was compelled to retire with loss. No details have been received.

ADVANCE OF PLUMMER'S FORCES. LONDON, April 3.—A despatch to the Morning Post from Mafeking, via Gaberones, March 28, says that on March 19 news was received from the south and north that Col. Plummer was advancing and daily shelling the enemy. At the time the despatch was sent everything was well in the beleaguered town.

These two despatches contain the first intimation that Col. Plummer had again advanced after his recent repulse.

TROUBLE FOR REICHMAN. United States Officer Said to Have Been in Command of Boers.

New York, April 3.—Speculation is rife in this city, and also in Washington, as to whether it is true that Captain Carl Reichman, an American officer, was commanding the Boers who captured the British convey Saturday, and also whether the officer is Captain Carl Reichman, United States military attaché, sent to the Transvaal January 5 last.

The latter proposition is deemed extremely improbable. An officer would be dismissed from the service in disgrace if he joined the Boers while still holding a commission under the United States.

AID FOR TRANSVAAL. German Steamer Takes a Batch of Recruits into Delagoa Bay.

Lorenzo Marques, April 3.—A German steamer has arrived with 257 Boer recruits, mostly recruits for the Transvaal.

the lowest.

Your Committee, therefore, recommends that the contract for stationary be awarded to the Review Printing Co., and the contract for chemicals be awarded to Omond & Walsh.

We find that the amount expended for printing and stationery for the year 1899 was $714.82 and for the year 1899 $702.18. The expenditure for chemicals for 1899 was $90.83 and for 1899 $45.52. The cost of supplies therefore for 1899 was $550.75 less than these items cost for 1898.

A note to the report stated that the supplies for 1897 cost $924. The report was adopted as read.

Rifles Received. Trustees Ferguson, Chairman of Property Committee, reported that the 50 rifles ordered from Ottawa for the school boys' brigade have been received.

High School Inspector's Report. The report of the High School Inspector was received and found to be on the whole highly complimentary.

In this connection, Chairman Hamilton thought the Board should feel very much pleased in the exceedingly favorable report of the High School Inspector, particularly in respect to the highly satisfactory work accomplished by the Collegiate Institute teaching staff.

Delegates Appointed. Trustees Hartley and Eastwood were appointed delegates to attend the coming convention of the Provincial Association of School Trustees.

Board then adjourned.

Supervision Committee. Trustees Hill presented the report of Supervision Committee as follows:—

Gentlemen,—Your Supervision Committee asked for tenders in the usual way for supplies for the year current.

For the stationery supplies the tender from the Review Printing Co. was the lowest, and for chemical supplies the tender of Ormond & Walsh was lowest.

SPECIAL U. S. DESPATCHES

Summary of Events Transpiring Within Our Neighbour's Borders.

WHIST ASSOCIATION

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 4.—The annual meeting of the Michigan Whist Association opened here to-day, and will continue until Thursday. This meeting is unique in several ways, one being the ladies' playing, which is a new feature. It has drawn a larger attendance than usual.

STOCKHOLDERS MEET.

San Francisco, April 4.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Southern Pacific Company for the election of directors for the ensuing year is being held here to-day.

MEETING POSTPONED.

Pekin, Ill., April 4.—The annual convention of the King's Daughters and Sons, of Illinois, which was to have been held here from to-day to the 6th, has been postponed until next October, owing to the serious illness of Mrs. H. B. Goodwin, the state secretary.

MUSTER AND CAMPFIRE.

Washington, April 4.—The Gen. Guy V. Henry, garrison, No. 43, Regular and Volunteer Army and Navy Union, will hold a general muster, and campfire at Garrison Hall this evening.

BRYAN SPEAKS.

Portland, Ore., April 4.—William J. Bryan arrived here this morning and will speak to-day. He was given a warm reception, and there is a crush to gain admittance to hear his address. He is the idol of the masses here.

ART EXHIBIT.

Evansville, Ind., April 4.—The art exhibit under the auspices of the Evansville Art League opened here to-day. This league was recently formed by prominent art women of this city.

REPUBLICANS MEET.

Toledo, O., April 4.—The Republican Congressional Convention opened here to-day.

CONFERENCE.

Elkhart, Ind., April 4.—The fifty-seventh session of the North Indiana Conference opened here to-day, and will continue until Monday. An elaborate programme has been arranged. Bishop Cyrus D. Ross, of Philadelphia, is presiding. Methodists from all parts of the state are present. At this conference delegates will be selected to the General Conference, which will be held in Chicago in June.

SUNFLOWER LEAGUE.

Wichita, Kan., April 4.—The Sunflower League will hold a banquet here this evening. An invitation has been extended to William J. Bryan, but owing to his Northwestern stump-trip, he will be unable to attend. Other national characters are present.

GOOD ROADS.

Abilene, Kan., April 4.—A good roads convention of the local road overseers opened here to-day. Barney Sheridan, of Paola, delivered the principal address. The county spends $25,000 annually on its roads, of which $20,000, it is claimed, is wasted. This is the foundation of a lively row.

M. E. CONFERENCE.

Westminster, Md., April 4.—The session of the Methodist Episcopal Conference of Maryland opened here to-day. Delegates to the General Conference to be held in Chicago in June, will be selected. An interesting programme is being carried out.

CIRCUSES.

New York, April 4.—The Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' combined circuses, menageries and hippodromes will inaugurate their season at Madison Square garden to-night. The engagement will continue for sixteen days. The performances to be given will be on a larger scale than ever before seen at the Garden. Several European performers will be seen for the first time. These performers have been secured by James A. Bailey, part owner of the big show, who is now in Europe with his own aggregation. Nineteen male and female bareback riders, a greater number of equestrians than any like organization has ever before presented will be seen, as well as a contingent of twenty-five clowning. The roof of the Garden will be filled with the paraphernalia of aerial performers. There are enough attractions to fill three rings, elevated stages, pedestals, aerial space and a big rostrum. The menagerie will be augmented by numerous specimens of rare animals secured during the past winter.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMS.

Washington, April 4.—Civil service examinations are being held to-day at Omaha, and Hastings, Neb.; Mason City, Iowa; Aberdeen, S. D. and Laramie, Wyo., for the departmental service.

A PERSISTENT WOOLER.

New York, April 4.—James Lowell Putnam, of Boston, and Miss Eleanor Jay Robinson, one of the metropolis' most aristocratic young women, will be married to-day. Mr. Putnam is a relative of James Russell Lowell, the poet. He proposed to Miss Robinson 21 times before she accepted. Miss Robinson is a granddaughter of John Jay, one of the founders of the republic. Since the death of her mother, who has been an inseparable companion of her brother. When he went to Harvard, she moved to Cambridge. It was here she met Putnam.

HARVARD'S COACH ARRIVES.
Cambridge, Mass., April 4.—Dr. Nichols arrived here to-day to assume his duties as head coach of the Harvard University baseball team.

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

Making Them Is a Very Dangerous Trade
—Perils That Face the Manufacturer of Nitroglycerine.

Nitroglycerin and its peculiarities are little known, even in localities where it is made. People generally give it a wide berth, and even a man who knows how it is manufactured. Probably in no place in the United States is there such a great amount of the explosive used as in the Indiana oilfields, says The Philadelphia Press. Indiana has four nitroglycerin factories, and they are visited by curious people.

The explosive is made from a composition of acids and glycerin. It is generally pale yellow in color, and quite colorless when pure. It is odorless, and has a sweet, pungent, aromatic flavor. If touched by one's tongue, or even brought into contact with the skin, it will produce a severe headache. A large tank, called an agitator, is where the fluid is mixed, and the mixture is composed of equal parts of nitric and sulphuric acids. Inside the tank are several paddles, like those of a churn, and it is by these that the real danger arises. The paddles are put in operation and a steady stream of sweet glycerin is turned into a vat until 250 pounds are thoroughly mixed with the 1,500 pounds of acid. The chemicals coming in contact produce an intense heat, and in order to obviate the danger cold water is run through pipes encircling and running through the vat. At 68 degrees F. a red vapor almost like fire arises. If cutting off the supply of glycerin in the agitator does not lower the temperature, it is time to say farewell. Before 90 degrees are reached nothing but atoms of the structure and its contents are left.

Colonel William A. Myers, of Bellvue, N.Y., was the man who made and exploded the first round of nitroglycerin in an oil well. He built the first factory in the United States, near Titusville, Pa., in 1866. Up to that time powder had been used to torpedo oil wells. It was then that an explosive that could be discharged under water was found in nitroglycerin. Colonel Myers' father was a Philadelphia chemist and taught his son how to make it.

The first well torpedoed was on Colonel Miller's lease, near Titusville, and the charge consisted of only two pounds. The charge consisted of only two pounds. Oil was worth $9 a barrel then, and a torpedo that would double the production of a well was worth almost what the maker chose to ask for it. Colonel Myers built 12 different factories in different parts of the oil regions from 1868 to 1888, when he retired from the business. Only one of the original factories stands intact to-day. Myers made several fortunes and spent his money like a prince, but, fortunately for him, he still has a snug sum laid by.

A PICKPOCKET'S RUSE.

The Trick by Which He Once Got a Woman's Purse.

Jack Piggett, the noted pickpocket, used to tell a funny story about the difficulty he had in picking the pocket of a fashionably dressed woman who was looking in at the window of Shreve's jewelry store. It illustrates the hardships that the light fingered gentry are forced to endure in the pursuit of their profession and when first related was considered amusing not only by Piggett, but by the many to whom he confided his experience.

It was a cold winter evening, and the lady on whose purse Piggett had designs stood looking at the holiday display so temptingly displayed. Piggett said that he tried all the arts known to his craft for the extraction of the wallet, but all in vain, until, as a last resort, he fished a toothpick from his pocket and, reaching around, tickled the lady's ear. Instinctively she raised her hand to brush away the invading insect or whatever it might be and in so doing let go of her pocketbook that she was carrying in the pocket of her coat.

It was only an instant, but it was long enough for the expert pickpocket to get in his work, and when she put her hand back her money was gone, and in the crowd around her she could not identify the pale faced, daintily dressed young man at her side as the person who had robbed her, and if she had accused him there would have been no proof against him, as the swag was at once passed to a girl who stood ready to receive it and run. Piggett was not even arrested for this crime, and the lady's ludicrous error furnished material for mirth long after.—San Francisco Bulletin.

His Opportunity.
"An operation for appendicitis," the surgeon assured the sufferer, "is rather a serious thing, of course, but it is not so seriously alarming one, and it will demonstrate, moreover, just how much fortitude you have."
"Yes," replied the patient; "I suppose it will show just what's in me. Go ahead."—Chicago Tribune.

FINANCIAL AND MINING STOCKS

MR. BOWSER'S TRIBULATIONS

He Comes Home Loaded With Figures and Meets Several Waterloo.

That Mr. Bowser was about to make a break of some sort was apparent to Mrs. Bowser before he had been home five minutes, but she asked no questions, and he managed to hang on to himself until after dinner. Then he rubbed his hands together and chuckled wittily and said:

"I suppose that if I should tell you that I expect to make a clean thousand dollars a month on the outside for the next five years you'd call it one of my fads, wouldn't you?"

"Perhaps not," answered Mrs. Bowser, doubtfully. "Are you going to speculate?"

"Not at all, I have simply struck a sure thing."

"If it's a sure thing it will be nice. What is it?"

"I'll tell you, though you won't understand. Not one woman in ten thousand has a business head on her. I have often wished you knew something of business, so that I could talk to you. It isn't your fault that the Lord created you to read novels and gad around to the stores in search of bargains, and so I don't lay it up against you. I'll tell you what my new move is. I'm going into hogs."

"I can understand that much," quietly replied Mrs. Bowser. "You are going to raise hogs in order to supply the market with pork."

"That's the plan to a dot, and you deserve praise for catching on so quickly. I propose to buy 1,000 pigs. A pig six months old can be bought for $1."

"And 1000 pigs for $1,000."

"That's it. I invest $1,000 in pigs. At the age of two years every pig is ready to be made into pork. The average weight of a two-year-old pig ready for the pork barrel is 200 pounds. Fresh pork is worth 13 cents per pound. That is 26 dollars for every pig, or $25 clear profit. Any man with an ounce of brains in his head can figure $25,000 clear profit in two years. Is there any fad about that?"

"I'm sorry I haven't got a business head on me," said Mrs. Bowser as she got pencil and paper, "but I will figure with you a little. Where are you going to fatten your hogs?"

"Why, on a farm, of course. You don't suppose I'm going to turn the basement of our house into a pig pen, do you?"

"But where is your farm?"

"Mr. Bowser's jaw dropped. He hadn't figured on a farm."

"A farmer figures that it costs 6 cents per pound to make pork for market," continued Mrs. Bowser. "Those are his figures even when he owns his farm and grows his own corn. It will take, in addition to all other feed, at least twenty bushels of corn for every one of your pigs. Have you figured on buying 20,000 bushels of corn, Mr. Bowser?"

He began to flush up and breathe hard, but he made no reply.

"To care for a thousand hogs you must hire at least five men. It will cost you quite a sum to get them together. There will be more or less loss to figure on. You must also figure on butchering and getting your pork to market. And you haven't counted in—"

"Woman, do you take me for a fool?" shouted Mr. Bowser as he jumped off his chair and frightened the family cat under the piano.

"Not at all," she calmly replied. "A fool would go into this hog scheme and lose $5,000 instead of making $25,000, but you won't."

He didn't know whether to bluff it out or give in gracefully, but finally decided to do the latter. Her facts and figures were beyond dispute and had laid him cold, but for fear she would feel puffed up over it, he said:

"Of course, I should have figured it all out to a penny before investing any money. What you say is all guesswork, but we'll let it go for a time. In fact, the hog scheme was a secondary matter. I've got a better thing than that. I was in hopes Brown might drop in this evening and talk it over with me."

"Why not talk it over with me?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

You won't comprehend, of course, but I'll give you an outline of it. How much do you suppose a man down in Ohio has made out of chickens in the last year?"

"A thousand dollars, perhaps."

"Over $5,000 clean money, and next year he will double that amount. I've got my facts and figures down pat, and I'm going into chicken raising."

"What are your facts and figures?"

"You can't understand them, but I'll give you a few. I start in with 1,000 hens."

"Where do you start?"

"Where do I start? Perhaps you imagine I'm going to make a hen roost of the top of the house! I start in our back yard, of course. I buy 1,000 hens at 25 cents apiece."

"I don't know where you are going to do it," said Mrs. Bowser. The very lowest figure you can make is 50 cents, and the fowls will be common at that. Having got your thousand hens together, then what?"

"Then I depend on eggs and chickens," replied Mr. Bowser. "I figure on 500 eggs per day. We'll call it 50 dozen. There's $10 per day for sure. One thousand hens ought to hatch 10,000 chickens per year. Each chicken will readily sell for—"

"Just wait a minute. Let us begin with the back yard. We have an area of 30 by 15 feet. One thousand hens wouldn't have room to flap their wings in that space."

"Are you trying to make out that I don't know enough to come in when it rains?" shouted Mr. Bowser as he bobbed up with furious gestures.

"Not at all; you are going into poultry. You are going to make a fortune. I haven't a business head on me, of course, but I can figure a little. You might coop up fifty hens in the back yard, but not more. As for eggs, if you get 200 a day from 1,000 chickens you would do well. The increase would not be half what you figure. Then you have not figured on the expense of lumber and carpenter work for the coops, nor for feed and help. You see—"

"Yes, I see—of course I see! I see that you know nothing about poultry. I tell you any man with an ounce of brains can make $5,000 a year out of 2,000 fowls."

"Well, let us see how it is done."

"It's done in a business way, of course."

"Then we'll figure in a business way. You will want lumber and nails for the coops, and there will be carpenter work. How much lumber—"

"Not a plank—not a board—not a foot!" howled Mr. Bowser.

"But how are you going to do?"

"None of your business! I go to work and invest a plan to make $5,000 a year as easy as rolling off a log. I come home feeling pleasant over it, like an ass I state the plan to you, and you immediately and maliciously set out to tear it to pieces. Woman—"

It was lucky for Mr. Bowser that just then he heard the voice of a tramp in the basement hall asking the cook for a bite to eat. It offered him a diversion, and he took advantage of it. He turned from Mrs. Bowser and rushed down stairs, followed by the cat, and he fell upon that unsuspecting tramp like a thunderbolt. There was a mix-up, three or four whoops and yells, and then the tramp broke loose and spread his wings and made for the street. He didn't stop to open the gate, but went over the fence like a bird, and the chase was over. When Mr. Bowser returned to the sitting room pencil and paper had disappeared, and the diplomatic Mrs. Bowser was looking into the family almanac to see what day of the week the next Fourth of July would fall on.

THE WRITERS.

Michael Davitt, during his days in parliament, did nearly all his literary work in the house writing room, where silence is enforced, sitting invariably in the same seat.

Paul Bourget has announced his intention of paying a second visit to this country. He will come next spring and gather material for a novel dealing with American social life.

Theodor Mommsen, at the age of 83 years, has published a new work, "Roman Criminal Law," as a companion to his great "Roman Constitutional Law." It is a volume of 1,078 closely printed, large octavo pages.

Ejorsten Bjornson lately saw the first time the statue of himself set up before the National theater in Christiania. He turned red in the face and demands that it be removed, as it is a libel on his personal appearance.

If the wind blows off your hat, don't chase it yourself; some one else will do it for you.

LAYING UP A COMPETENCE.

Something That Practically Any Man Can Do Through Self Denial.

"There are some men of genius," said Mr. Nippingly, "who accumulate great fortunes by great strokes, but by far the greater number of fortunes, including those of moderate dimensions, and these form the great majority of all, are made by the very simple process of living within one's income and investing the surplus with more or less wisdom, but always where it will be safe."

"The elder I grow the more amazed I am that more people don't lay up a competence for themselves, as most anybody can do, by beginning early in life to live within their income and sticking to that course faithfully. Did I do this myself? No. Am I, however, having learned the wisdom of this course, now making a beginning? I am obliged to say 'No.' I am still spending all I get and laying by nothing."

"There are some lessons that we all easily acquire, but never turn to our own advantage. One of these is of the benefits that arise from the exercise of self denial. We get from this at once the direct benefit of what we save, and self denial nourishes, strengthens and broadens the will and enables a man constantly to do and to earn more and more."

"There's simply nothing like self denial. It is the key to every one of life's treasures, and everybody has one of those golden keys in his possession, eager to help him and waiting only for him to bring it in use."—New York Sun.

An Amused Woman.

A woman who had an Arabian glass cup of the fourteenth century and did not know its value took it to the British museum. After due consideration the expert, to her surprise, said that, though the museum did not want it, it might be worth $2,000. The woman shuddered, because she had been carrying in a crowded London omnibus a bit of glass worth so much money and it had miraculously escaped smashing.

Finally, wanting money more than Arabian glass, she sent the object to an auctioneer. Fancy her amazement when, starting at $2,500, the Arabic cup went by leaps and bounds and was finally knocked down for the nice sum of $4,500.

Actually the Arabic cup was worth very much less, but it so happened that there were two rivals at the auction, who bid against each other—China, Glass and Lamps.

THOSE BOER LADIES.

By Middle Life They Are Almost Too Fat to Walk.

The Boer woman is very little like the trim, handsome Dutchwoman of her ancestral Holland. She is seldom pretty. Her complexion is her principal charm, and she guards this carefully whenever she goes out. She is never seen outdoors without a great peaked bonnet on her head, her visits to church being made behind an almost oriental seclusion of veils. This is necessary to preserve the pink and white of her skin, for the climate would otherwise soon tan it to the color of sole leather. Her eyes are small and set close together, and her features are irregular. Her cheeks are broad and flat, and her hair is naturally light in color, although time and weather soon bleach it from its early straw color. At a very early age she loses all her teeth, for she is constantly chewing sweet cakes and confectionery.

A European woman would replace the Boer woman that nature has deprived her of with well mounted works of art, but the Boer woman does not do this. She thinks it would be impious thus to try to duplicate the work of the Creator. Her figure is thick and almost waistless. While still a young woman she begins to grow fat, and by the time middle life is reached she is often so unwieldy that the only exercise she is able to take is to waddle comically from one armchair to another. She is clad in a loose, scantily made gown, devoid of trimming and apparently waistless. The day garments of the Boers are also their night clothes, so the gown is generally wrinkled.

HE WASHED DISHES.

The Hard Job One Boy Had All the Way to Europe.

The girls who have complained in various keys because they had dishes to wash may be glad to hear of a young man who can look at the matter through their eyes, perhaps more so. He had shipped as "boy" on a cattle steamer for Europe because he wanted to save as much as possible on his transportation, and—but the rest of the story sounds better in his own words:

"About 4:30 in the morning I was awakened and told to go to work. I hastily dressed, for the first and last time on board, for during the rest of the voyage I took care not to undress. It seemed scarcely worth while. I arrived on deck and found the steward waiting for me. He showed me into the pantry, introduced me to 'Pants,' as the pantryman was called, and told me that my chief duty during the voyage would be to wash dishes. "There was already a large pile of dirty dishes waiting to be washed, and I rolled up my sleeves, fixed the hot water and began to work. I had these almost done when another and larger lot was brought in from the dining room. This proved to be the daily programme. I no sooner had one pile washed than others were brought in, and I was never done. I don't think I ever saw so many dishes before in my life, and I hope I never shall again. There were 60 passengers aboard besides the cattlemen, and six meals were served each day. From the dishes that came out to be washed, I think that each passenger must have used at least six plates at a meal."—Detroit Free Press.

Destroying the Point.

Every one knows the man who is notorious for so telling a story as to destroy its point. An English nobleman, Lord P., was noted for his success in thus ruining the prosperity of a story. The author of "Collections and Recollections" exhibits a specimen of his lordship's peculiar art.

Thirty years ago two large houses were built at Albert Gate, London, the size and cost of which seemed likely to prohibit tenants from hiring them. A war christened them "Malta and Gibraltar" because they can never be taken.

Lord P. thought this an excellent joke and ran round the town, saying to every friend he met:

"I say, do you know what they call those houses at Albert Gate? They call them Malta and Gibraltar because they can never let them. Isn't it awfully good?"

Some one told Lord P. the old riddle, "Why was the elephant the last animal to get into the ark?" to which the answer is, "Because he had to pack his trunk."

Lord P. asked the riddle of the next friend he met and gave as the answer, "Because he had to pack his portmanteau."

Will Chamber's Sad Death.

The jury in the inquest over the remains of the late W. R. Chambers, who was found in a dying condition on the street at midnight in Montreal, brought in an open verdict. There seems to be little doubt that the young man was murdered, although not the slightest clue can be secured that will throw any light on the mystery. The deceased's friends in Peterborough will be sorry to learn that the cowardly assassin has not been discovered.

CHURCH AND CHURCHMEN

The old "Second church" in Boston celebrated its two hundred and fiftieth anniversary recently.

The Universalist church reports 1,008 parishes and 47,471 families, an increase of about 1,200 families over last year.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale will not occupy the pulpit of his church in Boston again until spring. Dr. Lyman Abbott will be the supply for the month of January.

Rabbi Emanuel Schreiber of Youngstown, O., who has been chosen rabbi of the Emanuel synagogue of Chicago, is 45 years old and a native of Austria. He is a doctor of the Royal college of Vienna and has written a number of religious works.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Glassware should be washed in warm water with a dash of soap powder, rinsed off in clear, warm water and polished with soft linen towels.

Hot or cold water cans or jugs should be turned upside down when not in use, so that they can drain and dry thoroughly. If left damp, they will rust inside and be spoiled, because rust eats holes in the metal.

For dishwashing kerosene oil has been found to form an emulsion with the grease, so that a few drops of kerosene dropped into cold or tepid water will keep knife handles from being injured, as in the case where soap and hot water are used.

Mr. Chas. Gunsolus has already sent out 11 sets of harness with set-tires to the Northwest. The last set were sent out with Mr. Thomas Hanks, of Emily. This shows that there is considerable immigration to the west this season.

Boy two and one half years old. Protestant. Town family preferred. Apply to Secretary of Children's Aid Society.

MAN'S EXCITING RIDE.

Dan Sheehan, a town laborer, who is deaf and dumb, while working at the ice jam at the creek on Hunter street, fell into the rushing water and was carried down as far as the C. P. R. bridge where he was rescued. Although deaf and dumb, Dan made noise enough to wake the dead.

COUNTY MAPS.

Be sure and get a copy of the new County Map published by the Times Printing Company. It is a first class map and should be in the hands of every business man in Peterborough. Only a few copies left. Copies on paper 50 cents; on rollers $2.

A CLOSE SHAVE.

Lieut. Ritchie, of the 5th Battalion, received a letter from his brother, who went to Africa with the Ottawa volunteers, saying that a shot struck his mess tin at the battle of Paardeberg, and glanced, inflicting only a slight wound. Had the tin not been there the bullet would have passed through his body. He was pulled out by Mr. R. Deyell, of Oshawa, none the worse for his thrilling adventure.

COOK WANTED.

At Queen's Hotel, Lakefield, to whom good wages will be paid. Apply either personally or by letter or telephone to R. J. Munro, Lakefield.

A BOAT FUTURE.

Orillia Packet.—Mr. Thos. Marshall, left on Monday for Lindsay and Bobcaygeon, to begin fitting up the vessels of the Trent Navigation Co., for the approaching season. Mr. Marshall was told by tourists last year that if the Trent Valley Canal was open, large numbers of United States pleasure craft would come through it to Lake Simcoe and Couchiching, and the whole route would be lined with the summer residences of people from the South.

ENTERTAINED BY HIS FRIENDS.

Mr. Myles Frontes Given a Complimentary Banquet Last Night.

Mr. Myles Frontes, who for the past eleven years has been a resident of Peterborough, was entertained by a number of his friends to a supper at the Palace Restaurant last night, on the eve of his departure to Warkworth, where he has accepted a responsible position.

Amongst those who were present were Messrs. R. S. Davidson, H. LeBrun, W. D. Parker, Ed. Brown, R. B. McKee, W. F. Johnston, R. H. Fortye, Peter Corkery, J. Brownlee, M. McFadden, H. Morrow, Alex. Elliott and others. The chair was occupied by Mr. R. B. Davidson, while the guest of honor sat on his right.

After the good things provided had been disposed of, speeches followed, in which the hearty good wishes of Mr. Frontes's future success was expressed by all the speakers.

Mr. Frontes leaves this morning for his new home, and carries with him the hearty good wishes of the entire community. During his residence in Peterborough he has, by his kindly disposition and obliging manner, made friends of all those with whom he came in contact, and will be greatly missed. The Times joins in wishing him every success.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Lindsay is trying to re-organize its band.

The regular monthly meeting of the Fire Brigade took place last night.

The first battalion drill took place last night. There was a fair turn out.

The charge in connection with the load of hay mentioned in yesterday's issue was settled out of court.

A man named Daniel Walker, of Lindsay, had his leg broken on Monday, from a kick from a horse attached to Thos. Brady's delivery wagon.

At the police court yesterday morning a young man who has been acting as a traveler for a commercial firm was charged with theft. He was remanded till the 10th.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

The Times invites all its readers to contribute to this column all items of a personal or social nature, such as the arrival and departure of guests, the movements of well known people, business men, and particulars of ad homes, parties, etc. All that is required is to send a postcard or letter, or telephone the Times, giving rough outline, and we will put it into shape.

Rev. J. C. Davidson is in Cobourg.

Rev. Archdeacon Allen, of Millbrook, was in town yesterday.

Mr. R. J. Munro, of Lakefield, was in town yesterday, and gave the Times a call.

Mr. Joseph Walton, of Lakefield, brother of our esteemed townsman, Mr. Robert Walton, is seriously ill.

Mr. M. McGregor, of Norwood, was in town yesterday, and gave the Times a call. He has sold out his hotel business in Norwood, and is moving to Winnipeg.

Mr. F. W. Miller received word yesterday that his son, Mr. Tom Miller, serving with the Scots Guards in Africa, had been wounded, but was fully recovered. Mr. Miller's many friends will be pleased to learn that Tom is all right again.

THE DEACON'S DREAM.

"May you take this lesson home with you to-night dear friends," concluded the preacher at the end of a very long and wearisome sermon in a church not 100 miles from Lindsay. "And may its truths sink deep into your hearts and lives to the extent that your souls may experience salvation. We will now bow our heads in prayer. Deacon White, will you lead?"

There was no response. "Deacon White," this time in a louder voice, "Deacon White, will you lead?" Still no response. It was evident that the deacon was slumbering. The preacher made a third appeal and raised his voice to a pitch that succeeded in waking the drowsy man. "Deacon White, will you please lead?" The deacon rubbed his eyes and opened them wondering why.

"Is it my dear? No—I just dealt."

SPECIAL LEGISLATION.

Mayor Kendry, Town Solicitor Edwards and Town Clerk Armstrong went up to Toronto yesterday morning to appear before the Legislature in connection with the Canadian General Electric works bill. Mr. E. H. D. Hall, solicitor for the company, accompanied the deputation.

AN ELECTRIC ROAD EXTENSION.

The township of Smith at a council meeting held yesterday granted the Central Ontario Power Co. (the Burleigh Falls Power Company) a franchise for an electric road through the township. This is a step in connection with this company's proposition to take over the local electric road and extend it to Chemung and Lakefield.

DEADLY COAL GAS.

Narrow Escape of Ald. Dawson and Family From Suffocation.

Ald. Dawson and family had a narrow escape from being suffocated on Monday evening. When Mrs. Dawson arose in the morning she noticed a peculiar sensation, and was unable to stand. Her husband, who came to her assistance, also was affected to a lesser extent. Mr. Dawson then aroused the other members of the family, and found them all under the influence of the poisonous gas. They were, with great difficulty, aroused, and all were sick for a time. Mr. Dawson's daughter, Alice, suffered most, and remained unconscious for several hours. It was most fortunate that the discovery was made in time. It was found that the damper of the stove pipe had been turned, shutting off the escape of the gas, and it escaped through a crack in the stove into the house.

A BIT OF SPRING.

How a Spring Poet got his work in on the Editor of this G. P. J.

"Do you wish any spring poetry today," inquired a long-haired caller, and the lamb-like editor of this great family journal forthwith reached for his gun. The caller saw the motion and held up his hand appealingly. "Shoot if you will this long-haired head, but do not kill the poet dead," he reasoned softly. "I understand you to say you would like some spring poetry to-day," he added, with mild insistence.

"I would like it to-day as well as any day," replied the editor, "but I do not like it any day. There's housecleaning and mowing and bad payments, knee deep with water, and a superabundance of bile and torpid livers and enough other things to contend with in the spring without having any poetry shoved in on us."

But think of the kind mine is," insisted the caller. "Listen," and he pulled out a dingy looking slip of paper and read:

"There bursts the joyous from the earth To meet the growing showers, And there the crocus preens its plumes, The rooster of the flowers."

"What do you think of that?"

"Who in thunder ever heard of a flower being a rooster?" queried the editor. "The most unlimited poetic license will not permit that sort of a wrench to the imagination."

"Steady, steady, my Pegasus," said the visitor, soothingly. "I knew you were kicking out of the traces, and I don't blame you, for there is a really startling thought in that suggestion. It is plain enough when you see it."

"Which isn't saying that anybody can ever see it."

"Only the blind will not see. Now observe, please. The crocus is a rooster of the flowers is what I said, didn't I? And I am right, for the rooster is a crow cuss, isn't he? Now, what have you got to say?"

And the editor stepped down across the raging creek and took a seat in the back parlor of the Snowden House, where he was unopposed his troubles to the genial and sympathetic proprietor. What he said was not fit for publication.

QUITE A ROW.

Trouble in Quitting the Coffee Habit.

"For more than twenty years I used coffee and tea. I enjoyed coffee for breakfast, and I had a violent headache. When I learned this, I tried to give it up, but found that tea had the same effect. I was a slave to both, and would become so nervous that I hardly knew what I was doing myself. I tried to give them up."

"I often heard people say that tea made them nervous, and I wondered how it could do this, when it acted the reverse with me, for my nervous headache would disappear at once, after I drank tea. I was so sure that it was hurting me, but that I had got so that I could not do without it."

"Finally I thought I would try Postum Food Coffee, and after buying a package and preparing it carefully, was much surprised to find I liked it very much, but after an hour I was suffering with a dreadful nervous headache, which lasted all day. In the evening I gave up and made a cup of tea, which relieved the headache."

"This proved to me that I was a slave to a stimulant habit so I resolved I would give it up at once and drink Postum, even if I did have a headache for a day or two in breaking over the line. I stuck to the Postum and my headaches entirely disappeared. I began to feel fresher and brighter than I had for ten years. Now I crave neither coffee or tea, but like Postum better than I ever did either of the old drinks. This pleased me greatly, for I am better satisfied with the new drink than I was with the others, and yet I am gaining steadily in health and strength. I always used the best grades of tea and coffee, which are far more expensive than Postum. This is another advantage in the change. I would not go back to the old slavery and bad feelings for anything on earth. Please do not publish my name."

The name of this lady can be had by application to the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

The Chief.

With Apologies to the London News, by the Times P. D.

There's a great big man we know,
Called the Chief;
Very straight and very slow
Is the Chief.
Fifty odd, if he's a day,
Neither bald, neither gray,
Always wants to have his way,
Don't you Chief?

When a great big fight is on,
Ring the Chief;
And if anyone's done wrong,
Find the Chief.

He's the essence of what's right,
He's a great big bunch of might,
He's a terror in a fight,
Is the Chief.

Should the sun refuse to shine
Ask the Chief;
Should you buy a faulty mine,
Seek the Chief.

He's the big boss victor,
He's the top coal in the bin,
He's our great and strong lynch-pin,
Is the Chief.

If you find him in the Court,
Our own Chief,
Having just a little sport,
Our big Chief.

It is dollars and not dimes,
That he reads the Morning Times,
And is out for heavy fines,
Our own Chief.

For the papers he don't care,
Do you, Chief?
Or when men get on a tear,
Not the Chief.

But if a policeman takes a drink,
He will shut him eyes and wink,
And have him pulled—I don't think,
Would you Chief?

Hard on Liquor Men.

The Ontario Government have received the following petition, which has been largely signed. We do hereby convey to the Hon. the Prime Minister of Ontario and the Government thereof our strong disapproval of any legislation conforming with the privileges now being asked of the Government in the interests of the liquor vendors. That we regard as a retrogressive act any relaxation of the present laws regarding the hours for selling liquor, and that public sentiment and the mandate of the electors of the Province of Ontario do not warrant the Government in granting to the liquor interests the slightest concession or privilege now withheld.

A Timely Warning.

Editor Morning Times.
Sir,—As pure water is an absolute necessity to the health of the people, it is of vital importance that all who use well water, should use the utmost vigilance to prevent impurities from entering the well. At this season of the year, from melting snow, and from heavy spring showers, there is danger of surface into the well, thereby polluting the water, and sowing the seeds of typhoid fever and diphtheria.

The Dominion Elections.

Editor Morning Times.
Dear Sir,—I see in your valuable paper there is getting to be some talk of the next election for the Dominion House, and the men who are to ask our votes.

Now, I think we want a candidate who can talk like a streak and do justice to our great leader.

No one before the Peterboro' public to-day is better known in the riding than the mfr. Stone, barrister.

What the matter with him for a candidate?

Yours, etc.,

A WORKING MAN.

Duty of Assessors.

Editor Morning Times.
Sir,—The assessors have been appointed and will shortly begin work. It is clearly their duty to lower the assessment at least 25 per cent. The rate, of course, would go up, but this is desirable. So far as the taxpayer is concerned it is as broad as it is long.

How the assessors can take an oath that they have truly and faithfully performed their duty, when they keep values up to what they were last boom times, I can't conceive. Everybody knows that real estate in Peterborough has depreciated from 25 to 75 per cent during the past ten years; and yet the assessment has not been reduced in a single instance. That I know of.

Now, Mr. Editor, either the assessment was too low ten years ago, or it is too high now. Must be either one or the other.

Let the assessors meet and agree to a 30 per cent reduction all round, so that the Council will be powerless to plunge us much further into debt, as our debt limit will have been reached.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am,

RATEPAYER.

One for the Times.

Editor Morning Times.
Sir,—I heartily congratulate the Times on its answer to the article, written by a correspondent, which appeared in Monday's issue, regarding transient traders. If the members of the Retail Merchants' Association do not show by their deeds that they are sincere, I for one will quit the Association.

The Times is a credit to Peterborough, and should have the hearty support and patronage of every member of the Association.

Help the Band.

Editor Morning Times.
Sir,—I hope the Council will not fail to help the band with a substantial grant this year. We have an organization that we are all proud of, and if a vote of the ratepayers were taken, I am sure that they would grant a grant of $1,000 a year. Let the grant be at least half this sum.

THE PRINCE OF WALES SHOT AT IN BRUSSELS.

Dastardly Attempt Upon the Life of the Heir by a Boer Sympathizer.

ATTEMPT TO RECAPTURE LOST GUNS ABANDONED

Times Says They Were Lost Because There Were No Scouts Ahead.

Mafeking Still Besieged But Safe on March 27.

Boers Get Away With Cannon.

Brussels, April 4.—The Prince of Wales was shot at to-day while leaving the railroad station here. He was not hurt.

London, April 4.—The Prince and Princess of Wales started for Copenhagen this morning for the purpose of attending the celebration of King Christian's birthday, which occurs April 8.

London, April 4.—The Marquis of Salisbury immediately telegraphed to the Prince of Wales his congratulations on his escape, while the United States charge d'affaires M. Henry White, who was calling on the British Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs at the time, promptly repaired to Marlborough house and left his card there. All the officials were greatly disturbed by the occurrence and the general view was that it must have been in some way with the Transvaal, especially as the Prince of Wales has always been such a favorite on the continent and never before has been molested in the slightest degree. One gentleman remarked "that settles the question of the Prince of Wales visit to the Paris exposition."

The news of the attempt on the life of the Prince of Wales was immediately telegraphed to Queen Victoria.

Brussels, April 4.—The would-be assassin is named Spido a resident of Brussels, 16 years of age. His pockets were found full of anarchist beliefs. He fired two shots at the Prince. The Prince of Wales and others were in the car, but no one was touched. When examined he declared he intended to kill the Prince and did not regret his action, and was ready to do it again if given a chance.

After the Prince had ascertained that the man who fired the shots had been arrested, he declared himself and the princess were ready and the train started. Spido subsequently said he wanted to kill the Prince of Wales "because he caused thousands of men to be slaughtered in South Africa."

Brussels, April 5.—Intense excitement prevailed for the moment, as it was feared the Prince had been hit, the shots having been fired almost point blank. The railway carriage door was hastily thrown open and great relief was felt when the Prince himself appeared at the window, unhurt. Both the Prince and Princess, however, had a very narrow escape. The policeman on duty told Spido in charge. The latter appeared proud of his exploit and seemed quite calm. Spido told the authorities that he lived on the Rue de La Forge, at Saint Gilles, two miles south of Brussels.

London, April 5.—The Queen was not informed of the assault on the Prince, the despatches to Her Majesty on the subject being held over until this morning (Thursday).

London, April 5, 5a.m.—A special despatch announces that Mafeking was still besieged, but safe on March 27.

Cologne, April 5, 1 a.m.—The Prince of Wales arrived here at midnight. Owing to the lateness of the hour there was no special demonstration. It was learned from a member of his entourage that they remained perfectly cool when the attack was made and that the Princess, although considerably alarmed, soon recovered from the shock.

FRENCH RETURNS TO CAMP.—Attempt to Recapture Lost Guns Abandoned by Roberts.

London, April 4.—The return of General French with his cavalry and some of the Ninth Division, including the first Canadian contingent, to Bloemfontein extinguishes the last ray of hope that Broadwood's guns might be recaptured from the Boers. The enemy acted too promptly in harrying their trophies to the rear to allow of any opportunity to again regain possession of them, and General Roberts must reconcile himself to the first serious loss since his invasion of the Orange Free State. The correspondent of the Times fully confirms the assertion in his despatch on Monday last, that lack of proper scouting was the cause of the disaster. He makes the astonishing statement that there was not a single man ahead of the convoy, but that the guns stumbled right into the midst of the enemy without any precaution having been taken to protect them. One can only repeat the words that General Buller used after the loss of the guns at Colenso, "I wonder when British officers will learn the value of proper scouting." The stern criticism of the Times as to the affair is fully justified, and might even be made stronger without error. It was stated a few days ago that the Prince of Teck was in charge of a convoy, and if this is correct, it may explain a good many things. If Great Britain would retain her princelings, dukes and earls at home and allow them to perform their proper functions of drawing room ornaments, the war might progress in a manner which would not wound our national self-respect. Men who can shoot and possess common sense are needed in Africa. A coroner has no military value. It now looks as if Commandant Oliver turned the tables upon the British. Instead of escaping northward he appears to have holed at Ladybrand, and after being reinforced from the north is proving a thorn in the flesh of General Roberts. If he retains his present position among the hills of the Basuto border, he may seriously interfere with the advance upon Kroonstad by weakening the line of communication, thus necessitating further campaigns around Bloemfontein before the northward march can be commenced. At all events, the too sanguine hopes to those who said that the Free State was utterly crushed have been disappointed, for the northern portion of it at any rate seems anything but subdued, and if further time is lost there may be a recurrence of revolt in the southern part, which it is evident by Oliver's intention to incite as far as possible.

SCHREINER BETRAYED THEM.

Refused to Forward Arms to Kimberley When Requested by the Mayor.

London, April 4.—The correspondence which passed between the Mayor of Kimberley and Mr. Schreiner, Premier of Cape Colony, prior to the outbreak of war, regarding the defence of that town, is now published. On June 12th last the Mayor wrote to the Premier calling his attention to the defenceless condition of the town and suggesting that the battery of artillery and the rifles stored at King Williamstown for Kimberley be forwarded at once with a supply of ammunition. At the same time he pointed out that owing to the state of unrest the large body of natives might become a source of danger.

Mr. Schreiner replied by telegraph that there was no reason to apprehend that Kimberley or any part of the colony was, or in any contemplated emergency could be, in danger of attack. It would be wrong on his part, he added, to countenance the fears of the South African League by giving directions for the movement of arms and munitions.

The Mayor replied thanking Mr. Schreiner for his reply, but again emphasizing the unsatisfactory nature of the position in view of the enormous value of the property involved. With regard to the arms at King Williamstown, he pointed out that they were intended for Kimberley and their removal could not be construed into giving color to alarm rumors.

Mr. Schreiner's answer was the same as before. He could not concur in the Mayor's views or meet his wishes.

GUNS WERE CARRIED OFF.

There is No Chance Now of Recapturing Them.

London, April 4.—A despatch to the Times from Bloemfontein, dated April 1, says:—Gen. French's cavalry arrived to-day and reconnoitered the scene of the disaster to Col. Broadwood's column. Our doctors made a field hospital of the station buildings which the enemy vacated, checking our scouts on the ridge. Two miles from the ridge are the waterworks. Until mid-day there were no developments. The scene of the attack presents a pitiable spectacle. Debris of stores and shell-splintered wagons are strewn about in every direction, intermingled with brown, motionless figures shows the track of the wild gallop of the cavalry as they broke through the cordon of rifles firing point blank into them. The wounded, about ninety in number, were collected and carried into the station buildings. In spite of the shell fire from General Col-

THE LATE MAJOR-GENERAL HAULTAIN.

ville's division, the enemy succeeded under cover of their own guns in carrying away the guns captured and wagons which were undamaged.

NO SCOUTS WENT AHEAD.

The Times Again Criticizes the Officers Who Lost the Convoy.

London, April 4.—The Times says—Lord Roberts promises further details of Saturday's mishap, but while his message bears great testimony of the gallantry of all ranks it gives no reason as to why the most ordinary precautions of warfare were omitted. Men resisting modern rifle fire at 100 yards range and officers serving the guns after the men are shot down is magnificent, but if the officers had seen that the scouting was when it ought to have been both they and their men might have exhibited courage to a better purpose. Our special correspondent at Cape Town tells us that apparently there was not a single man ahead of the convoy with orders to look out, but that the escort trotted quietly behind and only discovered that something was wrong after half the convoy had been captured. If the report of what took place is correct, no degree of valor can excuse the officers for having committed such a gross dereliction of duty.

GATACRE PREPARES TO MOVE.

He Takes Measures to Protect the Line of Communication.

Springfontein, Orange Free State, April 3.—Owing to information that the Boers are hovering in the neighborhood of the railroad running from this place to Bloemfontein, General Gatacre is preparing to take vigorous measures to cope with any attempt to cut off Lord Roberts' line of communication.

FRANCE HOLDS OUT THE OLIVE BRANCH.

Speeches in the French Senate of a Friendly Tone Toward Great Britain.

Paris, April 4.—In the course of the discussion of the Foreign Office estimates in the Senate yesterday, Count d'Aunay said that the war in South Africa had proved to Great Britain that her policy of splendid isolation was not the one best suited to her interests. She felt that a little less stiffness and a little more respect for the right of others would find a place in her relations with other people. He believed that a welcome change had come about in English public opinion, and that it would be expedient for French diplomacy to take advantage of this to resume certain conversations favorable to a rapprochement which was much to be desired.

M. Delcasse, Minister of Foreign Affairs, replying to Count d'Aunay, said: "Provided both Governments give proof of a little confidence in one another, I think I can say that the relations between them will remain as satisfactory as they have ever been. (Applause.) The most decisive reason which should make its perseverance in such a line of conduct is that in case of a conflict breaking out between France and England it would not be the victor, whichever it might be, who would reap the benefit of victory. (Loud applause.) It is equally well known to all who think, to all who work, to all who consider that great nations have something better to do than to waste their energy in idle bluster and loud threats which they call prou, but which are ridiculous and puerile. I think the two countries have many reasons for mutually respecting each other's rights and dignity in the question they have to solve. It is not for me to speak here of ridiculous threats. It is not yet time to tell the whole truth concerning the events of 1898. Neither the Government nor France will have anything to fear whenever they are published. History will speak the last word. All I can say is that the Government had in view at the time the disproportion between the object to be obtained and the efforts necessary to reach it. A treaty concluded in 1899 secured us substantial advantages which no one can dispute.

"France, gentlemen, is a great European power. She has become a great colonial power. Our extension has been marvellously rapid; but we must exploit the riches of our new colonies with the capital of old France. We must defend them with our own resources. "We must struggle. We must form virile generations. We must develop our economic organization."

CANADIANS BACK AT THEIR OLD CAMP.

Although Amid Bursting Shells Our Soldier Boys Suffered No Casualties.

Bloemfontein, April 2.—The Canadians returned to Bloemfontein to-day from Bushman's Kop, where, as part of Colonel Smith-Dorrien's brigade, they had been ordered to the support of the column under Colonel Broadwood.

There were no casualties to the Canadian troops in the fighting at Bushman's Kop, although we were in the thick of the shelling, which was continued between the British and Boer batteries after the ambushade. The Canadians are now back in their

GREEN ISLE'S WELCOME TO ITS AGED MONARCH.

Her Majesty Received With Acclaim by Ireland's Ancient Capital City.

SPLENDID WEATHER AND GOOD IRISH HUMOUR.

Received at the Landing by the Duke of Connaught and the Lord Lieutenant—At the Entrance to the City She Received an Address.

Dublin, April 4.—Queen Victoria landed in Ireland this morning for the first time in 39 years. The disembarkation from the royal yacht was accomplished at 11.30. The commander of the forces in Ireland, the Duke of Connaught, the Lord Lieutenant, Earl Cadogan, and their staffs, greeted Her Majesty, and the ride from Kingstown to Dublin commenced in splendid weather, and before huge, good-natured crowds.

The Queen's progress from Kingstown to the vice-regal lodge was marked with great enthusiasm. There was no unwelcome incident. At the entrance to the city she received an address of welcome, and handed the Lord Mayor a reply, in which she said she had come to Ireland for rest and quiet, and that it gave her great gladness to return to the land of so many happy associations, whose soldiers had recently fought so gallantly.

The Queen's Reply.

The following was Her Majesty's reply in full:—"I thank you heartily for the loyal welcome and good wishes which you have tendered me on behalf of yourself and your fellow-citizens on my arrival in the ancient capital of my Irish dominion. I came to this fair country to seek a change and rest, and to revisit scenes which recall to my mind the warm welcome given to both myself and my beloved husband. I am deeply gratified that I have been able at this time to see again the motherland of those brave sons who have recently distinguished themselves in the defence of my Crown and Empire with cheer and a conspicuous now as ever in their glorious past. I pray that the Almighty God may ever bless and direct you in the high functions which you exercise for the benefit of your fellow-citizens."

Queen Much Affected.

The Queen appeared to be much affected by the warmth of her welcome. Mr. Burke, a son of the former City Sword-bearer, took the place of Mr. Jas. Egan, the Sword-bearer who had refused to officiate. But the Lord Mayor himself handed the sword and keys to Her Majesty.

The ceremonies at the city gate were most picturesque. Lord Mayor, Sir George Faudel Phillips, declared that the reception and ceremonies were the finest he had ever seen, far surpassing those of the great Jubilee.

Reply to Kingstown.

In reply to the address of welcome of the Kingstown Commissioners of Kingstown the Queen handed the following to the chairman:—"I thank you for your loyal and dutiful address and for the warm welcome wherever you have greeted me. On setting foot again on Irish soil I receive with great satisfaction your assurances of devotion and affection towards me. I am looking forward with much pleasure to my visit to this part of my dominion, and I pray may God bless Ireland with increasing welfare and prosperity."

The chairman Her Majesty said—"I am very pleased to find myself in Ireland again."

THE DUBLIN DECORATIONS.

The Whole City a Revel of Color and Light for the Welcome.

Dublin, April 4.—The decorations of the streets are completed, and the various devices for illuminating the hotels, club-houses and public buildings were tested last night. The effects of the color and light are brilliant and are not inferior to those of Jubilee day and night in London. There is a continuous line of bonfires from the landing place, Kingstown, to the gates of Phoenix Park. Every house on the road to Dublin makes a brave show of bunting. Stands for spectators have been erected at many points. Pembroke town hall is profusely decorated and Clyde road and other highways are decked with red and green banners and festooned with streamers and rosettes.

RECEPTION AT KINGSTOWN.

Grand Scene in the Harbor—Fleet of Warships Brilliantly Lighted.

Dublin, April 4.—The Queen's reception at Kingstown last night was simple, but stately. The Royal yacht was preceded by the Trinity, the Indes, in the passage from Holyhead, and attended by the warships Galatea and Australia, and outside the harbor fleet lay at anchor, with two flagships and the most powerful battleships in the British navy dressed in rainbow style in honor of the Queen's arrival.

Brilliant lines of variegated color flared across the murky sky, heavily banked with clouds, and as the Royal yacht approached the narrow entrance of the harbor there were vivid tongues of flame, as one warship after another fired the royal salute—twenty-one guns. Every vessel was manned and the yacht crept by, and from one deck to another the refrain of the National Anthem was taken up, to the accompaniment of muffled bands.

The Royal yacht anchored for the night in Kingstown harbor, with the fleet in the rear outside brilliantly illuminated with electric lights. The Lord Lieutenant, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, and the Countess of Cadogan went on board the yacht soon after the Queen's arrival, and received the greetings of the Princess Christian, Princess Henry of

WAS AN EAST VOYAGE.

The Channel Smooth, Though Rain Marred Arrival at Kingstown.

Dublin, April 4.—In spite of the rain that was falling and the huge puddles of water under foot, the arrival of Queen Victoria in the royal yacht Victoria, and Albert, off Kingstown, was the occasion for much enthusiasm, although this did not take an organized form, owing to the fact that Her Majesty came several hours ahead of scheduled time.

The passage of the channel was smooth, and the Queen suffered no discomfort, although she expressed regret that the premature departure from Holyhead, owing to the threatening weather conditions, should cause her Irish subjects disappointment. Thousands had pointed to the Kingstown, regardless of the pelting rain, which luckily ceased about five o'clock, and they braved the cold winds and mud until midnight. The celebrations were confined to an illumination of the war vessel and a few fireworks here and there. A shining Shamrock stood out against the blackness of Dublin Bay, and from the Jackies clustered on the decks of the squadron came strains of "God Save the Queen," which were taken up with a will by the patient crowd on shore, and when "Soldiers of the Queen" floated across the water the spectators on Kingstown pier joined in with equal fervor.

Although all political conditions are represented in Kingstown, there was no attempt at a counter demonstration. In fact, last evening's fireworks, singing and cheering were not marred by any hostile note.

In Dublin itself, seven miles from Kingstown, the epithet, "Dear, dirty Dublin," was never before presumably better justified than yesterday. Dublin was bedraggled; its finery, which rivalled London's Jubilee decorations, drooping and soggy from the steady rain which, according to the weather prophets, was to be repeated today. However, last evening, when the showers ceased, illuminations such as Ireland had never seen lit up the streets and were viewed by crowds so dense that in several thoroughfares travel was impossible.

The castle was gay with a drier party, including the leading Irish nobility, and a spirit of good-natured revelry prevailed over every quarter of Ireland's capital.

CRITICS ARE BEWILDERED.

They are Unable to Make Any Guesses as to the War.

London, April 4.—Gen. Colville and Gen. French have given up the movement against the Boers east of Bloemfontein, and have rejoined the main army. It doubtless seemed to Lord Roberts a vain thing to send from ten to twelve thousand of his best troops into the wilderness with a field transport in the direction of a right angle with his chosen line of advance. The Boers have probably moved elsewhere, and if to the southeast General Colville could so easily strike them from Bloemfontein as by following them up across the plains. These inferences still leave the situation bewildering for the time being. The enormously superior British forces appear inactive in every part of the war field, waiting probably for the accumulation of material for a swift advance on the Transvaal frontier.

The London military commentators and the public also to some extent, are irritated and confused by the situation.

Lord Roberts did not meet his wife at Cape Town. She will proceed to Bloemfontein.

The permanent bridge at the Modder River station has been finished. The first train passed over it Tuesday.

The British garrison at Springfontein was roused at midnight Monday by the information that the Boers in force were about to make an attack. But not a burglar appeared.

FORTIFICATIONS OF PRETORIA.

Weuster Davis Says the Town Is a Vast Military Storehouse.

New York, April 4.—Interviewed by the Washington correspondent of The Herald, ex-Ambassador Secretary Webster Davis, said, in part, with reference to his visit to Pretoria—"I viewed the defenses of Pretoria, and I consider them impregnable. The line of hills surrounding the town bristles with high power Krupp and Creuset guns. Pretoria lies in a basin surrounded by a ridge of rugged hills, affording most admirable opportunities for defense. While there I learned enough to know that the city is one vast storehouse of food stuffs and ammunition."

Short Story of the Day

FIRE AND WATER.

BY F. H. LANCASTER.

The City of Natchez ponderously packed around, heading for New Orleans. The passengers crowded upon her guano waving farewell to the people upon the levee and taking one last look at the battle city seated so proudly upon her hills. Soon, however, Natchez was lost behind a bend in the river and the crowd dispersed—the pleasure seekers to the saloon, the sensible ones to their staterooms, and the restless ones to the hurricane deck. Only a man and woman remained leaning upon the rails of the guards. Evidently continuing a conversation, for when the man broke the silence: "If you were in Natchez, you are right in saying that New Orleans is a cosmopolitan. It is the dirtiest city I was ever in."

"Certainly," assented his companion, "cosmopolitan presupposes a contingency of dirt. But you have either visited very few foreign cities or you are prejudiced against New Orleans, if you dub it the dirtiest city you ever saw."

"Of course you will fight for it—all Louisianaans do."

"I am a Mississippian," she returned, "and I am not."

"How long do you suppose it will take you to make the trip?"

"Depends upon how many stops we make for cotton. You are in no hurry, are you?"

"I thought the boat was pretty well loaded already," remarked the girl, evading his question.

"She'll load to the hurricane deck," the man spoke coldly, annoyed that his question had been evaded, yet dissatisfied to push the point. He looked hard at the gorgeous southern sunset.

The girl returned serenely to the orange sea was peeling, dropping the bits of golden rind into the muddy river and noting with idle amusement that the oily side always turned to the water. "Buttered side down," she murmured.

He turned unwillingly to remark her aversion. "Wonderful thing—nature," he said, "I have loved you all my life."

"Yes—is Englishman Turn above or below New Orleans?"

"Don't you know that Greenville was exploring the river below New Orleans when he met the English chaplain and told him that the Mississippi was leagued to the west?"

"Do you suppose the Englishman believed him?"

"He turned around and cut—"

"Yes, I know. There is a very pretty oak tree at the place."

"Is there? I never noticed."

"What are you in such an awful bad humor about? Try some of my orange."

"Thank you, I'd rather have a cigar."

"Well, have one then, by all means."

"You don't object?"

"If I haven't been compelled to inhale tobacco smoke for the last five years, it's the best business training a woman can acquire these days."

"Deuce, take the business training. Let me stand below you. The wind will carry off the smoke."

The girl gave place silently.

"Hello, I see we are going to make another landing," said the man. "Nice work, this loading cotton at night. What I can't understand is, why more of these river boats are not burned. Look at the cotton they are rolling up the gang plank. You can see the loose fibre sticking out all over it."

"Were you ever on board a boat when it caught on fire?"

"No, but I should like to be—with you."

"Good gracious! You'd be in a bad fix if you were. I don't know how to swim."

"Then permit me to say that you have no business travelling on the Mississippi river."

"Nonsense! Death is written down by destiny. Strong swimmers are drowned every day."

"I don't believe in destiny." He spoke with a fresh cigar between his teeth.

"Don't you? Well, good-night."

"Why, it's early yet, isn't it? Well, wait then. Don't let's part like this. We may never see."

"But you don't believe in destiny." And she closed the door.

The man, left alone, leaned his elbow on the rail and stared moodily down at the murky waters in the pale and uncertain light. How long he stood there wrapped in bitter reverie he never knew. When he aroused himself at last the steamboat was creeping through a dense fog and the smoke from her stack fell to the deck, penetrating every place with its smell. He shrugged his strong, straight shoulders and then almost immediately sighed wearily. "It's all over with, I guess. She's woman enough to want to keep me from making a fool of myself. Pity I haven't the nerve to help her on with the good work."

He smiled with the savageness of pain. "Please heaven, where this boat makes her next landing there she leaves me." Then he went to his stateroom and threw himself down upon the bed, not expecting to sleep, and yet he did so—sleep heavily until aroused by a blood-curdling uproar. There was no need to question. The glare and smoke told their own tale. Where was she? With white face and quivering nostrils he made his way through the frantic crowd. She was not there. The fire had broken out in a dozen places. Men and women were leaping wildly overboard. Where was she? Had she, panic stricken, leaped with the rest? "I don't know how to swim," the words laughingly uttered a few hours before rang in his ears with maddened meaning. He rushed to the hurricane deck and peered across the murky waters. Dawn was drawing the curtain from the cruel scene. "Dead men float on their backs," the words of the old seaman came to him with hideous meaning as he gazed upon the mass of struggling creatures. The thought forced a cry from his lips and he called her name hoarsely. A horrible fear was gaining upon him, clutching at his throat with a pitiless hand. He stumbled as he again ran up on the "guarantee." Someone caught his arm and he leaped forward. "The pilot hopes to beach the boat," he heard her voice saying.

With a cry, of joy he caught her in his arms and bore her to the rail.

"When you hear me call, jump," he said briefly. Then he drew her closer to him. "If anything should happen, I have loved you all my life. Kiss me."

The woman clung to him, lifting her lips to his. For one instant of reckless happiness they stood motionless, wrapped in the lurid light, gazing into each other's eyes. Then the man gathered her closely in his arms. One last passionate kiss and with her face against his breast he leaped into the silent, surly river. Five minutes later they crossed the broad wake of crimson light—the man with the woman's hand upon his shoulder swimming fearlessly to happiness.

His "Dear Old Jim."

"Corbett is my friend and benefactor," says Mr. Jeffries. "I was once his sparring partner, and he treated me as a gentleman. Hence I have gladly agreed to fight him as a return for favors. I am bound by all the ties of friendship and gratitude to give him a chance to fight me." Was there ever such a touching instance of devotion? Mr. Jeffries will reward his old patron and benefactor by beating him into pulp and knocking his head off. One can fancy him saying, as he puts his terrible right into his friend's ribs, "Dear old Jim!"—Kansas City Star.

They Keep one Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, giving his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the lanterns (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the explosives are well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into the light, they would be blinded and they take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep it down while they are discharging the gun and until they have rediscovered the light.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and as once see everything dimly, while the

SCAVENGER OF THE VELDT.

The Aasvogel, Which Keeps the Wide Plains Clean.

Although the term "vulture" has been used for all time as a term of the vilest opprobrium, no one who knows the bird, its appearance and its habits could doubt for a moment that it expresses a depth of degradation which is barely conceivable.

And yet the vulture does a great deal of good in acting as the scavenger of the veldt. But for his quick eye, carrion taste and love of dead meat the diseases in the carcasses of dead oxen would be far more prolific and dangerous.

Throughout South Africa is found the aasvogel. Go anywhere you like on the veldt, and sooner or later—and in all probability the former—you will find the remains of his ghastly meal. There are hundreds of thousands of oxen used in the transport and trekking service. Many of them die from exhaustion, some of water or cruelty from their Boer masters. Or they may eat of the poisonous tulip, a bulbous plant growing in marshy places.

A turnkey, or teamster, soon knows if any one or more of his oxen have been eating tulip. The neck of the ox swells, his eyes close up, he gives short, sharp coughs, and his case is generally hopeless. Sometimes, however, he may be saved, and this by a peculiar, homeopathic sort of remedy. If the bulb of the tulip plant is crushed into pulp, mashed with hot water and forced boiling hot down the throat of the ox he may recover.

The quickness of the eye of the aasvogel is simply astounding. An ox falls out of the team, evidently ill. He is outspanned from his yoke fellow, and he goes down to the spruce, or stream, and the sky above and away to the horizon on all sides is absolutely clear and cloudless.

Hardly has the breath left the body of the poor ox than you may observe far, far away up in the sky a tiny black speck, then another and another and again they get larger and larger, circling round in ever diminishing circles all the while they descend. The dead ox forms the center of the circumference of their flight. Within a few minutes the grisly horde swoop down upon the still warm beast and commence their ghastly task.

An hour afterward there is nothing in the spruce but a bundle of bleached white bones that might have been there for months. The sky is clear and speckless again. The aasvogel has scavenged the veldt.

Whittier's Predilection.

Whittier had "Gail Hamilton" (Abraham Dodge) in the highest esteem, and the letters that passed between them are really most delightful. Here is one of the series in The Ladies' Home Journal that is truly characteristic of Whittier. It was written in 1888:

"I must tell thee something droll. Last week the Amesbury veterans from New Hampshire and a Massachusetts company, with military bands, came and paraded before our house, and Governor Smyth of New Hampshire and one or two officers called on me. When they left and I stepped out to see them civilly off, the men in epaulettes got up a grand military salute, with music and three cheers to wind up with! Was ever a Quaker in such a predicament? I did, I fear, some what compromise myself by lifting, almost involuntarily, my hand to my hat. But I resisted the temptation and only pulled my hat lower down over my brows by way of testimony."

Jimmy and the Baby.

Jimmy's mother kept cows and sold milk. Jimmy himself had nothing to do with the cows, though sometimes he used to carry the milk pail to his mother's customers. The customers all liked Jimmy, with his round, freckled face and bushy grin, and they used to ask him how business was, for, although Jimmy was only 13 years old, he had a business. He made coffee-baby coffee and sold them to the undertakers. They were nice pine coffins, with all the edges carefully joined. Jimmy received 50 cents for each one.

One day Jimmy stopped at the house of one of his mother's customers to leave some milk. A little boy met him at the door.

"We've got a new baby!" said the little boy. "Would you like to see it?" Jimmy nodded. The little boy's aunt laughingly led Jimmy to the cradle where the new baby was. Jimmy gazed at the infant for some time, speechless with admiration or some such emotion.

"What do you think of it, Jimmy?" asked the aunt.

Jimmy grinned.

"I guess I'd have to make a nice little coffin when I go home," he said.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

RAN A RACE WITH DEATH.

Narrow Margin by Which a Man on a Railway Bridge Won.

A high trestle bridge more than a quarter of a mile long, supporting the single track of the Nickel Plate railroad, spans the valley of Grand river, east of Painesville, O. The bridge is little wider than the distance between the rails, and the ties are placed eight or ten inches apart, the space between being open to the river below.

A young man who crossed recently had a thrilling experience on the bridge. He had just passed the center when a fast train rounded the curve behind him. As the engine whistled he quickened his pace. With every step the train was rushing nearer, and there was not a moment to lose.

Once the young man stumbled and seemed about to fall, but quickly regained his balance and hurried on. As he reached the place for which he had started the train was close behind, and he had just time to swing himself over the side of the bridge as the locomotive thundered by. The ends of the ties were slippery with grease from dripping axle boxes, and his foot slipped wide as he left the track. His right hand, stretched blindly out before him, touched a round iron bar, bracing two parts of the bridge, and, with a grip like that of a drowning man, his fingers clasped around it. For a moment he swung in empty air. In another his left hand had found a place beside his right, and his feet touched the welcome edge of a brace below. With bleeding fingers clutching the slender iron bar that vibrated widely from side to side, moments seemed hours.

At last the train passed, and the young man was able to climb slowly to the track above. Unnerved by the trying experience, he lay for a moment stretched across the rails and, then rising to his feet, with blanched face and unsteady limbs, made his way to firm ground.—Cleveland Leader.

THE PARIS SHOW.

The Paris exposition catalogue will contain 100,000 names.

The parks of Milwaukee will be part of the exhibit of that city at the Paris exposition. A series of photographic views of the public parks of that city will be shown.

It took a bid of 278,000 francs to secure the privilege of letting out seats for the Paris exposition of 1900. For the 1889 exhibition the successful bid for the monopoly was 39,000 francs.

Governor Mount of Indiana is personally supervising an elaborate exhibit for his state at the Paris exposition. One of the features of this will be a series of large photographs to show the progress of the "good roads" movement in Indiana, where there are now 50,000 miles of graded and gravelled highway.

A Race With the Sun.

The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 600 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had set a short time before.

The Architect.

One must wonder why it really is that so little is said or thought about architecture, the grandest, the mother, of all arts, a great, a most useful, science, one in which a greater revolution has lately taken place and in which more progress has been made, with more stupendous results, than in any other, remarks a writer in The International Magazine.

Was it not Richelieu who, paraphrasing an ancient writer, said: "If it is verifiability you seek, go find an architect. He must be an artist, or his buildings will offend the eye; an engineer, or they will crumble into trouble; a lawyer, or he will get his patrons into trouble; a doctor, or his buildings will be hygienically unfit to live in, and, last, but not least, he must be a gentleman, or we will have nothing to do with him."

Time to Give Up.

An Iowa judge recently related an amusing incident that had occurred in his court when a colored man was brought up for some petty offense. The charge was read, and as the statement "The state of Iowa against John Jones" was read in a loud voice the colored man's eyes bulged nearly out of their sockets and he seemed overcome with terror and astonishment. When he was asked if he had anything to say or pleaded guilty or not guilty, he gasped out:

"Well, yo' honah, ef de whole state o' Iowa is ag'in dis one pore niggah I gwine to give up right now!"

A QUEER SENSATION.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE HELD UP AT
THE POINT OF A REVOLVER.

Various Phenomena That Cause Each Man in a Roomful to Believe That a Weapon is Pointed Straight at His Own Head.

"If you will take my word for a little experience I had recently, perhaps I can make clear to you how it is possible for three bad men to hold up a roomful of fairly brave men, and get away safely with their money," said a merchant from the state of Washington who was a guest at the Lotus club one night recently. "I was in such a hold up not long ago, and I have ceased jeering at fellows who have been through similar experiences. I was one of 70 men who were held up in a big gambling hall, and as I am not a regular patron of such places I kept quiet about it at home. The gambling house is one of the best known in the west, and on the night of the hold up it was filled with a representative crowd. A search would have disclosed the fact undoubtedly that many of the men present were armed. No trouble in recent years has occurred in this place, and there was no reason to anticipate any. It was nearly midnight when the door opened and three men, masked and each holding two revolvers, entered the room. 'Hands up, quick!' shouted the foremost man."

"I was sitting at a faro table when I heard this command, and as I looked up I found a revolver pointing straight at my head. When I compared notes with the other seventy odd men later, I found that each one had the same experience. There were only six revolvers, and yet each man in the room was willing to swear that one of them was pointed at his head all the time. The crowd was simply paralyzed with fright. For two or three seconds not a man moved. Then over in one corner a Leadville sport brought his hand around to reach his hip pocket."

"Stop that or I'll shoot," said one of the masked men, covering his head with his revolver. 'Hands up, now; quick! We mean business.'"

"Every man in that room did hold his hands up. There was no hesitation then. It was my first experience in that kind of game, but it was not until I was able to take my hands down that I realized how tiresome the operation was. There we stood, each man with his hands stretched high above his head, held up in a room on a busy street when an outcry would bring help at once. It was a pretty sure thing, however, that no one would make the outcry. The three masked men had eyes for every move, and their revolvers pointed all ways at once. It is easy for a man who has not been through such an experience to suggest that if several men had only made a break these fellows would have run. I can honestly say that the barrel of the revolver into which I looked seemed to me to be as large as a sewer pipe. I even thought that I could see the end of the barrel, and I was awfully afraid that the man who held the revolver might get nervous and shoot me by accident. I tried to look pleasant to appease him. All this had taken perhaps a minute and a half when the spokesman shouted to us:

"Line up against that wall with your backs to me, and the man who takes his hands down will get shot. Quick now, gentlemen, if you please. Obey orders, and you won't get hurt."

"We lined up as directed like a lot of schoolboys. My friend here will relieve you of your valuables without your assistance," said the spokesman. "Don't move, because there are two dead shots behind you. Keep quiet, and it will soon be over."

"It was a very cool piece of work, I can assure you. One of the three went straight down the row, taking each man's watch and money. He didn't get as much as he expected, and as near as we could estimate later the total haul was under $5,000. There was over $100,000 in the safe which the robbers overlooked. When we had been cleaned out, the spokesman said:

"Now, gentlemen, we are sorry to inconvenience you further, but we shall have to request you to stand just as you are for five minutes more. Don't cut the time short, or you will get hurt."

"The side door opened at this instant, and we heard the order 'Hands up, Chinik, or you are a dead man!' It was one of our Chinese servants who was returning with a tray filled with drinks. He promptly dropped his tray, smashing all the glasses and threw up his hands. We all piled out of the place to aid the search. When we found out that a chase was hopeless, most of us came back to the gambling room to talk it over. Where we entered the place, we found the Chinik standing in the ruins of his glasses with his hands still above his head. The proprietor told him to take his hands down. The Chinik wouldn't do it, and two men who pulled his arms to his side had all the could do to hold him. He had looked in the big barrel of one of those small revolvers, and he hadn't forgotten it."

"Now this was an actual experience, and some of your New York papers had accounts of it. If I were mixed up in an affair of that sort again, I would raise my arms just as quickly. It was expediency and not a yellow streak that made that crowd act as it did."

Never Caught Alive.

In Lake Derwentwater, in England, there is a species of fish called vendace, which are never caught alive. They are said to frequent the deeper parts of the lake and are never met with in the rivers. One or two dead specimens of the breed which have been found in the lake are treasured as curiosities.

DEADLY SNAKES.

Various Signs by Which Their Character May Be Recognized.

To distinguish between venomous and harmless snakes is easy in practice, but it is difficult to explain in words alone, as there is one external characteristic which distinguishes them. It is rather a peculiar, varying union of many separate marks that brands the dangerous reptile.

Generally speaking, all snakes may be divided into two great classes—those which have the head covered with numerous small scales and those which have it covered with large, regularly fitted plates. Leaving out the elapids and the poisonous sea snakes, with which the hunter will have nothing to do, all snakes with small head scales move about by night and those with the large plates on the head by day. This may be known by their eyes, for the first have vertical pupils like the cat's, while those of the latter are generally circular in form. The long, active day snake, gliding about from bush to bush or hurriedly taking refuge beneath some protruding rock or tree stump, is harmless. Even should he be coiled in the sunshine he will free from approaching danger. But a serpent sleekly coiled in some secluded nook which instead of feeling rather himself closer together is most probably dangerous, particularly if he be more or less marked with a suggestion of irregular crossbars or whitish or dirty yellow and darker brown or blackish. This is the characteristic coloring of our most dangerous snakes, the rattler, the copperhead and the moccasin.

The following points embrace all the peculiarities of our American vipers, and the last two are especially noteworthy as the crowning proofs of venom:

(1) Moving about at dusk or by night, generally on the ground, and very rarely ascending trees or bushes. (2) Seldom flying in alarm, but rather coiling for defense. (3) Colors generally subdued in tint, with a semblance of irregular crossbars of lighter and darker shades. (4) Tail short, body stout, neck thin, head flat and very broad, especially behind. (5) Scales keeled—i. e., each scale has a ridge down the middle, which gives the skin a rough appearance like a rasp. (6) Head covered with small scales, sometimes larger over the eyes or nose. (7) Eyes with vertical pupils like a cat's. (8) Two pits or holes between the eyes and nose, suggesting four nostrils. (9) Two long, curved, perforated fangs in the upper jaw just in front of the eye, one on either side and so angled that they lie backward, hidden from view in a membranous sheath, but erectile at will.

Some of the first seven peculiarities may be found in harmless snakes, but it is only in the vipers that they are united.—Outing.

How the "Guides" Them.

There is a jolly mother in Brooklyn who has several grown up sons boarding at home with her, and they declare she wants to "boss" them all the time, just as if they were children. She laughingly repudiates their charge and declares that she merely wishes to advise and guide them, but has long ago ceased to rule them. Here is an example of the way she "guides" them: At dinner the other night a big meat pie and a small roast duck were brought on together. The duck was intended for the father principally. The boys were death on duck, their mother well knew, but it would not make a mouthful apiece for them; so, addressing the boy who sat nearest her, she said, "Which will you have, Bobbie, duck or pie?" and at once began cutting the pie.

"Duck!" said Bobbie promptly.

"No, Bobbie," answered his mother cheerfully, "you can't have duck, dear. Take your choice, my son, take your choice, but you can't have duck!"—New York Tribune.

New Zealand Oddities.

The crow in New Zealand strikes as sweet a note as any heard in the world, says Henry D. Lloyd in The Atlantic. The robin has no song and no red breast; the native hen is the greatest of rat killers; there is a caterpillar which turns into a plant. These and some other productions of nature have done for New Zealand what the kangaroo and the emu have done for Australia—given it the suggestion of oddity and the marvelous. Rabbits and ewes, introduced for pleasure, spread like wildfire, and it is an attraction to be duly advertised in the sale of land that it has been cleared of sweetbrier and fenced against rabbits, and then later the rabbit becomes a profit instead of a pest and is exported by millions to feed the English.

Amateur Photography.

Let me call attention to one of the most universally popular mistakes that have to do with photography—that of classing supposedly excellent work as professional and using the term amateur to convey the idea of immature productions and to excuse atrociously poor photographs. As a matter of fact nearly all the greatest work is being and has always been done by those who are following photography for the love of it, and not merely for financial reasons. As the same implies, an amateur is one who works for love, and viewed in this light the incorrectness of the popular classification is readily apparent.—Alfred Stieglitz in Scribner's.

Minnesota's First Book.

The Rev. S. W. Dickinson, an agent for the American Bible society, says that the first book printed in Minnesota was a Bible. It was printed in 1836, about 13 years before the first issue of a newspaper in St. Paul. The Bible was in the Ojibway language and was printed on the mission press at Lake Pokegama, Pine county, under the supervision of Rev. Mr. Ayer, who likewise had charge of the mission farm at that point.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

Peace and in War—A Splendid Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambezi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilised world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilisation, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and decided to the world the wonderful possibilities of that "Dark Continent" for the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advances of the Dutch and they in turn resisting the inroads of civilisation. In spite of this, so strenuous were the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in the pursuit of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilisation.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly linked in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. True, the old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but faded in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a Pictorial History incident to the scenes of warfare, that the publication of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have entrusted for its authorship with Mr. Wynne Flemming, an Africaner whose authority upon South African matters is world-wide acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambezi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of public interest, including most of the important battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest as well as the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxuriant vegetation and glorious climate, its wide variety of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals lend an air of peace and tranquility, while the marks of civilisation and progress are as evidence at every turn.

Johannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparent inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Briton and Boer, the battles of which have been ranked as the bloodiest of the century.

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Boer war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

It is always to be regretted that differences should come between capital and labor, especially when they are apt to be such striking differences.

A QUEER EXPLOSION.

HOW A MOUNTAIN LOCOMOTIVE CAME TO AN UNTIMELY END.

There Was Neither Fire In Her Furnace Nor Water In Her Boiler, and Yet She Managed to Blow Up in the Most Approved Style.

Mr. Henry Alquist, a prominent railroad man, relates the story of a curious wreck, the facts in which he will vouch for.

"It is such a remarkable thing," said Mr. Alquist to a reporter, "that I fear many will be inclined to brand it as 'pique.' I have been railroading now for over 20 years, and never in all my varied experience have I seen such a unique and complete wreck as the one I speak of—that of engine 1,129 of the Rio Grande Western. Railroad men will tell you that locomotives seldom explode nowadays, but 1,129 did and in a very peculiar way.

"At the time this wreck occurred I was holding down the job of train dispatcher at Soldier Summit, Utah, and a tough old job it was. Never been there, I suppose? Well, Soldier Summit is a station on the top of one of the Wasatch divides, a bleak and lonely place, where the Rio Grande Western has a roundhouse and coal chute located. At the summit are long snowsheds covering the tracks. These sheds protect the line from the winter. And it is only due to this method that a train ever gets over the mountain.

"On both sides of the mountain the line winds down in a succession of winding curves to lessen the grade. Running off from the railway are switches, which, diverging from the grade, run up into the hills and gradually come to a dead level. These switchbacks, as they are called, are so constructed that they can be thrown from any point on the grade. And if a train breaks in two while ascending the steep grade the runaway cars can be switched on to one of these spurs, where the breakaway finally stops after it has run up the spur as far as the momentum attained in its descent will take it.

"All heavy trains have an extra locomotive before the grade is tackled. These are called helper engines and are kept in roundhouses at each side of the mountain with steam up.

"One night I got word from Clear Creek, a town in the western valley, that the 9:20 freight would be 30 minutes late on account of having to pull out a crippled engine, 1,129. She had burned out her fuel and had to be hauled to Grand Junction for repairs.

"That night about 10 o'clock, after I had passed down the Salt Lake express, I heard the freight coughing up the long grade from Clear Creek. There was a snowstorm raging, and the wind howled around the station like the mischief. When the overdue 9:20 pulled into the shelter of the big snowsheds on the wind swept summit, the first thing I asked was, 'Where's the dead engine?'

"'Behind the doghouse,' shouted the 'con.' But as I held my lamp above my head I failed to see it. I was just about to call his attention to it when, during a lull in the storm, we plainly heard the familiar rattle of the rails as the runaway engine flew at lightning speed down the mountain. No. 1,129 had broken loose and was tearing down the grade to destruction.

"I jumped and pulled the lever which opened the spur switches. This I knew would prevent a smashup, as the engine would run up on the switchback and come to a stop. But I was too late. Almost at the same instant I threw the lever a terrific explosion was heard from far down the mountain. The runaway had exploded.

"I thought you said a moment ago, Mr. Alquist," interrupted the Scientist man, "that the locomotive was a 'dead one.' If she had no fire under her boiler, how could she explode?"

"That was the only thing I couldn't understand myself," the railroad man replied. "I could easily see how the dead engine could break loose on that grade, and I could understand not hearing its descent during such a howling blizzard, but the explosion seemed me. The only theory which in any way solved the mystery was that the old kettle was blown up by compressed air.

"Too see, when the engine broke loose from the freight and started down the mountain the pistons in the cylinders began to act as air compressors. During the rough trip up her throttle probably jammed open, and as the speed increased with every revolution of her drivers her boiler soon filled with compressed air. It was not long before those dying pistons had worked up a pressure of nearly 500 pounds to the square inch, which came in faster than it could escape by the safety valve, and before the old machine reached Clear Creek her boiler let go."

Wanted to See the President. The Washington Star says that a big, gawky country lad went to the White House the other day just as the president had gone out for a morning stroll.

"I want to see the president," he announced to the first man he met.

"Well, there goes the president now," said the man addressing, pointing to the president's retreating form.

"Does my time?" the young man ejaculated. "He walks just like any other man," and the fellow struck out so that he could get close enough to see the president well.

Warwick castle is held by many to be the most beautiful seat in England. The large baronial hall is a magnificent room. It is decorated with the most perfect specimens of armor, furnished in a luxurious manner, and maps of famous and large points abroad on its walls.

How Will She End?

Just budding into womanhood, so fresh, so fair and fine that we turn to watch her as she passes, she trips along the street a picture of health and beauty. Among the passing crowd of worn and wrinkled women, she looks a being from another world. Will she ever be like them? Could they once have been as fair as she? No beauty can last under the strain and drain of female weakness, from which the majority of women suffer in a greater or less degree. They might preserve their fairness of face and form if they would cure the disastrous diseases which affect the womanly organs. Women are cured of such diseases by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It stops the enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, cures bearing-down pains, strengthens the nervous system, and restores the general health. It cures no opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

"I had been a great sufferer from female weakness," writes Mrs. M. B. Wallace, of Muncie, Cook Co., Texas. "I tried four doctors and none did me any good. I suffered six years, but at last I found relief. I followed your advice and took eight bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and four of his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I now feel like a new woman. I have gained eighteen pounds."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness.

IS MARS PEOPLED?

Such a Claim Advanced by a German Scientist.

"Is Mars inhabited?" has been asked very often during recent years and has engaged the serious attention of many astronomers and especially of M. Camille Flammarion, a noted French scientist and author.

Some new light is now thrown on this subject by Professor Ernst Haeckel, an eminent German philosopher. In a book entitled "World Problems," after pointing out that men have been studying the heavens for more than 4,500 years and have only been studying themselves for the last half century he says we may safely assume that the many fixed stars whose light requires thousands of years to reach us are suns and are surrounded by planets and worlds similar to those we know. We may also assume, he holds, that thousands of these planets have arrived at the same stage of development as our world, and it naturally follows that on them the same conditions of life prevail as on this earth, and there is no valid reason why human beings should not live there as they do here.

Professor Haeckel takes care to explain that there are doubtless many planets the temperature of which is such that life, as we understand it, cannot be sustained on them. He thinks it very probable that there are types of animals and plants on some planets which are not to be found on the earth. According to him it is very likely that the biogenetic process exists on Mars, Venus and possibly some other planets of our system, as well as on planets of other solar systems, but plants on these planets have reached a higher stage of development than has been reached by animals and plants of this earth.

If we assume that Mars is inhabited—and Professor Haeckel seems pretty well satisfied that it is—we must assume, he holds, that the men and women whose home is on the planet are not such as we, but of a far higher type. They may resemble us exteriorly, but they are free from our physical defects and are in strength and gracefulness. It is in the intellectual sphere, however, that their superiority is most clearly shown. If there are human beings on these planets, says Prof. Haeckel, it is extremely probable that they far surpass ordinary men and women in intelligence.

The Japanese idea in regard to art treasures is quite different from the American idea, as seen in the home. The American method is to keep all the good pictures or beautiful bronzes or unique vases in evidence all the time. The Japanese way is to store the artistic belongings, bringing different ones to light for a time, and thereby avoiding the too abundant appearance that is often the rule in the Indian Rubber Industry.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important source of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

For Adoption.

Boy two and one half years old. Protestant. Town family preferred. Apply to Secretary of Children's Aid Society.

The Power Company.

Mr. F. A. Hall of Perth, Vice-President of the Central Ontario Power Company, was in town yesterday, accompanied by the representative of a New York banking house, to confer with Mr. J. Alex Culverwell, Managing Director of the Company, regarding the Burleigh Falls-Peterborough-Lindsay project.

Apprentice Wanted.

The Times requires a smart boy for night work to set headings and run messengers. Must be good at spelling. A fine chance for smart lad. Apply at Times Bookstore in daytime, or to Mr. F. Thomas, at night.

A Washout.

The high water in the creek caused a washout at the Charlotte Street bridge, which is being repaired, under the supervision of the Town Engineer. It will require considerable filling to replace the earth which has been carried away.

This is What.

The Hamilton Times has to say about the Sherbrook Male Quartette, who appear at the annual concert of the George Street church choir on April 15th—“The Sherbrook Male Quartette, of Toronto, met with decided favor at the hands of the audience and well merited the frequent encores accorded. Mr. J. M. Sherbrook in tenor solos displayed a remarkable range and sweetness for a male voice and was heartily applauded.” Remember the date, April 15th, 1900. Admission 25 cents.

Business Booming.

Mr. George Stevens, the hustling junk merchant, is doing a rattling business these days. He received a carload of new wares a few days ago, which will be used by his collectors in this district. Mr. Stevens is a believer in advertising, and to that he largely attributes his great success.

The Times the Best.

Mr. Fred English, formerly of Keene, but now of Ottawa, in renewing his subscription to the Times says:—“Just allow me to say that I have been reading your articles on the war in South Africa with a great deal of satisfaction. The Times has put forth the facts more aptly, tersely, and clearly, than any paper that has come under my notice, and I beg to congratulate you on the thoroughly loyal and British tone of those articles.” It is pleasing to receive letters of this kind, and it shows that our efforts are not altogether in vain.

A VETERAN PASSES AWAY.

THE LATE GEN. HAULTAIN'S LONG LIFE OF SERVICE.

Years Spent in the Foreign Service With Honor and Distinction—A Life of Political Usefulness in Peterborough.

Peterborough loses one of its most distinguished citizens in the death of General Haultain, which took place at 335 Stewart street, on Thursday last, April 3rd.

Major-General Francis Mitchell Haultain, second son of Major-General Francis Haultain, of the Royal Artillery, was born at Woolwich in 1818. He entered the Indian army in 1840, and joined the 3rd Punjab Light Infantry of the Madras Presidency. Four years later, he took part, under Outram, in the campaign against the Hill Tribes of the Sawant Waras country above the western Ghats, was present at the taking of the forts of Munabur and Munabur, in the latter of which he was severely wounded, and was mentioned in despatches. He served with the same regiment in India and Burma until he attained the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. In 1870 General Haultain was selected for the command of the 10th Native Infantry, then stationed at Singapore, in the Straits Settlements, a regiment which had been occupying much trouble to its officers by insubordination. This regiment he commanded, first at Singapore, then at Trincomopoly, till he retired in 1874. In 1885 he married Isabella, only daughter of E. B. Thomas, of the Honorable East India Company's Civil Service. In 1878 the General followed the example of his younger brother, the late Lieutenant-Col. Frederick Haultain, R. A., and settled with his family in Peterborough, where he resided up to the time of his death.

General Haultain was in the 42nd year of his age, and was in good health up to ten days prior to his death. On March 23rd he was down town, as usual, and in some way contracted a cold, which developed into pneumonia, and although everything possible was done the progress of the disease could not be stayed. During General Haultain's life in Peterborough he was esteemed and beloved by all. He was for many years President of the Peterborough Real Estate Investment Co., and took great interest in charitable works of every kind. He leaves three sons—Mr. T. Arnold Haultain, Toronto; Dr. Charles, of the Northwest Mounted Police, and Mr. Herbert, of British Columbia. The funeral will take place at 3.30 this afternoon, from 335 Stewart street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

A ROAD TO APSLEY.

A Deputation Leave to Interview C. F. R. Officials at Montreal.

The people to the north of us are leaving no stone unturned to secure railway connection. For years they have been waiting in the vain hope that Peterborough would come to their aid, and when they realized that there was no possibility of any relief from this source, they turned their attention in another direction.

Early last year the Council of Burleigh and Anstruther petitioned the C. P. R. authorities for a line beginning at Norwood, and running by way of Warsaw to Stoney Lake, and Jack's Lake, and thence to Apsley. The Company at once sent an engineer over the proposed route, with the result that they are now seriously considering the matter of building. Yesterday a deputation, consisting of Mr. P. W. P. Shewen, County Commissioner, J. B. Pearce, of Norwood, and the Warden left for Montreal to interview Mr. Shaughnessy in regard to the matter. Mr. Shewen is the accredited representative of the municipality of Burleigh, &c., and Chancery. They expect to return to-morrow.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

The Bay of Quinte conference will meet in Port Hope.

The Snowden House is being house-cleaned, and Dickson says this is no joke.

The creek is still on the rampage. Mr. Snowden says its full, and he ought to know.

Rev. Canon Spragg, of Cobourg, delivered the Lenten sermon in St. John's church last night.

The water in the river is coming up fast. The old Ottonabee will put on lots of liffica this spring.

Mr. Allen McCarthy, the house mover, with a gang of men was engaged yesterday in changing some machinery in the Times press department.

Business is so good with Sergt. Major Macfarlane, proprietor of the Victoria Laundry, Lindsay, that he has been compelled to add additional machinery.

The patriotic concert in Ashburnham on Tuesday night was a great success, as far as the entertainment was concerned, but the attendance was not as large as was expected.

One of our little local contemporaries says that the citizen who has snow or slush in front of his premises, now, ought to be visited by a vigilance committee, which being interpreted, means that the writer is bilious. After the Froster's banquet on Tuesday night, and is not responsible for what he says. Does he mean that citizens should bail the water off the pavements?

TREWERN CHEESE FACTORY.

Report of the Annual Meeting—The Babcock Test.

The annual meeting of the patrons of Trewern Cheese factory was held on March 29th, 1900, for the purpose of appointing officers, etc., for the coming year. There was quite a number present and Mr. T. Fitzgerald occupied the chair.

I was moved by Mr. George Allen, seconded by Mr. G. W. Mann that the patrons be paid for their milk according to the Babcock test.

Mr. G. W. Fitzgerald who has so efficient acted as Secretary-Treasurer for the past nine years was again appointed.

Mr. E. M. Elliott will again act as chairman. Messrs. A. Young, H. McMillan, and T. Milburn were appointed a milk committee. T. Braden and T. Fitzgerald were also appointed auditors.

During the season of 1899 Mr. Warde, inspector of cheese factories, paid two visits to Trewern factory and it is creditable to the patrons that he was enabled to pass a clear report and Mr. Chittick, the cheesemaker, wishes to publicly thank his patrons for their hearty co-operation.

The following is the secretary's account of the season's make in Trewern cheese factory for 1899: Total pounds of milk, 918,515; total pounds of cheese, 89,355; average price per lb., 9 1/2-1000; total value, $8,189.55.

We the undersigned certify that we have examined all books and accounts and have found everything correct.

T. BRADEN,
T. FITZGERALD,
Auditors.

THE TIMES LETTER BOX

Letters from The People on Interesting Topics.

(NOTE.—The Times does not hold itself in any way responsible for the opinions expressed by its correspondents.—Ed. Times.)

Two Questions.

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—Will the Times be good enough to answer the following:— 1. Is Mr. Grover Cleveland eligible for the U.S. Presidency? 2. What was the course in the last international yacht race?

Yours truly,

A READER.

Ans.—1. Mr. Cleveland is eligible to the Presidency of the United States. 2. In the last race with the Shamrock the official course was 30 miles, 15 miles to leeward and back; the Columbia sailed about thirty-seven miles all told.

The Bloodiest Battle.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I had an argument with a friend over what was the bloodiest battle of the century. My friend said that the battle of the Wilderness, during the American civil war, was the bloodiest. I contended that at Waterloo more lives were lost. We bet a new hat, and agreed to leave the matter to the Times. Kindly give us an early reply, and oblige, yours etc.,

A READER.

Ans.—Neither are right. The “bloodiest battle of the century” was that of Borodino, a Russian village, where Napoleon fought the Russians on Sept. 7, 1812. Nearly 80,000 men were placed hors du combat.

The Hospital Nurse.

Editor Morning Times:

Sir,—As one familiar with the work of hospitals permit me to render this tribute to the hospital nurse—

ANGUS.

The Hospital Nurse.

She glides through the wards as an angel of peace.

Alleviating the turmoil of pain, Relieving the anguish of bodily ills And calming the feverish brain.

The touch of her hand is a sweet soothing balm, Her smile is a sunbeam of cheer, Her comforting words like thrilling re-creation That charm the enraptured ear.

O'er faces disfigured and covered with blood She bends her own lovely face, Till she seems like a radiant gold-tinted sky.

O'erhaunting some hideous place.

The frowns of her patients ne'er darken her brow, She's with them for better or worse, With hands ever ready and zeal never spent, This heaven-sent hospital nurse.

Destroyed by Fire.

Yesterday morning about nine o'clock a small frame house situated on the road running north and south west of the residence of Mr. T. E. Bradburn, was burned to the ground. The sole occupant was an old woman named Mrs. Gilm. The house was entirely destroyed, not a post being left standing. Almost all the contents were also destroyed. The house is supposed to have caught fire from the stove or pipes.

The Planet Mars.

Editor Morning Times

Sir,—As the Times answers all kinds of questions, I venture to seek information. Will you kindly give me a description of the planet Mars, and oblige.

R. PHILIP.

Mars is about 140,000,000 miles from the sun. Its day is about 40 minutes longer than ours, and its year is 687 days, equal to 87 of our days. Its diameter is less than 4,000 miles and its volume is only about one-fourth that of the earth. The light and heat of the sun enjoyed there is less than one-half of that which we receive. It appears to the naked eye as a bright red star, shining with a steady light. It has an atmosphere like our own, loaded with clouds and two moons revolve around it. The cause of its red color has been ascribed to the vegetation which might be red instead of green or to peculiar conditions of its atmosphere. It is nearer like the earth than any of the other planets and is believed to be inhabited.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

The Times invites all its readers to contribute to this column all items of a personal or social nature, such as the arrival and departure of guests, th movements of well known people, business men, and particulars of marriages, parties, etc. All that is required is to send a postcard or letter, or telephone the Times, giving rough outline, and we will put it into shape.

POWELL SORTIES AND PLUMER ATTACKS BOERS.

After Some Sharp Fighting the British Were Repulsed, Leaving 20 Dead on the Field and Several Taken Prisoners.

Boers 12 Miles From Bloemfontein.

London, April 5.—The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "General Clements' division, 4,000 strong, has arrived from the southward and has encamped five miles north of the city after a continued march for a fortnight. There is no danger of a water famine here. An important engagement, lasting several hours, was fought yesterday afternoon at Boman Kop, between the Boers and British outposts.

Preterita, Tuesday, April 3.

In the fight of Ramathlaba March 31 the following were taken prisoners: Capt. Cheve, Duncan, Robertson and McLaren, (Crewe and Duncan and Robertson have since died.) Staff officers Cecil and Granville and nine soldiers of whom six were wounded. The prisoners all belong to Col. Plumer's Rhodesian forces.

THOUSANDS OF HORSES ARRIVING.

Lord Roberts Will Not Waste His Strength on the Air.

London, April 5.—Detached bodies of Boer horse numbering from 500 to 1,000 each have appeared at several places to the southward and eastward of Bloemfontein, threatening the railroad but communication by wire and rail is not in the least affected.

One of these forces is near East Springfontein on the Bloemfontein railroad, and General Gatacre's forces are reported to be about to engage it. Lord Roberts, except to safeguard the railway, seemingly declines to send columns chasing the Boer bands. He is reserving his cavalry and transport animals for the forward movement. Explanations having indirect origin in the War Office as to why Lord Roberts is inactive are that there has been a lack of horses for remounts. New horses are arriving by train loads hourly. The pressure on the railroad is so great that private parcels and the officers' newspapers have not been forwarded from Cape Town for three weeks.

The situation in the Free State remains far from clear, and is unsatisfactory to British observers. The sickness among the Boer prisoners at Simonstown continues to increase. Five men died April 3. The prisoners who were on hard transport, Mongolian have been transferred to the shore camp. Unless the sickness abates it is not likely that more prisoners will be sent to St. Helena. Rudyard Kipling has returned to Cape Town.

BRITISH FORCES REPULSED.

Baden-Powell Makes a Sortie and Plumer Attacks the Boers.

London, April 5.—1.55 p.m.—A special despatch from Lorenzo Marques says sharp fighting occurred April 2 in the neighborhood of Mafeking. The garrison made a sortie while Colonel Plumer's cavalry attacked the Boers at Ramathlaba. Both attacks were repulsed. Twenty of Colonel Plumer's men were found on the field and six others were made prisoners. The Federal losses were small.

IN THE ENEMY'S COUNTRY.

Colonel Plumer Makes a Daring March into the Transvaal.

Gabroon, Bechuanaland, March 21.—Colonel Plumer with a force of British mounted infantry started on a daring march on Sunday, the 15th, with the object of threatening the Boer lines of communication. After two rapid night marches through Transvaal territory he arrived at dawn on March 21, within 12 miles of Zereba, and distinctly heard the bombardment of Mafeking. Having reconnoitered the country with a view of future operations without sighting a single white man, Colonel Plumer crossed the railroad south.

He found the railroad in possession of a Boer force, and returned. Thence, finding the railroad hence damaged by Gen. Smyth's main force, he returned to the vicinity of Mafeking.

Rumors reach here that a relief column is approaching Mafeking from the south.

TWELVE MILES FROM ROBERTS.

The Boer Commandos Closing in On Bloemfontein and the British.

London, April 5.—The Boers are evidently moving in upon Bloemfontein and the British outposts have been in touch with them at a distance of twelve miles from the town. The advance of commandos from the north has placed the Free Staters who surrendered to the British between the upper and the nether millstone. They are either compelled to break their oath to lay down arms or be maltreated or even killed by their fellow-countrymen as traitors. Under these circumstances it is not surprising that many of them are again in the field—taken up an entrenched position north ward with the object of preventing the approach of a relief force.

The usual Sunday truce enables the garrison to continue playing cricket matches.

An Irish-American trooper of the Protectorate regiment has deserted to the Boers. A reward of £50 has been offered for his capture, dead or alive.

ENGLISHMAN—BADLY ASSAULTED.

He Refused to Serve with the Boers and Was Imprisoned.

Wepener, April 5.—An English refugee who arrived at Mafeking, Bechuanaland, stated that he was commanded by the republicans, but refused to serve. He was taken to prison, assaulted and left unconscious. He made his way to Bechuanaland, with his wife and family, and when across the river was fired upon by some Boers from the Free State side. The Boers are indignant over the in-cumbstances of peculiar aggravation. It is alleged that though he had taken the oath he was lending the Boers to the attack on Kroon Spruit, and that members of his household helped to loot the captured wagons. The death of the criminal and the firing of his home would not be too severe a penalty for conduct so disgraceful.

It is not wise for an enemy who provoked disloyalty and commanded British subjects in the colonies, and who are believed to be recruited by burghers who have just accepted British clemency in the Free State, to initiate a system of military severity towards men who have changed sides."

IN THE ENEMY'S COUNTRY.

Colonel Plumer Makes a Daring March into the Transvaal.

Gaborone, Bechuanaland, March 23.—Colonel Plumer with a force of British mounted infantry started on a daring march on Sunday, the 25th, with the object of threatening the Boer lines of communication. After two rapid night marches through Transvaal territory he arrived at dawn on March 27, within 12 miles of Zwerst, and distinctly heard the bombardment of Mafeking. Having reached the country with a view of future operations without sighting a single white man, Colonel Plumer crossed the railroad south.

He found the railroad in possession of a Boer force, and, returning, found the railroad heavily damaged by Gen. Snyman's main force, he returned to the vicinity of Mafeking.

Rumors reach here that a relief column is approaching Mafeking from the south.

TWELVE MILES FROM ROBERTS.

The Boer Commandos Closing in On Bloemfontein and the British.

London, April 5.—The Boers are evidently moving in upon Bloemfontein and the British outposts have been in touch with them at a distance of twelve miles from the town. The advance of commandos from the north has placed the Free Staters who surrendered to the British between the upper and the nether millstone. They are either compelled to break their oath of arms down arms or be maltreated or even killed by their fellow-countrymen as traitors. Under these circumstances it is not surprising that many of them are again in the field—they cannot help it. When the northern advance of General Roberts begins, and it cannot be long delayed, this state of things must change, for the northern Boers will be pressed back and kept so far from those who have a desire to resume peaceful pursuits that a recurrence of this state of affairs will be impossible. There is the greatest need for caution on the part of the Commander-in-Chief. No less an authority than The London Times recommends fierce reprisals, but the duration and ultimate result of the war is so bound up in the question that hasty action might be fatal. The political leniency of General Roberts had a good effect until the southern advance and the renewed activity of his enemies, and when these enemies are vanquished this effect will be felt. Should stern vengeance be taken upon the Boers guerrilla warfare lasting for months might be engendered, for the Boer would never become reconciled. If the French under Napoleon had behaved leniently to the Spaniards, the peninsular might have been pacified. There has hitherto been no shooting or hanging in the train of our troops and no wanton destruction of farms, consequently no strong incentive to remain in the field such as harsh treatment would give him. Therefore to avoid guerrilla warfare the utmost circumspection should be, and doubtless is, being exercised by Lord Roberts.

CANADIANS GO TO THE FRONT.

London, April 5.—A despatch from Cape Town dated yesterday announces the departure to the front of the second contingent of the Canadian mounted infantry. The force is undoubtedly the second portion of the second contingent, which sailed on the Milwaukee, reaching Cape Town on March 22nd. The force consisted of the Toronto, Montreal and Kingston mounted rifles.

SAILED FOR BEIRA.

Transport Chicago Leaves Cape Town With a Body of Troops.

Cape Town, April 5.—The transport Chicago has sailed from here with Major-General H. A. Bushman's corps for Beira, Portuguese East Africa. She carries supplies and a plant for a Rhodesian railway.

CANADIANS TOOK OFF WOUNDED.

Smith-Dorrien's Brigade Did Good Work Under Fire.

Bloemfontein, April 5.—4 p.m.—Those who partook in the fighting Saturday speak highly of the heroism displayed by the officers and the non-commissioned officers of the artillery. The infantry, mounted on Burmese ponies were active helpers. Roberts' Horse charged through the Boers, doing considerable execution. On Sunday Gen. Smith-Dorrien's brigade (including the Canadians) recaptured the wounded and moved them to the hospital under fire. They also buried the dead.

Gen. Smith-Dorrien was foremost in assisting. In the afternoon the Rifles attacked Bosman's kop, the fighting extending over a wide range.

RESCUED 91 PRISONERS.

Col. Porter Performs a Brilliant Feat at Corn Spruit.

London, April 5.—The Times prints a despatch from Bloemfontein saying that Col. Porter with ninety cavalrymen and two guns charged a body of Boers on Sunday and rescued 91 British prisoners, including 11 officers, who were captured at Corn Spruit on March 31. The British suffered no casualties.

LEAKAGE OF INFORMATION.

Dutch Sympathizers in Bloemfontein Have Been Arrested.

Bloemfontein, April 5.—There is a leakage of information regarding the British movements, and many Dutch sympathizers in Bloemfontein have been arrested in consequence, much to their apparent surprise.

A proclamation just issued by Lord Roberts orders all the residents of Bloemfontein to be indoors by eight o'clock in the evening.

CLEMENTS NEAR BLOEMFONTEIN.

He Passes Through Petrusburg on Sunday Morning Last.

London, April 5.—The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Daily Mail, telegraphing Tuesday, says: "General Clements' force traversed Petrusburg Sunday morning and is now encamped a day's march from here."

AN IRISH-AMERICAN DESERTED.

Mafeking Reports That the Pressure is Being Relieved.

Mafeking, March 23.—There has been little excitement during the past week. The Boer shell fire came in fitful gusts, and has little effect. The British casualties are almost nil. The Boers seem to be breaking up their main larger westward, but have taken up their main base westward, but have taken up an entrenches position northward with the view of preventing the approach of a relief force.

The usual Sunday truce enables the garrison to continue playing cricket matches.

An Irish-American trooper of the Protectorate regiment has deserted to the Boers. A reward of £50 has been offered for his capture, dead or alive.

ENGLISHMAN BADLY ASSAULTED.

He Refused to Serve with the Boers and Was Imprisoned.

Wepener, April 5.—An English refugee who arrived at Mafeking, Basutoland, stated that he was commandeered by the republics, but refused to serve. He was taken to prison, assaulted and left unconscious. He made his way to Basutoland, with his wife and family, and when across the river was fired upon by some Boers from the Free State side. The Boers are indignant over the incident.

circumstances of peculiar aggravation. It is alleged that though he had taken the oath he was leading the Boers to the attack on Koon Spruit, and that members of his household helped to loot the captured wagons. The death of the criminal and the firing of his homestead would not be too severe a penalty for conduct so disgraceful. "It is not wise for an enemy who provoked disloyalty and commanded British subjects in the colonies, and who are believed to be recruited by burghers who have just accepted British clemency in the Free State, to initiate a system of military severity towards men who have changed sides."

SHOOT THOSE WHO SURRENDER.

Refugees State That the Boers Are Behaving Cruelly.

London, April 5.—The Times, in a special from Bloemfontein, dated April 3, says: "The Boers are across the Modder in

HE WAS INSTIGATED BY ANOTHER.

The Would-be Assassin of the Prince Incited to the Deed by One Whose Name He Conceals.

Brussels, April 5.—The attempt at the assassination of the Prince of Wales was the sole topic of conversation on the streets and in the cafes and theatres last evening. Everywhere regret and deep indignation were manifested and satisfaction at the failure of the criminal attempt was universally expressed.

It is stated that when the crowd rushed at Sipido he received a blow in the face from someone's fist which drew blood.

One version of Sipido's statement is that he declared that he committed the act because he was an anarchist and that he did not allude to South Africa.

It was believed that the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate would today adopt resolutions expressing indignant reprobation of the attempt upon the Prince's life.

IT WAS PREMEDITATED.

The Patriote says:—"Investigation proved premeditation. The interrogation of the prisoner lasted four hours, and it shows that he was instigated by an unknown person, who persuaded him to buy a pistol on Sunday in the old market for three francs. Accompanied by this person, Sipido went on Tuesday to a meeting in the Flemish theatre, and then to the Maison du Peuple, where they had drinks. Then they went to a wine shop, where Sipido wrote a letter saying he had obtained employment. He then went to the railway station and asked the hour of the arrival of the train. Later he entered a neighboring cafe and loaded his revolver in the lavatory.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Sipido refused to give the name of his companion, who, he said, was a young man, some years older than himself. After Sipido was locked up the magistrate went to the house of his parents.

The magistrates are convinced that Sipido does not tell the whole truth and wishes to save some one.

Sipido passed the afternoon in the Chamber of Representatives. When he went to the station he asked the first person he met where the Prince was. The person answered, "That gentleman with the hat on."

At the same instant the Prince took a seat, and a servant handed him a cup of tea. Sipido waited until the servant departed and then rushed towards the Prince's carriage.

SIPIDO'S PARENTS DISBELIEVE.

The magistrates are going to verify the prisoner's statement. The commitment charges the prisoner with incident. Rifles are coming in freely here. Lieut. Moorcroft to-day found over 400 rifles, which had been buried by a retreating Boer commando, and a number of horses belonging to the Boers have been taken. Late to-night our outposts were heavily fired on.

"FIRE HIS HOMESTEAD."

The Times Recommends Rigorous Measures Towards Traitors.

London, April 5.—The Times says: "We have no desire to deal harshly with brave enemies, but if our efforts to pacify the Free State by clemency are frustrated we shall be constrained to exercise military rights. There is reason to believe that some of the burghers who took the oath of allegiance handed in old guns and have since dug up modern rifles and rejoined the ranks of the fighters. It is stated that not one person from the Free State Commandant Pretorius has been guilty of treachery under cir-

ONE GRAND DISPLAY OF ENTHUSIASTIC LOYALTY.

Seven Miles of Cheering Humanity Greet Her Majesty on the Road to Dublin.

THE ROYAL PARTY FOLLOW QUAIN PRECEDENTS.

A Band Played "God Save the Queen" and the Spectators With One Accord Sang the Anthem as the Procession Moved on, the Royal Standards Flying.

Dublin, April 5.—Queen Victoria went out for a drive in Phoenix Park during the afternoon as quietly as she would have done in London. She bowed in return to the frequent salutations. Her Majesty did not enter the city streets and returned to the Vice-Regal Lodge for dinner.

Brussels, April 5.—The police have made a thorough search of Sipido's home, but nothing new was discovered. Thus far they have failed to associate him with any particular anarchist association. They believe he had an accomplice of his own age with whom he discussed the details of the contemplated crime.

Brussels, April 5.—One of Sipido's accomplices has been arrested by the commissioner of police. Sipido seems inclined to make a confession and judging from his latest statement the outrage was the outcome of a plot. The names of three of his associates are now known to the police.

Dublin, April 5.—The Queen's progress through the city yesterday was one grand display of enthusiastic loyalty. The seven miles drive from Kingsdown to the city limits was lined with cheering, delighted humanity, and the lengthy route was ablaze with flags and streamers.

The first halt was at Upper Leeson street, where a quaint and beautiful ceremony was conducted. This was the opening of the gates of the Irish castle which had been constructed across the roadway, with a massive arch and picturesque turrets. It was a stately scene, rich in color and in reminiscences of old-time traditions.

The Lord Mayor and aldermen were behind the gateway, standing on a crimson carpet and arrayed in scarlet robes, trimmed with fur. The mace-bearer was well in front with his mace, and the sword-bearer was beside the Lord Mayor, with a ponderous blade in a jewelled scabbard. Behind them were the Lord Mayor's footmen in blue velvet livery, with red trunks and blue stockings. Farther back was a scarlet line of Inniskilling Fusiliers, with their band, and at the street crossings above and below were guards of well mounted Lancers, with their brilliant uniforms. Precedents from Oliver Cromwell's time were followed, and permission for the royal entry was asked and granted with stately grace. The Athlete Purcell of Armes, in a crimson costume heavily emblazoned in gold, demanded the opening of the gates in the Queen's name. The Ulster King of Arms, in similar gorgeous array, assisted in the mock negotiations. The Lord Mayor assented with gracious courtesy, and the gates were opened by half a dozen fantastically dressed servants, emerging from the recesses. The castle gates were again closed until a second trumpet call announced the coming of the Queen, when they were reopened, while the multitude of Spectators Cheered Wildly.

This ceremony was followed by another usually in accord with traditions. The royal carriage drew up in front of the Lord Mayor, who presented the keys of Dublin and the sword of office, kneeling as he held the hilt toward the Queen, and the point towards himself. The Queen touched the keys and sword in token that she was to retain possession of them and listened to the address of welcome, which was presented in a magnificent Celtic cadence. Then followed a most graceful reply, characteristic of the Queen's good sense and tact, and the Lady Mayor, with charming grace, asked to accept a bouquet.

The band played "God Save the Queen," and the spectators with one accord sang the anthem as the procession moved on, with the royal standard fluttering above the castle gate.

Between Two Irish Flags.

This was the only halt in the Queen's triumphal progress through the gaily decorated streets.

The moment Her Majesty passed the gate enthusiasm broke loose. Hands played, men cheered and sang, all bareheaded, and the women waved their handkerchiefs and struggled to get a better view, many of them even weeping. It was a long circuit through Fitzwilliam street to Merrion square, and the Queen to College Green and the city hall, and by the Northern Quays to Phoenix Park and the Vice-Regal Lodge. The cheering was continuous all the way, and not a single hostile demonstration nor a dissenting voice was heard at any point. The Queen has never had a heartier welcome anywhere in the United Kingdom. The streets were lined with 1,000 troops from the gateway to Phoenix Park, and the roadway thence to the Vice-Regal Lodge was guarded with the Irish constabulary force.

There were mounted lines of men at the crossings, and special guards of honor were drawn up, with bands at various positions. Between these files of scarlet passed four landaus, with their coachmen and footmen in royal livery. The

Duchess of Connaught, with her three children, was in one carriage, and Princess Christian and Princess Henry of Battenberg were

In the Queen's Carriage.

The Duke of Connaught, with equerries in waiting, the military staff and the aide-de-camps were in close attendance upon the Queen, and an escort of Life Guards, in brilliant uniforms, preceded and followed the carriage.

It was a stately and picturesque cavalcade that flashed by the spectators, who had been waiting for hours to see it, and when it came they had only eyes for the little lady with the white hair, whose aged face was brightened with a sympathetic smile, and when it passed it was the most natural thing in the world for them to sing "God Save the Queen." The military arrangements for this splendid town show had been admirably ordered by the Duke of Connaught.

The names of Irish regiments were conspicuous in Merrion square, and inscriptions of welcome to the Queen were numerous, one of the most touching being: "Better loved ye cannot be; will ye no come back again?" The men of Trinity College appeared in their hoods and gowns at the College Green, with a company of Imperial Yeomanry not far away. At the Lord Chancellor's home an immense khaki banner was displayed, and from another house hung the flag which Sir Theophilus Shepstone raised in Pretoria when the Transvaal was annexed twenty years ago. The American flag was even more conspicuous than it was at the London Jubilee, for it was seen in well-nigh every block.

Illuminations Last Night.

The city was brilliantly illuminated in the evening, and the streets were densely crowded with good natured spectators, exulting in the splendors of the occasion. Not sooner had the Queen arrived at the Vice-Regal Lodge and touched, than she drove out again in Phoenix Park, being much cheered. It is understood that she expressed herself as much pleased with the reception, and as having suffered no fatigue.

Dublin was wild with delight over the excellence with which all the arrangements were carried out. Not one royal object marked the line of march, and the popular enthusiasm buried all political feeling for the time.

Before landing, the Queen, who looked remarkably well, asked for a bunch of shamrock. These were carried and throughout the day she was then pinned upon her breast.

The Duke of Abercorn, Premier Peet, of Ireland, who, with the rest of the Celtic party, went to the Vice-Regal Lodge after the royal party arrived and wrote his name in the visiting book, said to the correspondent of the Associated Press:—

"It is the most wonderful, chivalrous and spontaneous exhibition I have ever seen, and I am immensely proud of being an Irishman. Neither the weather nor the crowds have been more propitious. The demonstrations show that, despite all political differences, Ireland is a loyal portion of the Empire."

Notes of the Day.

Her Majesty was clad in the usual black, the only relief being white and silver ornaments on her bonnet. Thanks to the sunshine, the forests of hawthorn had regained their freshness after yesterday's smothering, and then one could realize that the onset of the Dublin people that their decorations surpassed those of the Jubilee in London was not without foundation.

During the five minutes when the Queen was receiving and answering the address of welcome, there was scarcely a lull in the frantic cheering of the crowds. Frequently Her Majesty nodded; in fact she scarcely ceased nodding during the entire nine mile drive.

Compared with the Queen's recent visit to London, when she was practically unattended, the scene offered a vivid contrast. Defending and continuous cheers marked every stage of the route, especially at the historic Trinity College grounds, where the crowds were thicker than at any other point. The ancient pile was almost hidden by stands, which were black with people and flaming with flags and festoons.

The Queen herself was vainly astonished by this extraordinary ovation, and although she must have been well nigh exhausted by her constant acknowledgment of the greetings of the welcoming hosts, she repeatedly responded to the students' wild acclaim.

Messages From the Queen.

During the evening the Queen, through Sir Arthur Blythe, her private secretary, sent the Lord Mayor a message, saying that she was not over-fatigued by the morning's drive, and had been deeply touched and gratified by the welcome she had received. The message concluded as follows:—

"Her Majesty looks forward with much pleasure to her stay in Ireland."

Later, through Sir Matthew White Ridley and Earl Cadogan, the Queen officially conveyed to the Lord Mayor the following:—

"Convey to the Lord Mayor and citizens of Dublin and sincere thanks of the Queen for the loyalty and enthusiasm of the greeting which Her Majesty received during the procession through the beautifully decorated route."

"The Queen is happy to be once more among her Irish people, from whom she has gained and received so warm a welcome."

DOGS AND SHEEP.

Mr. J. H. Woolley, of Norfolk Co., Ont., has issued an address to the sheep farmers of Ontario on the subject of the ravages by dogs upon their industry. An amendment to the law is urgently demanded. "The present law," he says, "is unjust to breeders of sheep and owners of dogs; but if we wish the conditions improved we must look after it, and have the necessary changes made. As one of the sheep breeders of the Province I would offer some amendments I think we should have:—1st, full value for sheep not killed or destroyed; a set maximum price should be established for registered and unregistered sheep, and judged by one or more inspectors in each municipality, to be appointed by the Council, same as fence-viewers or pound-keepers; and that it be the duty of the assessor to collect the dog tax, and furnish each dog owner with a tag, for which he will pay an annual fee of — cents, which would be a means of getting rid of a lot of worthless curs, and the tax would be collected in full on all worthy dogs, as all dogs without tags are game. All titles, towns, and incorporated villages shall bear a share of the loss caused by dogs worrying sheep, in proportion to the number of dogs kept in each. 4th, say, a tax of three dollars on each bitch and one dollar on each dog, which would induce a better breed of dogs to sell."

A similar complaint exists in other Provinces. In the Nova Scotia Legislature a strong petition against dogs has been presented by the Farmers' Association, representing every part of the Province. In discussing the subject, the Hon. W. Black said it was a matter of serious importance to all. Many people could give testimony to the baneful effects of dogs upon the sheep-raising industry, and the discouragement thereby caused to farmers endeavoring to propagate that useful animal. If it were possible to annihilate 99 out of every 100 dogs and substitute 100 sheep where there was only one at the present time, he thought it would be a great blessing to Nova Scotia. He had made that statement in Antigonish, at a meeting, when a gentleman in the audience told him that he was very much pleased with all his remarks excepting one. He (Mr. Black) said he would be happy to know what it was that he could not agree with. The gentleman said, "you left one dog. I would have destroyed the 100." The country of Antigonish and many sections of the Island of Cape Breton, and almost every county in the P. Province had large sections better adapted to sheep raising than to any other industry, and the complaint was that more sheep would be raised if they could be protected from the ravages of dogs. How much better it would be, even apart from the financial aspect, if we covered our hills and valleys with flocks of Shropshires and Leicester instead of these howling curs, which were only a nuisance and cause of filth and disgust everywhere.

Toronto General Trusts Corporation

First Annual Report for the Year Ending December 31st, 1899.

The first annual meeting of this Corporation since the union of the Toronto General Trusts Company and the Trusts Corporation of Ontario was held on the 28th March, 1900 at the offices of the Corporation, corner Yonge and Colborne streets. Dr. John Hoskin, Q.C., L.L.D., the President of the Corporation, occupied the chair, and among those present were Vice-Presidents Hon. S. C. Wood and W. H. Beatty, and Hon. Mr. Justice Robertson, Amelius Irving, Q.C., B. H. Oiler, Q.C., J. L. Blaikie, William McCabe, Alfred Hoskin, Q.C., Robert Jaffray, G. J. Kenny, John Greig, W. D. Matthews, A. B. Lee, James Henderson, William Hendrie, E. B. Oiler, M. P., E. Rickford, Edward Martin, Q.C., D. H. Thomson, Q.C., William Gordon, George Porter, Alexander Nairn, William Cook, Walter Barwick, Q.C., Edward Galley, T. Sutherland, Stayner, Samuel Nordheimer, Henry Gooderham, J. G. Scott, Q.C., J. J. Foy, Q.C., M.P.P., E. T. Malone, Q.C., Dr. J. W. Digby of Brantford and J. W. Langmuir.

Mr. J. W. Langmuir, the Managing Director, acted as secretary and submitted the statements showing the operations of the Corporation for the year ended 31st December, 1899.

The report of the Corporation was read as follows:—
 The Directors of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation have pleasure in submitting to the shareholders the first annual report of the Corporation.

The act of the Ontario Legislature authorizing the union of the Toronto General Trusts Company and the Trusts Corporation of Ontario was assented to on the first of April, 1899, from which date the amalgamation took effect. The statements accompanying this report relate to and include the operations of the old Toronto General Trusts Company for the full year ended 31st December, 1899, but owing to the continued and unavoidable separation of the offices of the two old companies and the inability of the management to thoroughly examine the books of the Trust Corporation of Ontario before the close of the year the Directors have for the present excluded from the statements all matters and transactions of the Trust Corporation of Ontario.

The paid-up capital and surplus of the two companies at the date of amalgamation were, according to their respective balance sheets, as follows:—
 The Toronto General Trusts Company, $550,000; the Trusts Corporation of Ontario, $228,000; showing total paid-up capital and surplus to be $778,000.

Out of this sum $163,000 less what had been already written off during the present year, was set aside as a contingent fund, to meet all ascertained losses and contemplated shrinkage in values, and $123,000 was carried to the reserve fund. Having thus dealt with these portions of the paid-up capital and surplus of the two companies, paid-up stock in the new corporation for the balance was issued to the shareholders in proportion to their respective holdings as at 1st of April, 1899, as follows:—

To the shareholders of the Toronto General Trusts Company, 3,280 shares of $100... .. $328,000

To the shareholders of the Trusts Corporation of Ontario, 1,840 shares of $100... .. 184,000

As the act of amalgamation provides that the Capital stock of the Corporation shall be ten thousand shares of $100 each, or $1,000,000, it became necessary to issue five thousand and eight hundred shares of new stock at a premium of 25 per cent. This stock, after the adjustment of fractions of shares in both the old and the new stock, was issued to the old shareholders or their approved nominees, and the premium of 25 per cent. has been paid and added to the reserve, thus increasing that fund to $250,000. The capital of the new stock thus issued was made payable in ten bi-monthly instalments of 10 per cent., commencing the 19th of September, 1899, and ending March, 1901; and your Directors have to report that the two instalments which matured before 31st December were promptly paid, thus making the paid-up capital and surplus of the Corporation at that date $850,240, as follows:—

Paid up capital (including two instalments paid on new stock)... .. $600,240
 Reserve... .. 250,000
 $850,240

The remaining eight instalments of the new stock, amounting to $399,760 (of which two have been paid at the date of this report), will, when received, make the paid-up capital and reserve $1,250,000.

During the past year the Corporation has been appointed to various positions, and has assumed new trust and agency business to the value of over four million dollars, as follows:—
 Executorships... .. $1,863,310 41
 Trusts... .. 786,368 12
 Administrations... .. 304,489 93
 Guardianships... .. 47,257 64
 Estate management agencies... .. 34,540 59
 Liquidatorships... .. 180,000 00
 Commitments... .. 21,235 75
 Guaranteed investment agencies... .. 205,683 80

$4,022,836 24

The amount of the business now under the care of the Corporation, after deducting all distributions to date, now aggregate over $20,000,000. The profit and loss statement submitted herewith shows the sources from which the revenues of the Corporation were derived during the year, as limited in the second paragraph of this report, also the charges made against the same. From this net profit for the year, amounting to $474,830, your Directors have declared dividends at the rate of 7 1/2 per cent. on the paid-up capital, amounting to $33,750.25, and have carried forward the balance, viz.: $11,082.91, to the credit of profit and loss.

Considering the enormous aggregate of business transacted by the Corporation, it may be a matter of surprise to some of the shareholders that the net profits are not larger. In this connection, however, it should be kept in mind that, apart from interest derived from the investment of the paid-up capital and surplus of the Corporation, the chief sources of profit are commissions received for the care and management of estates and trusts and agencies. It will be readily understood, having regard to the extremely moderate charges of the Corporation, that an enormous volume of business has to be dealt with in order to produce the compensation which accrues at the credit of the profit and loss account, and in this connection it should be stated that the Corporation strictly confines its operations within the scope of a trust and agency business.

Your Directors regard with great satisfaction the rapid growth of the business of the Corporation, more particularly its operations as executor, administrator, trustee and agent. The business which may be done by the Corporation in these capacities is capable of almost unlimited extension, and it will be the policy of the Corporation, while making provision for the development of the business in every part of the country, to keep up and improve the high standard of efficiency, and at the same time keep its charges on a most moderate scale. The expenses of the Corporation have been abnormally large during the past year, chiefly owing to the enforced separation of the two offices and the duplication of many expenditures. It should be borne in mind, however, that the cost of management and the expenses of carrying the care of estate and trust funds must necessarily be large. The Corporation combines in its operations not only the work of the largest trust company in Canada, but (having regard to the unrealized mortgages and securities of the same) also the largest loaning association, and the efficient conduct of these operations requires the services of a specially trained and necessarily expensive staff of officials.

When the amalgamation bill passed the Legislature your Directors took steps to prepare plans for the reconstruction of the premises of the Corporation on the corner of Yonge and Colborne streets. The plans provide for the occupation of the whole of the ground floor, having a frontage of thirty-five feet on Yonge by a depth of one hundred feet on Colborne, together with the greater portion of the first floor. The work of reconstruction has so far advanced as to warrant the complete occupation of the premises not later than the 1st of April.

Your Directors have to record with deep regret the death of no less than three members of the Board since negotiations for the amalgamation of the two companies were entered upon. Dr. E. A. Meredith was associated with the Toronto General Trusts Company from the date of its organization in 1882 until his death, during which time he was faithful and assiduously performed the duties of First Vice-President. Mr. B. Homer Dixon was also a highly esteemed member of the Board from the date of its organization. Mr. Hugh Ryan was a director of the Corporation from 1882 until his death, and his great business ability and experience were of the utmost service to that company. All of these gentlemen (two of them having very large estates) manifested their confidence in our management by appointing the Corporation to be their executors and trustees.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN HOSKIN,
 President, and Chairman of the Executive Committee.

J. W. LANGMUIR,
 Managing Director.

Dr. John Hoskin, in moving the adoption of the report, said:—
 Your Directors have much pleasure in meeting the shareholders of the amalgamated company at its first annual meeting, and in placing before you statements showing the year's operations and the steady progress of the Corporation.

I regret that we are unable to hold this meeting in our new room, but the alterations rendered necessary by our increased business have so far advanced, been completed. When completed we shall have offices fully up to our requirements.

I have on former occasions, as have also my predecessors, referred to the aims and objects of the Corporation, and when going over the details as fully as I have done heretofore, it may not be amiss briefly to refer to one or two advantages we offer to the public, especially as our usefulness is being more and more recognized, as is evidenced by the increased volume of business summarized in the report.

One advantage we have is continuity. This of itself is a very important consideration. Trusts under the control of individual trustees are, of course, subject to the incidents of illness, removal, death, etc., so that the creator of the trust can have no foreknowledge when these events shall happen as to who may be the persons appointed as new trustees. A reference to the proceedings of our courts of this Province and elsewhere will show you how often it becomes necessary because of these contingencies to seek judicial aid.

Again, where members of the family are appointed trustees, executors, etc., not infrequently it happens, great pressure is brought to bear upon them by beneficiaries to encroach upon the trust, very often to the detriment of the parties and destruction of the estate. We, of course, are removed from influences of this nature, and the creators of trusts may rest satisfied that in our hands the trusts will be strictly carried out.

work is of a very varied character, embracing the various business affairs of life. We are acting as executors, administrators, trustees, agents, guardians, liquidators, committees of lunatics and their estates, mortgagees for bondholders and so forth and so forth. We have had experience not only in the investment of monies in the various avenues open for that purpose, but have carried on and wound up business affairs of many kinds, such as grocery stores, dry goods stores, hotels, a loan company, a newspaper office, farms, mills, a railway company, a manufactory, etc., etc.

As to the volume and character of the work, our report calls your attention to a few figures which will demonstrate what we have been and are doing, and with what confidence the public are entrusting to us the management of their affairs.

The Hon. S. C. Wood, Vice-President, in seconding the report, said:—
 After the voluminous statements read by the Managing Director and the very lengthy report presented by the President, I need not occupy at any great length your time in seconding its adoption. The pleasure of seconding the adoption is much enhanced from the fact of my personal acquaintance for a great many years with the Managing Director, who has so largely the management of the affairs of this corporation under his control. Whatever credit may be due for the excellent position of the public institutions in this Province, both as regards their system of keeping their accounts, audits, and the general management, a larger portion than any other should be credited to Mr. Langmuir. His very great success in establishing, directing and supervising and generally carrying on the very many institutions under Government control eminently fitted him for the important and responsible duties of his present position, as results have proved. I had thought when the Trust Company was established that it was necessary for its success that the Hon. Edward Blake should be its President. The Hon. Edward Blake has ceased to hold that position, and I have no hesitation in saying that, with Dr. Hoskin, the vacancy has been filled with great success in every particular. We all know how important it is for us as private individuals, or as members of corporations, to have from time to time, good advice, legal and otherwise. Everybody will admit the President's high standing as a lawyer, but in addition to that his very large dealings with estates and his extensive experience in trusts matters generally qualified him in every way to be perfectly fitted for the position he occupies, and I think that the President's high standing as a lawyer, but in addition to that his very large dealings with estates and his ## GREEN ISLE'S WELCOME TO ITS AGED MONARCH.

Her Majesty Received With Acclaim by Ireland's Ancient Capital City.

SPLENDID WEATHER AND GOOD IRISH HUMOUR.

Received at the Landing by the Duke of Connaught and the Lord Lieutenant—At the Entrance to the City She Received an Address.

Dublin, April 4.—Queen Victoria landed in Ireland this morning for the first time in 33 years. The disembarkation from the royal yacht was accomplished at 11.30. The commander of the forces in Ireland the Duke of Connaught; the Lord Lieutenant, Earl Cadogan; and their staffs, greeted Her Majesty, and the ride from Kingstown to Dublin commenced in splendid weather, and before huge, good-natured crowds.

The Queen's progress from Kingstown to the vice-regal lodge was marked with great enthusiasm. There was no untoward incident. At the entrance to the city she received an address of welcome, and handed the Lord Mayor a reply, in which she said she had come to Ireland for rest and quiet, and that it gave her great gladness to return to the land of so many happy associations, whose soldiers had recently fought so gallantly.

The Queen's Reply.

The following was Her Majesty's reply in full—
"I thank you heartily for the loyal welcome and good wishes which you have tendered me on behalf of yourself and your fellow-citizens on my arrival in the ancient capital of my Irish dominion. I came to this fair country to seek a change and rest, and to revisit scenes which recall to my mind the warm welcome given to both myself and my beloved husband. I am deeply gratified that I have been able at this time to see again the motherland of those brave sons who have recently distinguished themselves in the defence of my Crown and Empire with cheerful valor as conspicuous now as ever in their glorious past. I pray that the Almighty God may ever bless and direct you in the high functions which you exercise for the benefit of your fellow-citizens."

Queen Much Affected.

The Queen appeared to be much affected by the warmth of her welcome. Mr. Burke, a son of the former City sword-bearer, took the place of Mr. Jan. Ryan, the sword-bearer who had refused to officiate. But the Lord Mayor himself handed the sword and keys to Her Majesty, who touched them.

The ceremonies at the city gate were most picturesque. London's Jubilee Lord Mayor, Sir George Paulet Phillips, declared that the reception and ceremonies were the finest he had ever seen, far surpassing those of the great Jubilee.

Reply to Kingstown.

In reply to the address of welcome of the Township Commissioners of Kingstown the Queen handed the following to the chairman—
"I thank you for your loyal and dutiful address and for the warm welcome wherewith you have greeted me. On meeting foot again on Irish soil I receive with great satisfaction your assurance of devotion and affection towards me. I am looking forward with much pleasure to my visit to this part of my dominion, and I pray may God bless Ireland with increasing welfare and prosperity."

As this written reply was handed to the chairman Her Majesty said—"I am very pleased to find myself in Ireland again."

THE DUBLIN DECORATIONS.

The Whole City a Reveal of Color and Light for the Welcome.

Dublin, April 4.—The decorations of the streets are completed, and the various devices for illuminating the hotels, club-houses and public buildings were tested last night. The effects of the color and light are brilliant and are not inferior to those of Jubilee day and night in London. There is a continuous line of bunting from the landing place, Kingstown, to the gates of Phoenix Park. Every house on the road to Dublin makes a brave show of bunting. Stands for spectators have been erected at many points. Pembroke town hall is profusely decorated and Clyde road and other highways are decked with red and green masts and festooned with streamers and rosettes.

RECEPTION AT KINGSTOWN.

Grand Scene in the Harbor—Fleet of Warships Brilliantly Lighted.

Dublin, April 4.—The Queen's reception at Kingstown last night was simple, but stately. The Royal Yacht was preceded by the Trinity, the tender, in the passage from Holyhead, and attended by the warships Galatea and Australia, and outside the Channel fleet lay at anchor, with two flagships and the most powerful battleships in the British navy dressed in rainbow style in honor of the Queen's arrival.

Brilliant lines of variegated color flashed across the murky sky, heavily banked with clouds, and as the Royal yacht approached the narrow entrance of the harbor there were vivid tongues of flame, as one warship after another fired the royal salute—twenty-one guns. Every vessel was dressed and manned as the yacht crept by, and from one deck to another the refrain of the National Anthem was taken up, to the accompaniment of muffled bands.

The Royal yacht anchored for the night in Kingstown harbor, with the fleet in the rear outside brilliantly illuminated with electric lights. The Lord Lieutenant, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and the Countess of Cadogan went on board the yacht soon after the Queen's arrival, and received the greetings of the Princess Christian, Princess Henry of Battenberg and court officials and ladies from Windsor. The piers swarmed with sightseers from Dublin, and the town itself was brilliantly illuminated from the club houses on the edge of the harbor to the Langue of streets about the town hall.

There was a huge bon-fire on Bally Hill, and another one on Dalkey Island, and there were displays of fireworks on Bally Green and many points of vantage along the coast of Blackrock, but the fleet offered incomparably the most brilliant spectacle, with the rigging and the masts of the ships outlined in electric jets, with colored fires artistically blending from deck to deck, and with searchlights turned upon the piers of the gallily decorated town and expectant Dublin, six miles away.

Reply to Kingstown.

THE CHANNEL SMOOTH, THOUGH RAIN MARRED THE ARRIVAL AT KINGSTOWN.

Dublin, April 4.—In spite of the rain that was falling, and the huge puddles of water under foot, the arrival of Queen Victoria in the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, off Kingstown, was the occasion for much enthusiasm, although this did not take an organized form, owing to the fact that Her Majesty came several hours ahead of scheduled time.

The passage of the channel was smooth, and the Queen suffered no discomfort, although she expressed regret that the premature departure from Holyhead, owing to the threatening weather conditions, should cause her Irish subjects disappointment. Thousands had poured into Kingstown, regardless of the pelting rain, which luckily ceased about five o'clock, and they braved the cold winds and mud until midnight. The celebrations were confined to an illumination of the war vessel and to a few fireworks here and there. A shining Shamrock stood out against the blackness of Dublin Bay, and from the Jackies clustered on the decks of the squadron came strains of "God Save the Queen," which were taken up with a will by the patient crowd on shore, and when the water of the spectators off Kingstown pier jostled in with equal fervor.

Although all political conditions are represented in Kingstown, there was no attempt at a counter demonstration. In fact, last evening's fireworks, singing and cheering were not marred by any hostile note.

In Dublin itself, seven miles from Kingstown, the epithet, "Dear, dirty Dublin," was never before presumably better justified than yesterday. Dublin was bed-ridden; its fiery, which rivalled London's Jubilee decorations, drooping and dry from the steady rain which, according to the weather prophets, was to be repeated to-day. However, last evening, when the showers ceased, illuminations such as Ireland has never seen lit up the streets and were viewed by crowds so dense that in several thoroughfares travel was impossible.

The castle was gay with a dinner party, including the leading Irish nobility, and a spirit of good-natured revelry prevailed over every quarter of Ireland's capital.

CRITICS ARE BEMULDERED.

They are Unable to Make Any Guesses as to the War.

London, April 4.—Gen. Colville and Gen. French have given up the movement against the Boers east of Bloemfontein, and have enjoined the main army. It doubtless seemed to Lord Roberts a vain thing to send from ten to twelve thousand of his best troops into the wilderness with a field transport in the direction of a right angle with his chosen line of advance. The Boers have probably moved elsewhere, and if to the southeast General Colville could as easily strike them from Bloemfontein as by following them up across the plains. These inferences still leave the situation bewildering for the time being. The enormously superior British force appear inactive in every part of the war field, waiting probably for the accumulation of material for a swift advance on the Transvaal frontier.

The London military commentators and the public also to some extent, are irritated and confused by the situation. Lord Roberts did not meet his wife at Cape Town. She will proceed to Bloemfontein.

The permanent bridge at the Modder River station has been finished. The first train passed over it Tuesday.

The British garrison at Springfontein was routed with his chosen line of advance. The Boers in force were about to make an attack. But not a burgher appeared.

FORTIFICATIONS OF PRETORIA.

Weaver Davis Says the Town is a Vast Military Storehouse.

New York, April 4.—Interviewed by the Washington correspondent of The Herald, ex-Assistant Secretary Weaver Davis, said, in part, with reference to his visit to Pretoria—"I viewed the defenses of Pretoria, and I consider them impregnable. The line of hills surrounding the town bristles with high power Krupp and Creusot guns. Pretoria lies in a basin surrounded by a ridge of rugged hills, affording most admirable opportunities for defence. While there I learned enough to know that the city is one vast storehouse of food stuffs and ammunition."

THE TUFFS OF LOS ANGELES WAS PLAYING GOLF WITH A FRIEND.

When he drove from the third teeing ground, he slipped, the ball badly and sent it away so one side it stopped in front of a grazing cow, and Tuffs came up just in time to see it disappear into the bovine mouth. When his opponent had made his stroke, Tuffs uttered the cry and, with many scuffling thrashes of his club, drove the ball to the third hole. There he made her discharge the ball and, neatly holing it, announced that he had made the hole in two strokes. His opponent calmly flashed the hole in seven and claimed the hole.

"But I made it in two," protested Tuffs.

"No, you didn't," declared the other. "You made it in 39. You hit that cow 37 times for I counted every stroke," and Tuffs conceded the hole.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Aggravating the Offense.

"You are charged, young man," the magistrate said, not unkindly, "with scaring the complaining witness nearly out of his senses by putting him through your mad talk, and of insubordination. I can make allowance for the absence of spirits among college students, but sometimes this exuberance is carried too far."

"It was this way, your honor," explained the youth who appeared to be the spokesman—"we were out for a little lark, and we caught a Jay."

"The fine will be $5 and costs," said his honor, his face hardening.—Chicago Tribune.

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

Making Them is a Very Dangerous Trade.

—Pretoria that meet the Manufacture of Nitroglycerine.

Nitroglycerin and its peculiarities are little known, even in localities where it is made. People generally give it a wide berth, and even a less number know how it is manufactured. Probably in no place in the United States is there such a great amount of the explosive used as in the Indiana oilfields, says The Philadelphia Press. Indiana has four nitroglycerin factories, and they are seldom visited by curious people.

The explosive is made from a composition of acids and glycerin. It is generally pale yellow in color, and quite colorless when pure. It is odorless, and has a sweet, pungent, aromatic flavor. If touched by one's tongue, or even brought into contact with the skin, it will produce a severe headache. A large tank, called an agitator, in which the fluid is mixed, and the mixture is composed of equal parts of nitric and sulphuric acids. Inside the tank are several paddles, like those of a churn, and it is here that the real danger exists. The paddles are put in operation and a steady stream of sweet glycerin is turned into a vat until 250 pounds are thoroughly mixed with the 1,500 pounds of acid. The chemicals coming in contact produce an intense heat, and in order to obviate the danger cold water is run through pipes encircling and running through the vat. At 85 degrees F. a red vapor, almost like fire, arises. If cutting off the supply of glycerin in the agitator does not lower the temperature, it is time to say farewell. Before 90 degrees are reached nothing but atoms of the structure and its contents are left.

Colonel William A. Meyers, of Bolivar, N.Y., was the man who made and exploded the first round of nitroglycerin in an oil well. He built the first factory in the United States, near Titusville, Pa., in 1868. Up to that time powder had been used to torpedo oil wells. It was then that an explosive that could be discharged under water was found in nitroglycerin. Colonel Meyers' father was a Philadelphia chemist and taught him how to make it.

The first well torpedoed was on Colonel Mills' lease, near Titusville, and the charge consisted of only two pounds. Oil was worth $3 a barrel then, and a torpedo that would double the production of a well was worth almost what the maker does to ask for it. Colonel Meyers built 12 different factories in different parts of the oil regions from 1868 to 1885, when he retired from the business. Only one of the original factories stands intact to-day. Meyers made several fortunes and spent his money like a prince, but, fortunately for him, he still has a megaton laid by.

India Rubber Industry.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the restless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important source of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and new active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

THOSE BOER LADIES.

By Middle Life They Are Almost Too Fat to Walk.

The Boer woman is very little like the trim, handsome Dutchwoman of her ancestral Holland. She is seldom pretty. Her complexion is her principal charm, and she guards this carefully whenever she goes out. She is never seen outdoors without a great peaked bonnet on her head, her visits to church being made behind an almost oriental seclusion of veils. This is necessary to preserve the pink and white of her skin, for the climate would otherwise soon tan it to the color of sole leather. Her eyes are small and set close together, and her features are irregular. Her cheeks are broad and flat, and her hair is naturally light in color, although time and weather soon bleach it from its early straw color. At a very early age she loses all her teeth, for she is constantly chewing sweet cakes and confectionery.

A European woman would replace the molar that nature has deprived her of with well mounted works of art, but the Boer woman does not do this. She thinks it would be impious thus to try to duplicate the work of the Creator. Her figure is thick and almost waistless. While still a young woman she begins to grow fat, and by the time middle life is reached she is often so unwieldy that the only exercise she is able to take is to waddle clumsily from one armchair to another. She is clad in a loose, scantily made gown, devoid of trimming and apparently waistless. The day garments of the Boers are also their night clothes, so the gown is generally wrinkled.

A PROSPEROUS INSTITUTION.

The Annual Report of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation.

Many persons throughout Eastern Ontario have watched, with considerable interest, the progress of the Toronto General Trusts Corporation, of Ontario. It is an institution that is the outcome of modern ideas. The advantage of leaving estates in charge of a Company such as this one, has come to be quickly recognized the world over. Individual executors are liable to die, to become ill, remove to distant parts of the world, or lose their worldly goods. But such an organization as the Toronto General Trusts Corporation is not liable to such disturbances. The Company is one of the most wealthy of its kind in existence, and estates left in its charge are administered with the greatest economy consistent with absolute security. The modern idea of having such companies organized and found favor because of the insecurity of property left in the hands of individual trustees.

The amount of business that is being transacted by the Company is simply marvellous. The report, which we publish elsewhere, shows that the amount of business now under the care of the Corporation, after deducting all distributions to date, aggregates over $10,000,000. With such vast interests under its care a company requires to be so strong that it will merit as much confidence as might be reposed in the Bank of England itself, and the complete security is found in the fact that the company has a paid-up capital of $500,000, which by March, 1901, will be increased to $1,000,000, thus making this one of the strongest organizations of its kind in the world. In addition to this, the officers and directors of the Trusts Corporation comprise a list of names that reads like a roll call of the men soundest in finance and foremost in business in Toronto and other parts of the province.

We congratulate Mr. J. W. Langmuir, the efficient Managing Director, on the happy result of the year's operations.

In the Wrong Wagon.

It was in the back parlour of the Snowden House, as usual. The boys were all sitting round taking about the granolithic pavements and other things, when the genial proprietor appeared with a stranger, whom he introduced to those around as his uncle, who had just returned from the war. The stranger took a seat, and proceeded to fill his pipe. When it was known that he had been in some of the early battles of the war in South Africa, those present at once became interested. 'Yes, gentleman, as you see, I am quite lame, having been wounded in the battle of Elanagatze,' continued the veteran. 'I will never forget that fight. I was hit many times, and as I was being carried away in the ammunition wagon I—"Don't you mean the ambulance wagon, uncle?" remarked Mr. Snowden with feeling. "No, William, I mean the ammunition wagon," replied the veteran with some heat, as he lit his pipe. "I mean exactly what I said. You see, I was so full of bullets they put me in the ammunition wagon, instead of the ambulance," he explained. "It was dreadful to see the amount of lead they took out of me. I was at once sent to Capetown, and as soon as I had sufficiently recovered I sailed for Canada, intending to spend a few days with my nephew and I returned to my regiment." And they boys all took buttermilk at the expense of the old veteran.

Looking Over the Ground.

Mr. A. P. Scott, ex-champion golf player of Ontario, is spending a few days in town. Yesterday he drove out to the links, in company with Mr. McHarris, and gave some valuable pointers in regard to arranging the ground for the coming season. It is assured that golf will have a boom this year and will popularize it with many that have heretofore took little interest in the game. It is said that Mr. Sam Ray is already practising some difficult shots in his back yard, while Mr. J. H. Burnham is taking some long shots for the member for West Peterborough in the Legislature.

The Canadian Horticulturist.

The best work in fruit and flower growing published in Canada is the Canadian Horticulturist, a well illustrated monthly magazine which is every year growing in size and value. A very valuable series of articles on Fruit Culture by a fruit expert, and another series of articles on Floriculture by an expert gardener are appearing monthly by month. These are beautifully illustrated with original photographs and drawings. The subscription is only $1.00 per annum. A sample copy sent free on application to Linus Woolverton, M.A., Grimby, Ont.

History of the Case for which the Award has just been given.

For the benefit of those of our readers who do not know what the Delagoa railway claims are we give a short sketch of the thing.

In 1883 Col. McMurdo, a citizen of the United States, obtained a concession from the Portuguese Government to build a railway from Delagoa Bay to the frontier of the Transvaal, connecting there with a railway to Pretoria.

In March, 1887, he started work to build the road, 52 miles. It was finished in eighteen months with the help of a company formed in London, England.

Through jealousy of the English the Transvaal government sought to wreck the company, and on the pretext that the line had not been completed to the terminus mentioned in the concession, in a stated time, Portugal, acting in sympathy with the Transvaal, threatened to confiscate the road and all the property of the company.

Colonel McMurdo died in London in May, 1889, and in the confusion caused by his death, the Portuguese government one month afterward carried out its threat in an arbitrary manner.

Thereupon Mrs. McMurdo appealed to Mr. Blaine, then Secretary of State, and he informed Portugal that the United States would not tolerate the confiscation. In behalf of the other shareholders of the company Lord Salisbury took the same ground.

Portugal consented to submit the case to arbitration, and it was agreed that three Swiss judges should settle the amount of the indemnity to be paid. It was shown that a German syndicate had offered Colonel McMurdo $3,500,000 for the company's property and concession. Engineers, however, reported the concession to be worth at least $15,000,000 and some experts placed the value as high as $50,000,000.

A technical commission sent out to South Africa made a special report in 1890(1) that the value of the road at the time of its seizure was $1,275,000; (2) that the value of the concession at the same time was $5,500,000, and (3) that on December 31, 1890, the concession was worth $9,000,000.

The main contentment put forward in behalf of Portugal was that the repayment of the sums expended in building the railway ought to be satisfactory.

The arbitration proceedings have thus lasted nearly ten years. During the last of these years have been strong rumors that political considerations would further complicate matters. It was believed there was a secret understanding between Germany, Great Britain and Portugal, under which Great Britain would become responsible for the liabilities which Portugal had incurred, and receive Delagoa Bay in return. In the House of Commons, however, Mr. Balfour denied that such a treaty existed, and the Portuguese authorities repudiated the idea altogether, asserting that their country could in any case find the money to meet any charges under an adverse award.

The award is $3,202,800 and interest, but one half the cost of arbitration has to come out of that. The fact that the arbitrators received $25,000 a year each, in all probability accounts for the length of time they consumed in coming to an agreement.

BOERS ARE TRYING TO REDEEM THEIR BOASTS

The Federals Apparently Making an Attempt to Retake Bloemfontein as Promised.

THE CENSOR WILL ALLOW NO NEWS TO PASS.

No Details Forthcoming Regarding the Disaster at Reddersburg—A Boer Shot a British Officer After Displaying White Flag, and is Himself Shot.

Bloemfontein, April 5. The First Cavalry Brigade under Col. Porter reconnoitered eastward to-day behind Louv Kop. They found 150 Boers, and fired upon them with shells. The Boers dispersed immediately.

London, April 7. 4.30 a.m. Not a word regarding the affair at Reddersburg is allowed to come through except the despatch of Lord Roberts. It is therefore impossible to form any idea as to what has happened. Meanwhile the British public is beginning to realize the immense difficulties to be overcome even before Pretoria is reached, and is reviving premature ideas with respect to the time when the war will be over. No one now believes that it will have ended by the beginning of June. This later event more particularly illustrates the heavy task involved in holding the railway. This body of some 500 British soldiers without guns, which disappeared completely within 35 miles of the great British army, had for its business to guard a section of nearly ninety miles of railway between Bloemfontein and Springfontein.

London, April 6. The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Morning Post telegraphing Thursday says: "The Boers are apparently making an attempt to redeem their promise to retake Bloemfontein. A considerable force has moved south through Thaba-Nchu. Gen. Tucker's success at Kamee is now more apparent than real, since the open ground north of Bloemfontein offers small opportunities for Boer tactics. They may possibly engage him to distract attention from operations elsewhere. Remounts are anxiously waited."

London, April 7. It is now said that the Boers who captured the British at Reddersburg belong to Oliver's commando. If so he has not retired north, and hopes are expressed that they may still be about off. It is asserted that 4,000 rebels surrendered during Gen. Clements' march northward. The Boers will do their utmost to hold Ladybrand and Thaba Nchu, both being rich grain producing districts. A correspondent of the Morning Post at Springfontein, telegraphing Thursday says he is glad to be able to report that increased precautions are being taken in patrolling the railway. It is said that most of the prisoners captured at Boshoff are foreigners. The report that Mr. Steyn has been appointed to the command of the Free States, and the further report that the Free State has arranged a loan from the Transvaal for war purposes are both confirmed. Ten thousand remounts from South America are due to arrive during the coming week at the Port of Natal and Cape Colony.

Another Boer version of the fight with Col. Plummer's force says that four officers and thirty men were taken prisoners at Mamathlabana. It appears that the names Cecil and Granville which were originally supposed to indicate officers captured at that time should have been read together as the name of one officer. As numerous prisoners are now held on both sides and the numbers are about equal, the question of exchange was moved in the House of Commons last evening. This forced a reply that the Government had no intention of proposing an exchange.

London, April 7. The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Daily Telegraph telegraphing Thursday, says: "A sedition meeting was summoned by Transvaal emissaries for to-day at Louwburg, but nobody attended." Boer parties from Brandfort have cut the telegraph wires between here and Boshoff. The British scouts reported yesterday that a force of from 150 to 160 Boers had been seen beyond Boshoff's Kop, moving from Thaba Nchu to the south. The enemy by appeals and menaces combined are vainly trying to induce the burghers to leave the field again.

LATE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S NEW "SIT."

Col. Hutton to Command a Brigade of Mounted Colonials for Advance Guard and Scouting Work.

Bloemfontein, April 4.—There has been a reorganization of the Mounted Infantry Corps of the army under Lord Roberts at this point, the new division as thus constituted being placed under the command of General Hamilton. The division is composed of two brigades, one being formed of the Canadians, Australians, New Zealanders and the other colonial units here. This brigade has been placed under the command of Lieut.-Col. Hutton, the late commanding general of the militia forces in Canada, who has just arrived at the front.

The second brigade which is made of regular and volunteer Imperial troops, will be under the command of Major Ridgely. This organization of the mounted infantry corps of Lord Roberts' army probably indicates an early advance movement of the entire British army northward, in which movement the Canadians and other mounted infantry divisions will act as the advance guard of scouts, pat-closer, the Boer men crept over the earthworks, and while the women began shooting, tried with the butte of their rifles to hammer back the British soldiers. Before their wives' eyes everyone of the fourteen Boers were killed, bayoneted or shot.

"The fourteen women, so quickly widowed, never thought of surrender, but fought most valiantly and coolly for half an hour, until the British surrounded them."

"Scores of women have been in every commando's laager I have visited, but only one has been without her rifle and bandoliers. Mrs. Joubert, wife of the late Commandant-General of the Transvaal forces.

"Try to imagine a bride and groom going to war on their honeymoon. When I left Pretoria for the front a friend introduced me to a young Boer couple who were going on the same train and who had been married but a week. I thought my friend was joking when he said they were going to fight the British, although both Boer man and wife had Mauser rifles, and each wore three bandoliers, two over the shoulder, one around the

THE SITUATION AT BLOEMFONTEIN.

The Various Theories as to the Reasons for Lord Roberts' Continued Delay.

London, April 6.—The British War Office this morning discloses nothing and the correspondents at Lord Roberts' headquarters have not been heard from for two days or more. The lapse of time has not rendered the military situation in the Orange Free State obscure. This is the twenty-fourth day since Lord Roberts arrived at Bloemfontein and the absence of news is beginning to make the British public rather fretful.

Two conjectures are favorites. One is that the silence covers an important British attack, the presumption being that Lord Roberts is already in the field. The other is that the enforced inactivity is on account of the lack of draught and mule animals and must continue for some days, and that therefore nothing is happening.

The situation, so far as London knowledge goes, is as it was two days ago. Boers in unknown numbers are hovering around Bloemfontein out of range of the British guns.

When the train reached the end of the line, a short distance north of Ladysmith, Mrs. Boer alighted with her husband, assisted in taking two horses from the last car on the train, and rode away toward one of the laagers in the distance.

The presence of the women puts spirit into the men and keeps them from becoming homesick or despondent. These warrior women were the first to insist that the Transvaal should resist England; now they are sharing the burden."

RAILWAY HAS BEEN RESTORED.

Trestle Bridge Over the Sunday River is Completed.

London, April 6.—The Times has the following from Ladysmith, dated April 4: The railway is now repaired as far as Sunday River, the trestle bridge over which has been completed. The

if it cost half their force.

"With these words ringing in their ears, they started on the most exciting ride of the war. It was a race for the drift on the Riet, which General French secured by a clever feint and by hard galloping. He won by only five minutes."

"The last day's work before Kimberley was relieved also put them to a severe test. Soon after starting, they found that the positions on their front, left front, and left rear were held by an unknown force of the enemy, and that they were almost surrounded; but Gen. French's quick eye discovered a gap on the left, about a mile and a half away. Through this gap he launched two Lancashire regiments, who were received with a heavy fire; and before the dust had cleared, he let everything go in after them. It was a piece of splendid daring which might have failed; but it succeeded completely, and by its success raised the siege."

HELD OUT AGAINST FEARFUL ODDS.

Party of Kitchener's Horse Resist Boers For Four Days Before Surrendering.

London, April 6.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Standard, telegraphing Tuesday, gives details of a squadron of Kitchener's Horse on February 15.

"It was the day of the relief of Kimberley. The squadron had been left to guard a farm on the Riet river, while Gen. French advanced to the beleaguered town. The object of leaving them on the river was to hold a wall, pending the arrival of another column. The latter, however, never came, and the troops found themselves besieged for four days by a body of 400 Boers. There were but 10 men, and they placed loop-holes in the walls of the farm house, and made a desperate stand for three days."

ANOTHER DISASTER TO BRITISH NEAR BETHANY

Five Hundred British Troops Are Surrounded and Captured by a Large Force of Boers.

ASSISTANCE ARRIVED TOO LATE TO SAVE THEM.

Brigadier Brabant in Danger of Being Cut Off at Wepener—He Was Ordered to Surrender by the Boers But Made no Reply to Their Demands.

London, April 5.—Lord Roberts reports that five companies of British troops have been captured by the Boers near Bethany.

The following is the text of Lord Roberts' despatch to the War Office announcing the capture of five companies of his troops—

"Bloemfontein, Thursday, April 5.—Another unfortunate occurrence has occurred resulting, I fear, in the capture of a party of infantry consisting of three companies of the Royal Irish Fusiliers and two companies of the Ninth Regiment of Mounted Infantry, near Reddersburg, a little eastward of Bethany railway station, within a few miles of this place. They were surrounded by a strong force of the enemy with four or five guns. The detachment held out from before noon on April 3 until 9 a. m. April 4, and then apparently surrendered for it is reported that the firing ceased at that time."

"Immediately after I heard the news, during the afternoon of April 4 I ordered Gatacre to proceed from Springfontein, his present headquarters, to Reddersburg, with all possible speed, and I despatched the Cameron Highlanders thence to Bethany. He arrived at Reddersburg at 10.30 yesterday morning without opposition, but could get no news of the missing detachment. There can be no doubt the whole party has been made prisoners."

Bethany is 30 miles southwest of Bloemfontein, about ten miles from the line of railway from Cape Town to Bloemfontein, the line over which Lord Roberts receives his supplies. The capture of the five British companies is serious, not so much from the loss of the men as that it shows the activity and boldness of the Boers, who have not, it seems, all left the Orange River country, and who are evidently making desperate efforts to cut the railway. That they could get so close to the line and in such force as to surround and make prisoners several hundred of the British, indicates the arduous task Gen. Gatacre has in keeping the railway intact.

BRABANT ASKED TO SURRENDER

But the Colonial Brigadier Made No Reply to the Boers.

London, April 6.—The Times has a despatch from Wepener, which says: "Boer sniping at British patrols continues. During the day one casualty in General Brabant's division is reported. The following message was received from a party of Boers. 'Am here with several thousand burghers, and in the cause of humanity and to show a dreadful sacrifice of life as occurred in the last battle. I demand your immediate surrender. (Signed) Banks, General.' The party were sent back with the answer, 'No reply.' Boers report that small parties of Boers are surrendering. Our force is in some trouble to any body of the enemy likely to attack us. Five Boer commandos have been captured."

BURGHERS ARE DEPRESSED.

False Story of Steyn in Order to Revive Their Spirits.

London, April 6.—The Times says—The enemy's account of the fighting at Kamee show how acutely Steyn and his friends feel that the Boers have been depressed by recent events. The victory, they say, was one by the Free States, who fought without shelter. It is absurd to describe in that fashion a success which was altogether due to the fact that our men were surprised in a donga, but the pride with which it is stated is exceedingly eloquent. The victors, we are informed, captured all our secret papers, including plans for the invasion of both republics, dating back to 1897. It is not easy to surmise how secret papers came to be in such a place. Lord Roberts could hardly have sent them with his cavalry to Thaba Nchu for safe custody. However, if the assertion comes from any of the Free States that we cherished a wicked design against the freedom of their country three years ago it will doubtless have served a purpose. Another capture, we learn, was effected, which may be useful for political ends. The Boers got hold of the lists of the burghers who had taken oaths under the proclamation. That is much to be regretted, and it is possible that it may be true.

THEIR PETTY TYRANNY.

Exercised Towards Englishmen in the Free State.

Lorenzo Marques, April 6.—Rev. Mr. Widdowson, a Wesleyan minister from Harrismith, which place he left on March 29th, authoritatively denies the report that three Englishmen, Maclean, Roberts and Glover were shot for refusing to go with a commando, and that Dr. Wilson was maltreated. When he left all in Harrismith were well treated and at liberty.

He says that a great deal of petty tyranny is exercised towards Englishmen in the Free State, but so far as he knows there have been no cases of actual violence against civilian prisoners. The race-course, he says, is supplied with food of sufficient quantity, but of scandalous quality.

A sister of the Wesleyan minister at Frankfort was expelled from the Free State for expressing satisfaction, in a private letter, at British victories. British burghers in the Free State are being imprisoned on account of their refusal to take up arms for the Boers."

FRENCH ADVICE TO BOERS.

Inject Their Cause Into U. S. Elections to Keep up Interest.

Paris, April 6.—The Figaro says it is not believed that a remonstrance will be addressed to Portugal by several chancelleries on account of the opening of the Beira route to British troops. The Figaro says no one intended to demand an explanation from Portugal or to retaliate in any way. All the Boers run to now is to associate their cause with the presidential election in the United States and continue the war until autumn, otherwise interest in the Boers taken by the world will be merely platonic.

IRISH FOOT GUARDS.

Regiment Will be Formed to Commemorate the Queen's Visit.

London, April 6.—The army orders to-day contain the following: "The Queen having deemed it advisable to commemorate the bravery shown by the Irish regiments in the recent operations in South Africa, has been graciously pleased to command that an Irish regiment of foot guards be formed under the designation of Irish Guards."

CANADIANS GET THEIR TENTS.

Up to the Present They Have Been Camping in the Open.

Bloemfontein, April 5.—The Royal Canadian Mounted Police returned to-day, with the rest of the brigade (General Smith-Dorrien's). They went as far as Bushman's Kop, about nineteen miles distant, where they camped on Sunday. Four companies, who have been doing escort duty to Watervale, Drift, retired yesterday to Springfontein, some eight miles out. To-day they returned to the old camp. The tents arrived to-day from Belmont. They are a great boon, as the men have been sleeping in the open. Mr. Forrest, of the Quebec Company, died of enteric fever on Sunday last.

ON A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Emily Man Captured in Manitoba Charged With a Serious Offense.

An Emily man named Fred Lowe, who recently deserted a young woman on the day appointed for their marriage, has been arrested at Morden, Manitoba, through the instrumentality of Chief Bell, of Lindsay, who has displayed considerable cleverness in his management of the case. The charge is laid under the Chariton Act. Chief Bell or one of the Victoria county constables will leave for Morden in a couple of days to bring Lowe back for trial. The particulars of Lowe's skipping on the eve of his marriage has already appeared in the Times.

Death of Mr. Wallen.

The army friends of Mr. Joseph Wallen, so well known as one of Peterborough's oldest residents, will be sad to hear of his death, which occurred Friday morning at 11 o'clock, at his late residence at Lakeside, in the 79th year of his age. The funeral will take place on Monday at two o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery.

Knight of Macdonald.

A hive of the Lady Macdonald was instituted on Wednesday evening by Deputy Sheriff B. Baughmann. After the installation an L.O.M. drill was given. The hive will hold its regular reviews on second Wednesdays of each month. We prophesy a large hive as an auxiliary to Peterborough tent. With the leadership in the hands of Mrs. R. P. McGregor, as Lady Commander, Mrs. Dr. Yolland, Past Commander, and Mrs. Robert Laing, as Record Keeper, the hive will rapidly increase in membership and usefulness.

Death of Mr. H. Hefferman.

On Thursday afternoon another old and respected citizen passed away in the person of Mr. Michael Hefferman who was 98 years of age. He came to Peterborough many years ago. He was twice married and leaves a widow and grown up family. He was a familiar figure, especially to the worshippers at St. Peter's, where for many years he "pumped" the organ. The funeral will take place from the family residence, 374 Charlotte-st., this morning at nine o'clock, to St. Peter's cathedral and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

A QUEER EXPLOSION.

HOW A MOUNTAIN LOCOMOTIVE CAME TO AN UNTIMELY END.

There was neither fire in her furnace nor water in her boiler, and yet she managed to blow up in the most approved style.

Mr. Henry Alquist, a prominent railroad man, relates the story of a curious wreck, the facts in which he will vouch for.

"It is such a remarkable thing," said Mr. Alquist to a reporter, "that I fear many will be inclined to brand it as 'pipe.' I have been railroaded now for over 30 years, and never in all my varied experience have I seen such a unique and complete wreck as the one I speak of—that of engine 1,129 of the Rio Grande Western. Railroad men will tell you that locomotives seldom explode nowadays, but 1,129 did and in a very peculiar way.

"At the time this wreck occurred I was holding down the job of train dispatcher at Soldier Summit, Utah, and a tough old job it was. Never been there, I suppose? Well, Soldier Summit is a station on the top of one of the Wasatch divides, a bleak and lonely place, where the Rio Grande Western has a roundhouse and coal chute located. At the summit are long snowbanks covering the tracks. These sheds protect the line from the winter. And it is only due to this method that a train ever gets over the mountain.

"On both sides of the mountain the line winds down in a succession of winding curves to lessen the grade. Running off from the railway are switches, which, diverging from the grade, run up into the hills and gradually come to a dead level. These switchbacks, as they are called, are so constructed that they can be thrown from any point on the grade. And if a train breaks in two while ascending the steep grade the runaway cars can be switched on to one of these spurs, where the breakaway finally stops after it has run up the spur as far as the momentum attained in its descent will take it.

"All heavy trains have an extra locomotive before the grade is tackled. These are called helper engines and are kept in roundhouses at each side of the mountain with steam up.

"One night I got word from Clear Creek, a town in the western valley, that the 9:20 freight would be 30 minutes late on account of having to pull out a crippled engine, 1,129. She had burned out her fuel and had to be hauled to Grand Junction for repairs.

"That night about 10 o'clock, after I had passed down the Salt Lake express, I heard the freight coughing up the long grade from Clear Creek. There was a snowstorm raging, and the wind howled around the station like the mischief. When the engine 9:20 pulled into the shelter of the big snowbanks on the wind swept summit, the first thing I asked was, 'Where's the dead engine?'

"Behind the doghouse' shouted the 'ten.' But as I held my lamp above my head I failed to see it. I was just about to call his attention to it when, during a lull in the storm, we plainly heard the familiar rattle of the rails as the runaway engine flew at lightning speed down the mountain. No. 1,129 had broken loose and was tearing down the grade to destruction.

"I jumped and pulled the lever which opened the spur switches. This I knew would prevent a smashup, as the engine would run up on the switchback and come to a stop. But I was too late. Almost at the same instant I threw the lever a terrific explosion was heard from far down the mountain. The runaway had exploded."

"I thought you said a moment ago, Mr. Alquist," interrupted the reporter, "that the locomotive was a 'dead one' if she had no fire under her boiler. How could she explode?"

"That was the only thing I couldn't understand myself," the railroad man replied. "I could easily see how the dead engine could break loose on that grade, and I could understand not hearing its descent during such a howling blizzard, but the explosion scared me. The only theory which in any way solved the mystery was that the old boiler was blown up by compressed air.

"You see, when the engine broke loose from the freight and started down the mountain the pistons in the cylinders began to act as air compressors. During the rough trip up her throttle probably jarred open, and as the speed increased with every revolution of her drivers her boiler soon filled with compressed air. It was not long before those flying pistons had worked up a pressure of nearly 500 pounds to the square inch, which came in faster than it could escape by the safety valve, and before the old machine reached Clear Creek her boiler let go."

Wanted to See the President.

The Washington Star says that a big, gawky country lad went to the White House the other day just as the president had gone out for a morning stroll.

"I want to see the president," he announced to the first man he met.

"Well, there goes the president now," said the man addressed, pointing to the president's retreating form.

"Dern my time!" the young man ejaculated. "He walks just like any other man," and the fellow struck out so that he could get close enough to see the president well.

Warwick castle is held by many to be the most beautiful seat in England. The large baronial hall is a magnificent room. It is decorated with the most perfect specimens of armor, furnished in a luxurious manner, and spaces of flowing and huge pines abound on every side.

SOME QUEER DREAMS.

VISIONS THAT RESULTED IN THE CAPTURE OF CRIMINALS.

Marvelous Manifestations That Resulted in the Ingenuity of Man to Explain and Which Prove Anew That Truth is Stranger Than Fiction.

A very remarkable instance of the tracing of a criminal by means of a dream occurred in St. Louis. A woman named Mary Thornton was detained in custody for a month, charged with the murder of her husband. A week or so after her arrest she requested to see one of the prison officials and told him she had dreamed that an individual named George Ray had murdered her spouse, giving the official at the same time full details of the tragedy as witnessed in her vision. The man Ray was not suspected at the time, but the prison authorities were so much impressed by the woman's obvious earnestness that a search was at once made for him.

After some delay he was traced and charged with the crime, the details of the same as seen in the dream being rehearsed to him. Overcome with astonishment he then and there confessed that he had committed the crime. Curiously enough, the woman had only met the murderer once and believed him to be on the very best of terms with her husband.

Almost as remarkable was the case of a woman named Drew, who dreamed one night that her husband, a retired sailor, had been murdered by a peddler at a Gravesend tavern, where the said husband was in the habit of putting up when visiting the town in question. The first news that awaited her on rising in the morning was that her spouse had been assassinated at the very tavern she had seen in her extraordinary vision, whereupon she burst into hysterical tears and cried out that her dream had come true.

She calmed down somewhat after a few hours and then handed the police officials an exact description of the peddler of the vision, giving a minute account of his dress, which included a blue coat of a very peculiar pattern. Marvelous as the fact may appear, a man wearing such a coat and following the occupation of a peddler was discovered two days later at an inn some six miles from Gravesend, and, on being taxed with the crime, he at once admitted that he was guilty and that robbery had been the motive of the outrage. He was hanged soon afterward, his doom having been brought about by the flimsy evidence of a woman's dream.

Women as dreamers seem more successful than men, but a rather peculiar instance of a crime being traced by a vision and in which the dreamer was a member of the male sex comes from Rennes, in France. A worthy merchant, having quitted his office one Saturday evening, proceeded home to dinner and after enjoying a substantial meal lay down on the couch and fell into a light dose. A very vivid dream then came to him wherein he saw two men of the burglar type engaged in rifling the safe in his office, and so much impressed was he by the vision that he resolved, upon awakening, to at once go to the office and see that everything was under lock and key.

His amusements may be imagined when, on arriving there, he discovered the door forced and a burglary in progress. To summon a couple of gardames was the work of an instant, and five minutes later the thieves, who proved to be notorious housebreakers, were on their way to the police depot, where the prosecutor told his extraordinary story. In view of the fact that the safe contained valuables to the extent of some thousands of pounds, the dream in question proved a very fortunate one for the dreamer.

How to explain these marvelous manifestations, which prove once more that truth is stranger than fiction, is a task beyond the ingenuity of man to comprehend. Perchance the theory of telepathy may have something to do with the mysterious business, but even that theory would appear rather inadequate in such cases as the aforementioned.

A skillful forger who moved in the highest circles of society was once detected by the agency of a dream. The affair occurred in Boston and caused the greatest excitement of the time.

The forger, a young man of eight or nine and twenty, had become acquainted with a rich publisher, at whose house he became a constant guest. One day the publisher's bankers discovered that some one was forging their client's signature to various large checks, and two detectives were at once instructed to look out for the culprit.

Their efforts proved useless, but one evening the publisher's youngest daughter, a little girl of 11, dreamed that she saw a man whom she described as "like Mr. Blank," the visitor to whom reference has been made, sitting in a room in Maine street copying her father's signature. The child's dream was communicated to the police, who, though inclined to ridicule the same at the outset, eventually promised to have the gentlemen in question watched, with the result that his lodgings were raided and a complete plant for the making of bank notes found there. It then transpired that he was a man who was wanted for manifold forgeries throughout the Union, and he was sent to prison for a very long term.

ONE GRAND DISPLAY OF ENTHUSIASTIC LOYALTY.

Seven Miles of Cheering Humanity Greet Her Majesty on the Road to Dublin.

THE ROYAL PARTY FOLLOW QUANT PRECEDENTS.

A Band Played "God Save the Queen" and the Spectators With One Accord Sang the Anthem as the Procession Moved on, the Royal Standards Flying.

Dublin, April 5.—Queen Victoria went out for a drive in Phoenix Park during the afternoon as quietly as she would have done in London. She bowed in return to the frequent salutations. Her Majesty did not enter the city streets and returned to the Vice-Regal Lodge for dinner.

Brussels, April 5.—The police have made a thorough search of Sipido's home, but nothing new was discovered. Thus far they have failed to associate him with any particular anarchist association. They believe he had an accomplice of his own age with whom he discussed the details of the contemplated crime.

Brussels, April 5.—One of Sipido's accomplices has been arrested by the commissioner of police. Sipido seems inclined to make a confession and judging from his latest statement the outrage was the outcome of a plot. The names of three of his associates are now known to the police.

Dublin, April 5.—The Queen's progress through the city yesterday was one grand display of enthusiastic loyalty. The seven miles' drive from Kingstown to the city limits was lined with cheering, delighted humanity, and the lengthy route was ablaze with flags and streamers.

The first halt was at Upper Leeson street, where a quiet and beautiful ceremony was conducted. This was the opening of the gates of the Irish castle which had been constructed across the roadway, with a massive arch and picturesque turrets. It was a stately scene, rich in color and in reminiscences of old-time traditions.

The Lord Mayor and aldermen were behind the gateway, standing on a crimson carpet and arrayed in scarlet robes, trimmed with fur. The mace-bearer was well in front with his mace, and the sword-bearer was beside the Lord Mayor, with a ponderous blade in a jeweled scabbard. Behind them were the Lord Mayor's footmen in blue velvet livery, with red trunks and blue stockings. Farther back was a scarlet line of Immaculate Fusiliers, with their band, and at the street crossings above and below were guards of well mounted Lancers, with their brilliant uniforms. Precedents from Oliver Cromwell's time were followed, and permission for the royal entry was asked and granted with stately grace. The Athlete Pursuivant of Arms, in a crimson costume heavily embellished in gold, demanded the opening of the gates in the Queen's name.

The Ulster King of Arms, in similar gorgeous array, assisted in the mock negotiations. The Lord Mayor assented with gracious courtesy, and the gates were opened by half a dozen fantastically dressed servants, emerging from the recesses. The castle gates were again closed until a second trumpet call announced the coming of the Queen, when they were reopened, while the multitude of Spectators Cheered Wildly.

This ceremony was followed by another equally in accord with traditions. The royal carriage drew up in front of the Lord Mayor, who presented the keys of Dublin and the sword of office, kneeling as he held the hilt, toward the Queen, and the point toward himself. The Queen touched the keys and sword in token that he was to retain possession of them and listened to the address of welcome, which was presented in a magnificent Celtic cadence. Then followed a most grand

Before landing, the Queen, who looked remarkably well, asked for a bunch of shamrocks. These were secured and throughout the day she wore them pinned upon her breast.

The Duke of Abercorn, Premier Peer of Ireland, who, with the rest of the Castle party, went to the Vice-Regal Lodge after the royal party arrived and wrote his name in the visiting book, said to the correspondent of the Associated Press:

"It is the most wonderful, chivalrous and spontaneous exhibition I have ever seen, and I am immensely proud of being an Irishman. Neither the weather nor the crowds have been more propitious. The demonstrations show that, despite all political differences, Ireland is a loyal portion of the Empire."

Notes of the Day.

Her Majesty was clad in the usual black, the only relief being white and silver ornaments on her bonnet.

Thanks to the sunshine, the forests of bunting had regained their freshness after yesterday's soaking, and then one could realize that the host of the Dublin people that their decorations surpassed those of the Jubilee in London was not without foundation.

During the five minutes when the Queen was receiving and answering the address of welcome, there was scarcely a lull in the frantic cheering of the crowds. Frequently Her Majesty nodded; in fact she scarcely ceased nodding during the entire nine mile drive.

Compared with the Queen's recent visit to London, when she was practically unattended, the scene offered a vivid contrast. Defending and continuous cheers marked every stage of the route, especially at the historic Trinity College grounds, where the crowds were thicker than at any other point. The ancient pile was almost hidden by stands, which were black with people and flaming with flags and festoons.

The Queen herself was visibly astonished by this extraordinary ovation, and although she must have been well-nigh exhausted by her constant acknowledgment of the greetings of the welcoming hosts, she repeatedly responded to the students' wild acclaim.

Messages From the Queen.

During the evening the Queen, through Sir Arthur Begg, her private secretary, sent the Lord Mayor a message, saying that she was not over-fatigued by the morning's drive, and had been deeply touched and gratified by the welcome she had received. The message concluded as follows:

"Her Majesty looks forward with much pleasure to her stay in Ireland." Later, through Sir Matthew White Ridley and Earl Cadogan, the Queen officially conveyed to the Lord Mayor the following:

"Convey to the Lord Mayor and citizens of Dublin and sincere thanks of the Queen for the loyalty and enthusiasm of the greeting which Her Majesty received during the procession through the beautifully decorated route." "The Queen is happy to be once more among her Irish people, from whom she has gained and received so warm a welcome."

LOVE ON THE FARM.

A potato went on a mash
And sought an onion bed,
"That's pie for me," observed the squash,
And all the best turned red.
"No, my dear," the onion, weeping, cried;
"Your love I cannot be;
The pumpkin be your lawful bride,
You catnap with me."

But onward still the tuber came
And laid down at her feet;
"You catnap with any name,
And it will smell as sweet;
And I, too, am an early one,
And you I've come to see,
So don't turn up your lovely nose,
But sympathize with me!"

"I do not care at all to wed,
So go, sir, if you please,"
The modest onion meekly said,
"And let me, pray, have peace!
Go think that you have never seen Myself or smelted my sigh,
You long a maiden I have been
For favors in your eye!"

"Ah, spare a cent!" the tuber prayed,
"My cherried bride you'll be;
You are the only weeping maid
That's current now with me!"
And as the wily tuber spoke
He caught her by surprise
And, giving her an artichoke,
Devoured her with his eyes.

Erie Mountain Consolidated Mining Co. Limited, Spokane, Washington.

The Erie Mountain Consolidated Mining Co. was incorporated last May under the laws of the State of Washington, and British Columbia, registered, non-personal liability, stock fully paid and non-assessable.

The Company has a large treasury of 1,200,000 shares of its stock to be used for the development of the five mineral properties which it owns, the same being located in the well known Nelson, Northport and Trail smelters.

The Company who has just returned Mr. Willis H. Merriam, treasurer of from the company's property, says that they are opening up a well mineralized ledge 40 ft. between walls which are well defined on the "Houlton," and traceable for a distance of fully 1,000 feet in length. In one shaft which has been sunk only 25 feet, there is a three foot lead of fine quartz from which five assays ranging from $9.05 to $83.10 gave an average of $31.19 gold, copper and silver, and is a magnificent showing.

The "Gilford," another property belonging to the company, Mr. Merriam says has simply a wonderful showing. There is a huge mineral dyke, more than 100 feet in width on which they have run a tunnel for a distance of about 60 feet; this tunnel is being run to catch at greater depth a rich vein which was encountered in the upper tunnel. From this tunnel thirteen assays ranging from $5.50 to $154.03 gave an average of $39.42. The ore from the lower tunnel is growing richer as progress is made, and greater depth is obtained, and with 60 feet further they expect to cut the main lead of rich ore. Mr. Merriam says the company is in receipt of a letter from the Northport smelter offering to freight and treat their ore for $6.00 per ton; the amount of silica, and other fluxing ingredients which it carries make this ore particularly desirable.

All the properties of this company lie in the vicinity of the well-known Silver King, Ymir, Second relief, and some join the well-known Canadian King and Arlington mines. The "Gilford," where the main development is now being done, lies only about 1,000 feet from the railroad, and only about 30 miles from the Nelson, Northport and Trail smelters.

It will be seen that the development of these properties is yet in its infancy, but with their present showing, and very favorable location, with transportation and smelters close at hand, make the prospects very bright for this company.

Their principal offices are located at No. 224 Mohawk Block, Spokane, Washington.

A source of great evil among all workers is the widespread habit of eating a hearty meal hurriedly when the body is in a state of exhaustion.

Too often, alas, the evil is enhanced by the fact that the food is insubstantial, badly cooked and clogging in itself. This is one species of "slow" evils, causing a long train of evils which are usually attributed to overwork. Now, it were better to go without food than to take it under these conditions. Your dog knows better than to eat when he is tired, and if you will watch him you will notice that he is always reluctant to be enticed into play after eating. Left to himself he will take a nap, or at least drop care for awhile and rest. Humanity might raise its standard of health by following the example set by the instincts of the brute creatures.—Health Culture.

Short Story of the Day

THE DEVIL'S LANE.

BY COL. WILLIAM L. VISCHER.

One afternoon, some twenty years ago, I was the companion of Dr. Burdick while he was making some family calls. It was in central Kentucky and an exquisitely lovely day in the early autumn season. As we drove over one of the smooth and white turnpikes I observed a narrow and curious lane which intersected the turnpike at right angles. It wasn't wide enough to admit a male peacock when it wanted to strut. The lane was brooked and almost hidden from view by tangled masses of elderberry bushes, morning glory vines and interlaced with wild rose bushes. Two farmhouses stood in the distance and they were of the better class for that region. Apple, peach and pear trees were loaded down with fruit, and great sheaves of wheat and corn were standing in the sun light as emblems of peace and prosperity. These, with the clean woodland pasture and lithelimb horses readily indicated that we were in the far-famed blue grass region.

A boy and a girl, the boy 8 or 9 years of age, and the girl a year younger, came out of the mouth of the zig-zag lane where they had been chasing ground squirrels, and the doctor spoke to them in a jolly way and familiarly.

"Hello! Sammy," and "Howdy, Sudie!"

"Howdy, Doc." The girl responded. "You going up to we-all's house?"

"I am going by there, Sudie, and you may ride with us if you wish."

The girl looked toward her playmate and, instructed by some Masonic sign known to childhood, she replied: "No, thanks, sir. Sammy is going to see me home."

"Well, by-by."

"Good-by."

"As we drove the doctor remarked: 'Those youngsters will probably get peddled.'"

"For what?" I asked.

"You observed that lane they came from, didn't you?"

"Yes, and I intended to ask what it meant."

"It means that these two farmers are bitter enemies. The boy, Sam, is the son of Tom Riggins, whose house we passed just yonder, and the girl is the daughter of Dick Rutherford; this is his place, just ahead of us. The dividing line between their farms lies inside of those two zig-zag fences, and the men take each other so that they'd rather die than join in a partnership line, hence each has built on his own and thus we have such an eye-sore as that. Country people, knowing the cause of such a double fence, call it 'The Devil's Lane.'"

Of course, when such animities exist between the heads of the families it estranges the entire connection on both sides, and from those often spring the terrible and widespread Kentucky feuds that you hear and read so much about.

In this case Tom Riggins and Dick Rutherford had been the best of friends until two years ago, at hog-killing time, when they fell out over guessing at the weight of a fat porker. Their guesses were about fifty pounds apart, and as the hog was found to weigh just half way between, out of that sprang a misunderstanding, harsh words followed, and the breach has grown wider with years. Between the two houses there is an animosity as strong as that between the Capulets and Montagues, in Shakespeare's 'Romeo and Juliet.' The two men folks on the opposite sides toes their heels and don't speak to each other. The servants frequently fight and the two heads avoid each other lest they do something rash."

A few days ago I rode with the doctor along the turnpike, where the foregoing conversation had occurred two decades ago. The "Devil's Lane" was gone. Where it had been was the centre of a long avenue flanked by Lombardy poplars, with alternating apple trees, and at the head of the alameda stood a great, hospitable-looking mansion having a wide portico in front, whose roof was supported by huge and white Corinthian columns. I could see no sign in either direction of the former homes of the Riggins and Rutherford.

The doctor, now an elderly man, long since retired from active practice of his profession, turned our conveyance into the alameda and in a few minutes we were being received at the steps of the portico by a handsome young man of about 28 whose hair was prematurely white and a petite matron of near the same age, whose charm of manner and gracious bearing brought glimpses of the "old regime."

They were squire Sam Riggins and wife. Their fathers, Dick Rutherford and Tom Riggins, had long been gathered to their fathers, the two farms were joined into one and all the interests consolidated.

We partook of a glorious dinner with the Riggins and laughed together about the incident of twenty years before when we met Sudie and Sam at the mouth of the "lane."

As the doctor and I rode home under the undraining trees, and upon the carpet of purple, gold and crimson that was made by their cast off clothing of autumn-dyed leaves, the old healer told me how it had all happened.

No amount of punishment inflicted by their respective parents could keep those youngsters apart. They were inseparable when it was possible for them to be together. The little girl would weave wreaths of jasmine flowers and vines for Sammy and Sammy caught her butterflies and filled her lap with blue-tinted daisies fresh from the moss lined brook that flowed through the meadow. Whippings, threats, confinements, entreaties by their parents that they keep away from each other did no good. To the contrary, it seemed the greater the opposition, the more binding their childish affection.

"Of course their meetings were clandestine. They would seek out remote corners in the pastures or hide among the hemlock bushes over on the ridge and remain for hours in each other's company, perfectly oblivious to and absolutely uninfluenced by the almost assured spankings they knew they would receive when they returned to their homes."

"The days went by and as the months grew into years their love for each other became stronger and more beautiful. When they said their simple prayers in the evenings they invoked the blessings of the Infinite on both houses and when they were old enough to know and feel the strength of their friendship, undying and indissoluble, they pledged themselves to each other. They were standing at the entrance of the lane when this was done and he was looking down into eyes that, for him, rivaled in splendor the brightness of the twinkling stars that danced in riotous joy above them. It was early spring, just as the jonquills were putting forth their yellow heads to be picked off by the golden geese. The lights were being put out in the farm house nearby and the youthful lovers knew it was time they were at home. But they promised to meet early the following morning and spend the day with each other, far out in the woods where the dogwood trees looked like woodland brides, and the red birds hovered around the rhododas seemingly to court the flower that cheapened their array."

"The next morning they met at the mouth of the lane, she wearing a hood as red as the jacket of Tommy Atkins. They had not gone a very great way before a huge bull, attracted by the gaudy color of Sudie's cape, dashed for her, blinded by all the fury of a challenged beast. Escape was impossible. Sammy saw the danger and threw himself between the girl and the bull. Just as the animal was about to bear down upon the helpless boy two rifle shots rang out almost simultaneously and the bull dropped in his tracks and in another instant the fathers of the young people were standing by the side of the dying brute."

With rifle in hand they had followed their children without being observed, intent and determined upon breaking off their companionship. Fortunately they were just near enough to send messengers of death to the bull before the cruel horns could do damage. The two men looked kindly upon each other as the girl tremblingly clung to the speechless boy."

"Here, shake my hand, Rutherford, said Riggins, and let us stop all this foolishness, and before he could conclude his sentence Riggins' rifle had fallen to the ground as he reached forward to embrace his long-estranged friend. Suddenly recovering from their emotions, Sammy's father turned to the youths and in a tone of attempted seriousness exclaimed: 'Run along home, sir, and get to your books—and—' Sudie, you better get to your room and take off that cape. Your father and I are going to the tavern.'"

"Yes, you hurry home, Sudie, spoke up her father, and tell your mother to have dinner cooked for company. Mr. Rutherford and his family will be over in all little while."

DIAMOND DYES

Can't Be Washed Out

With Soap-suds.

The Diamond Dyes in all the new and fashionable colors are made especially for home use. They will dye cotton, silk or wool or mixed fabrics of heavy or light weights, and produce colors that never fade or wash out.

No other dyes on the market can equal the Diamond Dyes in strength, brilliancy, durability of color or simplicity of use. Long years of severe tests have made Diamond Dyes the most popular in every civilized land.

As some dealers sell inferior and weak dyes put up in packages to imitate Diamond Dyes, always insist upon getting the genuine with the name "Diamond" which is a sure protection to every home dyer.

No failures, no disappointments or loss of materials when you use Diamond Dyes. Are you interested in the making of hooked Mats and Rugs? If so, send for our new illustrated "Diamond Dye Rug Book"; free to any address. Wells & Richardson Co., 200 Mountain St. Montreal, P. Q.

Samson's Talking Man.

Samson's talking man, or "toll-fall," is a character. All the affairs of state of the village in which he holds office are carried upon his shoulders. In ordinary he is the chief adviser, persuader, conciliator and restrainer of the leading chiefs.

Having the gift of eloquence, he makes the most of it. He enjoys immunity from many things. He cannot be spoken of in ordinary terms. If it should be necessary to speak of his eyes or his mouth or his limbs, special honorable words must be used, words which attach to him alone and have never been applied to the personal parts of ordinary men.

As he stands to deliver his soft, persuasive, mellifluous oratory, with staff of office in his hand and his fly fluster thrown over his shoulder, any one can see that he is a man of great importance, or if this is not apparent from his attitude it may be gathered from the attention paid to his utterances by gray haired chiefs and by youths and maidens. If the talking man is a clever fellow and understands his business, he is the chief ruling power in his tribe, although the nominal leadership is always vested in a chief or paramount figurehead.

Annual Report of

THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

Applications to the number of 8,287 for assurances of $13,322,227 were received in the Ordinary Department during the year 1899. In addition there were 9,903 applications for Thrift assurances of $1,401,350.41, making a total of 18,190 for $14,723,577.59. The Policies actually put into force were 13,101, for $9,746,308.84. These figures include only such assurances as have been actually paid for during the year in cash, the balance being declined, withdrawn or not completed.

The Policies in force at the close of the year were as follows:

	Number.	Amount.
Ordinary Department.....	32,644	$50,661,873.28
Thrift Department.....	16,281	2,144,462.65
Total.....	48,925	$52,806,335.93

The Income continues to expand at a rapid rate. The Premiums received during the year, after deducting re-assurances, were $2,214,508.66. Interest and other returns from Investments brought the amount up to $2,596,207.27. This shows an increase of $220,695.54 in the premium income, and $268,293.67 in the total income. While this is highly satisfactory, it is still more pleasing to be able to state that the efficiency of the Company's arrangements at its various Branches and Agencies is now such that this splendid increase in Income was secured not only without further cost, but with an actual reduction in the Expense Account of $10,293.64.

The Assets have been augmented by $1,015,752.80, and are now $9,247,664.61. The undivided surplus to policyholders is $478,304.45 on the Company's own basis, the Hm. Table with 4 percent interest. This is an increase of $118,906.19 over the figures of the previous year. The surplus by the government standard is of course much larger. The sum of $39,740.75 was moreover distributed to persons entitled to draw their profits during the year.

Your Directors consider that all interested are to be congratulated on the marked prosperity indicated by the preceding statements.

The year has been noteworthy for the passage of an important amendment to the Dominion Insurance Act. The modifications introduced are, in the opinion of your directors, partly commendable and partly the reverse. The desirability, and in fact the necessity of enlarging the field within which Canadian Life Companies might invest their rapidly accumulating funds had become very evident, and the portions of the Act which deal with this question meet with hearty approval. To strengthen the Reserve, by the adoption of a low rate of interest in the calculations, is also a praiseworthy object. The Sun Life of Canada was the first Company in the Dominion to voluntarily place its Reserves on a four percent basis, combined with the Hm. mortality table of the Institute of Actuaries, and it has maintained them at this high level ever since. The Directors do not, however, believe that it is wise or beneficial to exact an unnecessarily high standard as a test of solvency. The measure was fortunately considerably amended before its final passage, and is now comparatively unobjectionable. This Company will have no difficulty in complying with its requirements.

THE SUN LIFE.

The Operations of Another Highly Successful Year Reviewed.

The Times congratulates the management of the Sun Life Assurance Company on the result of the year's operations, which will be seen on reference to the report published elsewhere. From the annual statement it will also be seen that there were the large number of 2,227 applications for new assurances, amounting to $13,222,227, in the Ordinary Department during the year, and in addition to this 9,903 applications were received for Thrift assurances, amounting to $1,401,860.41, making a total of 13,189 for $14,724,087.58. The policies actually put into force were 13,189, for $9,748,866.74. The total number of policies in force at the end of the year were 48,925 for $52,894,036.33. This is a showing that the management may well feel proud of.

The income continues to expand at a rapid rate. The total income after deducting re-assurances, amounted to $2,598,207.27, being an increase of $363,293.67 over the previous year.

This speaks for itself. The Sun Life is popular throughout Central and Eastern Ontario, as it is in other parts of the Dominion. Its wonderful growth and record tells the story of careful and level-headed management, and augurs well for still greater results.

To Mr. W. H. Hill, the manager for Central Ontario, is due a fair measure of the phenomenal success attained.

This is What.

The Hamilton Times has to say about the Sherlock Male Quartette, who appear at the annual sacred concert of the George street church choir on April 17th—"The Sherlock Male Quartette, of Toronto, met with decided favour as the hands of the audience and well merited the frequent encores accorded. Mr. J. M. Sherlock in tenor solo displayed a remarkable range and sweetness for a male voice and was heartily applauded." Remember the date, April 17th, 1900. Admission 25 cents.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Spring is here.

Carpet beating is now in order.

No one can accuse this spring of being too forward.

Mr. Arnold has placed a new engine in his cheese box factory.

Horace Wallace, a Port Hope lad, was accidentally shot, but not seriously, by a companion.

The members of Court St. Peter, Catholic Order of Foresters, have issued invitations for an A. T. Home in their hall on Easter Monday evening.

The report that Mr. Jackson has purchased the Coft House is not correct. Mr. Croft wishes the public to understand that he is still at the old stand.

Locomotive 753, one of the new moguls on this division of the C.P.R., yesterday hauled a string of 71 loaded cars a distance of 128 miles in five hours. This is a record breaker.

"Your little boy always seems as busy as a bee," remarked Mr. James Smith, the popular teacher, to a fond mother who called at the Central School to learn how her boy was getting on. "Yes," replied the teacher, "as she glanced admiringly at her offspring. 'He has the hive.' Mr. Smith has it in for that youth."

For Adoption.

Boy two and one half years old. Protestant. Town family preferred. Apply to Secretary of Children's Aid Society.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

The Times invites all its readers to contribute to this column all items of a personal or social nature, such as the arrival and departure of guests, the movements of well known people, business men, and particulars of so homes, parties, etc. All that is required is to send a postcard or letter, or telephone the Times, giving rough outline, and we will put it into shape.

Mill Ault is the guest of friends at Mountain Grove for a few days.

Mr. Herbert McBain of Upper Canada College is down for the Easter holidays.

Mrs. Roustree, Water street, is suffering from the effects of a stroke of paralysis.

Mr. T. Arnold Haultain returned to Toronto yesterday. Mrs. Haultain accompanied him.

Lindsay Post: Dr. D. C. King, eldest son of the late Dr. King of Peterborough, spent last night in town, the guest of his friend, Mr. G. R. Stephens, G.T.R. Trainmaster.

Mr. C. Stanley, the popular manager of the Stanley Piano Co., was in Toronto yesterday, where he was called to preside at the meeting of the Canadian Piano and Organ Manufacturers Association.

Mr. A. P. Scott, ex-champion golf player of Canada, is still in town, and yesterday featured the Times with a call. He will probably remain until Monday. In the meantime a number of enthusiastic local golfers are extracting from Mr. Scott a few fine points about the game, so that golf will be "hot" here this season, especially during the dog days. This is no joke.

We congratulate our old friend, Mr. Ted. Cavanagh, on his recovery from a serious accident. He was closing the cross-bar across the door of a carload of horses, when one of the animals kicked twice, striking him on the side of the face. Eight stitches had to be put in and Mr. Cavanagh's face was badly bruised and cut. Although not entirely recovered, Mr. Cavanagh is able to be about.

Mr. T. Blexard, M.P.P., says an evening contemporary, is personally one of the most popular members of the Legislature. He was the subject of a pleasant practical joke on Wednesday afternoon. A beautiful potted asalea in full bloom was placed on his desk in the Legislative Chamber, and accompanying the address on the floral tribute was the legend "From his best girl." The hearty applause from both sides of the House showed how high a degree of popularity the sturdy member for East Peterborough enjoys.

OF CANADA

SATISFACTORY INCREASE IN BUSINESS

Care in the Selection Business

ANNUAL MEETING

The Annual Meeting of this Company was held at the Head Office, Montreal, on the 28th inst., when the Directors' Report and Financial Statement were submitted.

Mr. James Crathern, President of the Company, occupied the chair, and Mr. David Burke, the General Manager, acted as Secretary.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

In presenting their Annual Report and Financial Statement for the year ending December 31st, 1899, your Directors have pleasure in calling attention to the satisfactory results of the business for the year.

Income.

The premiums and interest received in cash during the year amounted to $68,435.85, showing an increase over the past year of $38,762.07, or over 130 per cent. The increase in premiums alone has been even more marked in proportion, such increase being $36,422.91 or over 148 per cent.

Death Claims.

The Company paid out during the year in Death Claims $2,000, under two policies of $1,000 each on two separate lives, but only one became a claim during the year, the other occurred in 1898 and was unpaid at the end of the year, awaiting the usual proofs of death, but was included as a liability due of $1,000 in the Statement for that year.

The total Death Claims since the Company commenced business have amounted to only $4,000 on three lives insured, which indicates that much care has been exercised in the acceptance of risks.

Application Received and Insurance Issued.

The application for insurance received reached $1,205,998 of which $1,112,730 was accepted by the Company, and policies issued thereunder to the number of 764; the balance, $93,268, was declined or deferred as not being up to the Company's requirements.

Insurance in Force.

The Insurance in force on the Company's books at December 31st, 1899, amounted to $1,707,807, under 1,129 policies. The average amount insured under each policy in force being $1,512 and the average amount on each life insured $1,623.

GENERAL INCREASE DURING THE YEAR.

	1899	1900	Increase.
In Accumulated Assets	$22,192.28	$22,616.64	$424.36
In Premiums Received	94,608.13	60,082.03	$34,526.10
In Reserves	70,387.73	70,387.73	$0.00
In Applications Received	58,303.36	1,205,998.00	$1,147,694.64
In Insurance Issued	770,577.00	1,112,730.00	$342,153.00
In Insurance in Force	981,577.00	1,707,807.00	$726,230.00

Security for Policyholders.

The Assets of the Company now amount to $232,616.64, being an increase during the year of $20,417.38, which together with the guaranteed Capital of the Company, makes $1,032,616.64 of security for liabilities to policyholders of $70,267.73 for Reserves on Insurance in force on December 31st, according to Government valuation.

Premium Rates and Reserves.

In conformity with the amendment to the Insurance Act passed by the Dominion Government at the last Session of Parliament this Company has adopted premium rates based on the Institute of Actuaries' H. M. Table with 3 1/2 per cent. interest for all new policies issued after January 1st, 1900. On all such policies the Company will maintain Reserves on a 3 1/2 per cent. interest basis. The effect of such a conservative basis for both premiums and Reserves must give still greater confidence in the foundation on which our business rests.

Boards of Reference.

Since the last Annual Meeting the Directors have established Local Boards of Reference at Toronto and Ottawa, and the following resident shareholders have been appointed members of such Boards:—

Toronto: Sir Thos. W. Taylor, Ex-Chief Justice of Manitoba, Donald Mackay, Esq., Vice-President Ontario Bank, W. J. Gage, Esq., President W. J. Gage & Company, Ltd.
Ottawa: Geo. Burn, Esq., General Manager Bank of Ottawa, John MacLaren, Esq., MacLaren & McLaurin, Lumber Merchants, W. D. Hogg, Esq., Q. C., O'Connor, Hogg & Magee.

The vacancy on the Manitoba Board caused by Sir Thos. W. Taylor taking up his residence in Toronto, has been filled by the appointment of Mr. Jas. T. Gordon, of Winnipeg.

The Company's Agents.

The Directors wish to express their high appreciation of the efforts of the Agents of the Company in accomplishing such a satisfactory increase in the business done during the year.

Certificate of Auditors.

The books, vouchers, and securities of the Company have been audited by Messrs. Macintosh & Hyde, Chartered Accountants, and their Certificate is herewith attached to the Financial Statement.

Retiring Directors.

The Directors retiring this year are Messrs. Jonathan Hodgson, H. N. Bate, David Morris, Gaspard LeMoine and Edmund B. Osler, all of whom are eligible for re-election for the incoming term of three years.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

DAVID BURKE, General Manager,

JAMES CRATHERN, President.

There was a large attendance of a few words bearing on a point which prominent shareholders, including has not been referred to in the Directors' Report, although such may not be necessary, as the report is very full and complete.

"On comparing the results of the year 1899 with 1898 I find the earnings (received and accrued) in the former year, which was our first, complete year of operations, fell a little short of our organization and ordinary expenses, while the earnings on the business of 1899, notwithstanding the consequent increase in expenditure in connection with the increased volume of business secured, computed on identical basis, the same business as for 1898, gives a balance in our favor in 1899 of over $32,500. With the volume of business and the premium revenue therefrom now on the Company's books, the Directors feel safe in predicting an increase in future earnings on a similar basis proportionate with the increasing business of the Company.

"Referring to the average risk on lives insured by the Company, great care and attention have been given to obtain a safe average in the amount of insurance carried on each life, which the Report shows to be about $1,600. The average age of the policyholders now insured in the Company is 31 years. In the selection of desirable business, the younger ages are considered preferable as having a longer average existence on the books of the Company. While this applies more directly to Life policies, the effect is also shown in the selection of longer periods for Endowment policies by those of younger ages, requiring lighter premiums which will tend not doubt to retain a larger proportion of insurance each year on the Company's books.

"All these matters directly favor the building up of a Life Insurance Company, enabling it to retain its accumulated funds for a longer period, which is important both to the policyholder and to the Company."

Mr. Andrew E. Gault, Vice-President:—"In seconding the adoption of the Report it affords me much pleasure to express my gratification at the very satisfactory report and statement of the Company's business now submitted to the shareholders. The Company has been carefully managed, and its death claims have been exceptionally small, which can be accounted for by the great care exercised in accepting only the best business offered. The Company's progress since it commenced business has been equal with any of the best managed offices, and the building up has been on a solid foundation. There is no doubt but that the Company's position as an important factor in the Life Insurance business of this country, is now established."

Dr. T. G. Roddick, M.P., Medical Director, on referring to the very favorable mortality experienced so far by the Company, paid a high tribute to the Doctors who made the examinations, and stated that in every case the Examiners had protected the Company's interests in a manner most satisfactory to himself and to the management.

The Directors' Report was unanimously adopted.

Scrutineers having been appointed by the President, a ballot was taken which resulted in the retiring Directors being unanimously re-elected for three years.

At a meeting of the Board subsequently held Mr. James Crathern was re-elected President, Messrs. Andrew E. Gault and Hon. L. J. Forget re-elected Vice-Presidents, and Dr. T. G. Roddick elected Medical Director.

BOERS ARE IN FORCE NEAR BLOEMFONTEIN.

British Picket at Springfield Attacked by Boers Advancing From the Waterworks.

BRITISH IN PEACEFUL SLUMBER SURROUNDED.

A Boer Account of the Bloemfontein Waterworks Affair—Bayonets
Were Being Made for the Foreign Legion—No Word From Lord Roberts.

Bloemfontein, April 7. Boers are reported in force to the north, beginning at the railroad, which however, is strongly protected. British pickets at Springfield, eight miles distant were attacked today by Boers advancing from the waterworks. Remounts are rapidly arriving. The British are in high spirits and anxious to advance.

London, April 9, 4.30 p.m. There is little in the news to bring satisfactory assurance that nothing need be feared even if the railways and telegraphs are cut and Bloemfontein isolated, together with the news that the British and other civilians are being ordered away do not show up well. There are rumors from Cape Town that the telegraph wires were already cut yesterday, (Sunday) and also that the Hussars who were sent to the relief of the Royal City Rifles are also missing, although probably these are the outcome of Boer exaggerations, designed to encourage the burghers. The attempt of General Colville to catch the Boer leaders in conference at Heitfontein failed probably because of the lack of cavalry.

A belated Boer despatch says that bayonets were being made for the foreign legion under the late Gen. De Villebois Mareuil. The Boers believe that the Colesberg and Stormberg commandos numbering 6,000 with 10 cannons and 750 wagons have gotten safely through. A Boer account of the Bloemfontein waterworks affair says that Col. Broadwood evacuated Theba N'Chu owing to the advance of Commandant Oliver from the South. The Federal troops found the British camp in peaceful slumber. Gen. De Weyer immediately placed Guard and three thousand men in such positions as to surround the British who did not have time to recover from their surprise.

Bethany, Free State, April 5. The five companies of British infantry which were surprised by the Heitfontein commando while marching across the country made a plucky stand, but the Boers had three field guns and the British none, the latter were compelled to surrender. Gen. Gatacre arrived too late. Reddersburg was already occupied by the Boers, and the enemy are now through the lines to the south. Gen. Gatacre's force has returned here without having found any trace of the ill-fated British column captured by the Reddersburg commando. It is impossible to estimate the British losses, but as the men fought stubbornly, it is probable that these were were taken.

Bloemfontein, April 7. Another of Mr. Stays's brothers was captured near Kars Siding yesterday and arrived here to-day.

Pretoria, April 6. It is reported that Gen. Dewet attacked and captured a large force of British cavalry at Dewet Dorp, south-east of Bloemfontein, capturing 450 prisoners and a large quantity of ammunition and camp stores and inflicted heavy loss. The Federal loss, it is stated, was two killed and four wounded. All is quiet with the other commandos.

Aliwal North, April 7. The Royal Rifles, which have been falling back from Rouxville, arrived here safely last night.

Their retirement was covered by a detachment sent by Gen. Brabant frustrating the Boers and interrupting the approach of the enemy from Rouxville. Lieut. Borey and two men of Brabant's detachment of the Border Horse are missing. The Boers were killed in the rear guard action. A strong Boer commando is reported to be at Walz Cop, 14 miles west of Rouxville.

DRISCOLL'S SCOUTS ENGAGED.

They Fight and Defeat the Boers Near Wepener.

London, April 7.—The Times has a special from Wepener, where Brabant is, dated April 6, as follows: Driscoll's Scouts, who are seven miles away, were heavily engaged today with a large force of the enemy, whom they fought from an advantageous position among the houses and kraals on a farm. The Boers retired with two killed. Driscoll's Scouts had three horses killed. The position here extends about four miles. It is apparently equally defensible from either front or rear. The Boers who have surrendered their arms are naturally nervous, and demand protection from the enemy, who have treated similar cases at Ladybrand and Theba N'Chu most brutally.

RUSSIANS RAISE PROTEST.
They Think the Despatch of Troops to Rhodesia a Breach of Treaty.

London, April 7.—The Times has a despatch from St. Petersburg, which states: The Russian press condemns the arrangement for the despatch of troops via Beira as a breach of neutrality, in spite of the declaration of the Portuguese Minister. It is regarded as a direct consequence of the failure of the Delagoa Bay Railway award to satisfy English hopes.

The Novoe Vremya and other journals describe England as grinding her teeth in rage and disappointment at all the creditors, and as having decided to compensate herself by strengthening a point in the old convention in order to pass British troops through Beira. The discontent of the United States, it said, was simply because the amount of money awarded was not sufficient to satisfy all the creditors, but the dissatisfaction in England was due entirely to the fact that the award was not large enough to be beyond the power of Portugal to pay without a loan, which the English would furnish in exchange for Delagoa Bay. The use of the port and the railway of a neutral power in order to take the road to the rear was declared to be a provocation to Europe and to America, and the Novoe Vremya cynically added that if Europe remained indifferent, as it undoubtedly will remain, for all practical purposes, to this challenge, it would only be because the roundabout way through Beira would be exhausting and fatal to the English themselves. Today this newspaper argues that England has the right to introduce troops into Rhodesia through Portuguese territory only for its protection against natives, and therefore Europe has a legal as well as a moral right to place veto on the consent of the Portuguese Government, otherwise the civilized world will be guilty of crime against the South African Republics.

BOER PRISONERS ESCAPE.
Fourteen of Them Succeeded in Escaping from Their Captors.

Cape Town, April 6.—A determined attempt to escape was made to-day by the Boer prisoners at Simonstown, and 14 of them succeeded in getting away. The confusion one of the prisoners was killed and another was wounded. One man was recaptured, but about 14 are missing. Sentinels have been placed at different parts of the town, and the station is under military supervision.

ANOTHER COLONIAL BRIGADE.

Bloemfontein, April 4.—There has been a reorganization of the Mounted Infantry corps of the army under Lord Roberts at this point, the new division as this constituted being placed under the command of Gen. Hamilton. The division is composed of two brigades, one being formed of the Canadians, Australians, New Zealanders and the other colonial units here. This brigade has been placed under the command of Lieutenant-Col. Hutton, the late Canadian general of the militia forces in Canada, who has just arrived at the front. The second brigade, which is made up of regular and volunteer Imperial troops, will be under the command of Major Ridley.

WAITING AT BLOEMFONTEIN.

Roberts Continues to Accumulate Supplies and Remounts.

London, April 7.—Headlines of attack on the line of communication and other analogies of the "war of ambulances," which the late Colonel Villebois Mareuil inaugurated and the Boers are carrying out, Gen. Roberts still continues to accumulate supplies and wait for remounts at Bloemfontein. The constant cry for remounts from correspondents is sufficiently significant to give the impression that this deficiency is more serious than it appears on the surface. The possibility is suggested that some epidemic has broken out among Gen. Roberts's cavalry horses, and is creating such havoc that the comical blue pencil is being employed to keep the knowledge from the public. This, of course, is one theory to account for the immobility of the British forces. Another theory is that Lord Roberts is drawing the Boers into a trap. It has been hinted that he is encouraging the Boers to advance farther south of Bloemfontein with the intention of swinging round his army to the right and striking it across the country from Bloemfontein to Ladybrand, thus effectively cutting off the enemy's retreat by penning them up in the tract of country bounded by the railway line, the Orange River and the Beuto border. This X would be a great coup and injure the Boer cause. X more than Cronje's surrender, as it would take place in a district which the British have every reason for wishing to pacify by a severe object lesson. Recent events inspire severe commentary upon the thoughtless methods of some British officers who appear to be living in a fool's paradise, though in the midst of an enemy's country, and who, by neglecting elementary military rules, allow their forces to be captured when the use of the scout, the spade and the rifle, might enable them to hold out until aid arrived. These remarks apply to Colonel Broadwood and the officer who lost over 300 men near Bethany in an especial degree.

CASUALTIES AT REDDERSBURG.
Ten Killed, Thirty-Five Wounded and 546 Captured.

London, April 7.—1.05 p.m.—Lord Roberts reports to the War Office as follows: "Bloemfontein, Friday, April 6.—The casualties at Reddersburg, were—Officers killed, Captain F. G. Casson and Lieut. C. H. Barclay, both of the Northumberland; wounded, 2; captured, 8; non-commissioned officers and men killed, 8; wounded, 33. The rest were captured."

POOR MEN IN THE BRITISH ARMY.

Discussion of the Need of a New Order of Things. Hitch in the Australian Federation Arrangements.
The Prince's Coolness.

(Special London Cable Letter by the Associated Press.)
London, April 7.—The scatter-brained youth and his three-franc pistol gave England a thrill that has not yet been quite effaced by the instant knowledge that the Prince of Wales was unhurt. This was the first time the Prince has been attacked, though the assassination of the Queen has been attempted five times—by Oxford in 1649; by Francis in 1842; by Sean in the same year; by Hamilton in 1849, and by Maclean at Windsor in 1857. The use of no more money in Europe has been in danger so many times as has that of Queen Victoria, though with the exception of Emperor William, the hereditary ruler of every principal country has had at least one experience with a would-be assassin.

The Prince's Composure.
The Prince of Wales' demeanor when he emerged from the smoke of the gunpowder, and requested those who had laid siege upon him to stop, to treat him harshly, is admirable. In perfect composure the Prince returned to his carriage and sat down to a game of Nap, with the gentlemen attending him. He displayed similar impassiveness in the south of France, at the time of the terrible earthquake several years ago. He was asleep when the shock was first felt, was awakened at once, and warned to escape, but refused to be deprived of his rest by so trivial a thing as an earthquake. It is for such British qualities as these that the Prince is admired, as well as for his uniform good fellowship in social life.

The attempt upon the life of the Prince has placed in still clearer relief friend's cavalierous reception of the Queen.

The Queen's Kindly Act.
A member of Parliament tells a charming story of the Queen and Lady Mountbatten. When Lady Roberts visited Windsor, a few days before she sailed for the Cape, the Queen handed her a small parcel, saying: "Here is something I have tied up with my own hands, and that I beg you will not open till you get home."

Lady Roberts found that the parcel contained the Victoria Cross won by her dead son by his gallantry at Colenso.

Poor Men in the Army.
Mr. George Wyndham, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for War, appeared in the House of Commons last week with the back numbers of several magazines containing articles about West Point, and with papers concerning the United States' system of providing for officers. He read from these at intervals during the sitting.

WHO IS TO BLAME FOR THIS?

Do British Forces Ever Think of Entrenching Themselves? Asks The Times.

London, April 7.—The Times, discussing the capture at Reddersburg of five companies of British troops, says: "It is an unfortunate and very significant incident. It shows with what daring the Boers, confident in superior mobility, are operating in a country where there are British forces on all sides. Bethany is on a line of railway which we are supposed to hold. General Clementine has just marched through the country to the west of it. At Wepener, two days' march to the east, is a considerable British force. To the north is Lord Roberts, and to the south General Gatacre. Yet the Boers were able to cut out a detachment of 500 and remove it, almost under the eyes of the relieving force."

CHINA MUST SUPPRESS THE BOXERS.

The Powers Demand That the Murderous Marauding Bands Be Stopped.

London, April 7.—A special despatch from Shanghai announces that the British, German, French and American Ministers have sent a joint note to the Chinese Foreign Office, demanding the total suppression of the Society of "Boxers" within two months, and announcing that otherwise the powers mentioned will land troops and march into the interior northern provinces, Shan Tung and Chi Li, in order to secure the safety of foreigners.

"Our strength was 107 mounted infantry and 244 infantry. The enemy was said to be 3,200 strong, with five guns."

INSURGENTS WERE CAPTURED.
Two Hundred of Them Captured by the British Troops.

Carnarvon, Cape Colony, April 6.—It is reported that two hundred insurgents, who were not aware that Sir Charles Parsons had occupied Kenhardt, and who were on their way to that place, have been captured by the British troops.

The Canadian artillery has returned here from Van Wykswiel.

BOER PRISONERS LANDED.
Cape Town, April 5.—Owing to enteric fever on the transports, it has been decided to land most of the Boer prisoners and 1,500 were landed at Simonstown. The disease was apparently contracted at Paardeberg, but its development has been favored by confinement.

HUSSARS TO THE RESCUE.
Norval's Point, April 6.—A detachment of Hussars, who were proceeding hence to Bloemfontein, are reported to have been detained at Edenburg, about fifteen miles southwest of Reddersburg, in the Orange Free State, and despatched to the assistance of the British troops captured near Reddersburg.

The New York Herald's correspondent in Dublin furnished the following graphic description of Her Majesty's entry into the ancient city—
It was a rousing, great hearted reception which the people of Dublin and half a million visitors gave to Her Majesty, an ovation full of significance and intended so to be by each one of those thousands who shouted themselves hoarse cheering or singing "God Save the Queen."

I have, since the procession was over, seen spectators who were at many points of the route, and all unite in the same unanimous verdict, that her reception was as hearty and spontaneous as to assume the signature of a specially significant outburst.

The Heart of Dublin.
I myself remained a witness of the Queen's passage in College Green, among the university students, just at the corner where rows occur almost invariably a few people are not content.

This is the heart of Dublin. The streets in the great open space called the Green, where no green is, were densely packed with troops at 11 o'clock. They were lined up to keep the people back.

When the bands were silent the crowd took up the refrain of "God Save the Queen," "Rule Britannia" and "Soldiers of the Queen." It was a vast crowd, ready to cheer and anxious to cheer at anything.

It cheered boisterously the Lord Lieutenant and Lady Cadogan returning in state from having met the Queen on the landing, hurrying back to the Vice-Regal Lodge to be there to receive her on her arrival. It cheered when the students put a laurel wreath on the head of the statue of Goldsmith, and loudly cheered when the same students, at half-past eleven o'clock, put up a board with large letters stating that the Queen had left Kingstown.

Every quarter of an hour similar boards were put up, showing the exact progress of the Queen as she went along.

The Queen is Coming.
Meanwhile, the wind blew in a manner which made the endless bunting flutter like falling autumn leaves. Wicked looking clouds rolled up, frowned severely and passed on, giving way to the sun.

As Her Majesty approached the real Queen's sun showed out warmly, and all was perfect. Of course every one took this as absolutely for granted.

"The Queen," said a senior student at my side, "is Irish. She is descended directly from the O'Connell and Burkes. That is why she is so popular here." He added, "I came up in the train this morning and it was so crowded that there were legs and arms hanging out of the windows."

At this moment our conversation was interrupted by us to hawl two brawny students over the seven foot high rails. When they had been safely gathered in over the dangerous top spikes, they told us how they had just come up from Kingstown, where they had helped to give the Queen a reception, which they described as "hairlifting."

Present Arms!
Then the student at my side resumed the conversation, saying that there were crowds of thieves about. This was no news, as last evening the "light fingered gentry" relieved the writer of 300 in English notes.

The crowd by this time had worked itself into a condition of high enthusiasm. The band was playing, "Oh! the Days of the Kerry Dance!" when one of the chiefs of police rushed down the line shouting the word, "The Queen is coming."

"Present arms," roared all along the Pline. Photographers, who were all around me, became intensely agitated, and students wildly waved royal standards and Union Jacks.

The advance guard of the procession rounded the corner amid the wave of roaring sound, the wave coming nearer and nearer each minute. The sound of cheers from thousands of voices drove the students well-nigh frantic with excitement. Then, after two carriages had passed, another carriage came.

"The Queen!" They shouted.
The people went simply wild. They shouted themselves hoarse and waved handkerchiefs till they looked like clouds of white butterflies let loose. Hats, sticks, flags and hands were waved, and I realized then, in that moment of intense enthusiasm, how dearly Dublin loves a pageant.

I saw strong men turn their faces and wipe away tears as they saw that little old lady sitting all alone in the front seat of that deep barouche, so pale, so courageous, as to confide herself in the midst of people whom so many have tried to prevent her visiting.

Her Majesty Personally.
There she was, with her simple turban and shell edged glasses of old-time style and her simplicity of dress, all black save for one white spot of spray in her bonnet. Her veil was drawn down to save her rapidly weakening eyesight. I made no mistake, readers of this, you may have seen lectures of the Queen's amers and 51 of Robert's Horse. The others a robust, almost able-bodied looking lady, any divided among numerous regiments.

HER MAJESTY IN THE HEART OF DUBLIN CITY.

Interesting and Entertaining Description of the Great Reception Given Her.

INCIDENTS OF THE ROYAL ENTRY INTO THE CITY.

Strong Men Turned Their Faces and Wiped Away Tears as They Saw the Little Old Lady So Pale, So Courageous as Confide Herself Among Them.

The New York Herald's correspondent in Dublin furnished the following graphic description of Her Majesty's entry into the ancient city—
It was a rousing, great hearted reception which the people of Dublin and half a million visitors gave to Her Majesty, an ovation full of significance and intended so to be by each one of those thousands who shouted themselves hoarse cheering or singing "God Save the Queen."

Her Majesty Personally.
There she was, with her simple turban and shell edged glasses of old-time style and her simplicity of dress, all black save for one white spot of spray in her bonnet. Her veil was drawn down to save her rapidly weakening eyesight. I made no mistake, readers of this, you may have seen lectures of the Queen's amers and 51 of Robert's Horse. The others a robust, almost able-bodied looking lady, any divided among numerous regiments.

These pictures do not tell you the truth. She is a very feeble, aged Queen, feeling her years very heavily, and held up merely by that inextinguishable strength of will which buoy her up to the last, and that she holds up her head and faces her people.

Such she was to-day, and a more pathetic sight it would be impossible to imagine. I could have thrown a biscuit into her carriage, so near was I.

Broke Him Down.
Just below me was a malcontent of ministerial aspect, who had attracted my attention owing to the malicious way in which he had glared at those who had been lustily singing "God Save the Queen," and scarcely concealed the signs of his contempt and disdain for them.

I saw him watch the carriage with a hard look, and then, apparently realising that his hatred was vented on a gentle, benevolent lady, so old and with such a motherly little smile and such dignity withal, I saw his face soften. His eyes filled with dimness, and when I next looked he was cheering with the rest, with his head bared. It was but a minute incident, yet it told a great big story of victory won by right over prejudice.

Many and many a time I have seen the Queen quite near, but never have I seen her so absolutely moved by her surroundings. They evidently vividly recalled to her, to use her own words, "the losses which the years must bring," her past, visits, her journey with the Prince Consort and her children, several of whom have since gone.

Princess Beatrice, who ordinarily wears anything but a joyful face, was to-day remarked as being in quite unusual good spirits. But Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, like the Queen, was visibly affected by the truly Irish and extraordinarily spontaneous outburst of good will.

Radiant With Pleasure.
The Duchess of Connaught, who was in a carriage with a young girl and boy, was radiant with pleasure. Still more so was the Duke of Connaught, the favorite son of the Queen, owing to whom Her Majesty is over here.

He, as Commander-in-Chief, rode at her side. As her son, he rode a little nearer still, looking at her fondly and lovingly constantly, to watch how she would stand the ordeal, looking with pride and gratitude at the people, who thus gave a thrice hearty welcome, and whose admiration of him is warmly returned. It was a right happy day for the Duke of Connaught, probably the happiest of his life.

The Students Sang.
As the Queen arrived here the students in College Green ceased cheering and waving flags, and with their fresh power of voice, they sang the strains of "God Save the Queen," this time stronger than ever, and this time taken up by thousands of voices in the great space in front of the university, in the streets all around, in the grand stand and where seats magnates of the Bank of Ireland were seated, on the roofs by those crowded into every available window in the heart of Dublin, and by Dublin's heart.

And away sped this little old lady, who is capable of astonishing powers of magnetism upon vast, colossal crowds, such as those assembled here to-day, who makes the strong weep and the unwilling to bend to her.

Dublin's Greatest Day.
An Irish wave of sound float from below, and always the same, "God Save the Queen," intoned by hundreds upon hundreds of voices.

Dublin has absolutely never seen anything like it before and possibly never will again. Let politicians and politicians be they do not enter into to-day's functions.

One thing that has now been stamped as certain, and every event in the day's proceedings bears witness to it, is that the royal city of Dublin owes its pride in her loyalty to Queen Victoria. It had been a great day in Dublin's history.

IMPERIAL YEOMANRY DID IT.

They were Responsible for the Killing of Villebois Mareuil.

A despatch from Rorhosh states: There was a successful fight about nine miles east of Boshof. Sixty-eight Boers were surrounded on a kopje by a body of the Imperial Yeomanry, under Lord Chesham, and the Kimberley Mounted Corps, under Col. Peakman, with the 4th Field Battery. The Boers lost eight killed and eight wounded. The remainder surrendered.

The French General Villebois Mareuil was among the killed. A scout cart containing dynamite was captured. The Imperial Yeomanry behaved like veterans in a troop. One British officer was dead after the white flag had been hoisted. His murderer was killed.

COL. BROADWOOD'S LOSS.

London, April 6.—The official list of casualties to Col. Broadwood's column in the Beana's Post affair are given as follows—

Missing—44, wounded 12, killed 4, total 60. The missing include 124 artillerymen, 25 Life Guards, 25 men of the 10th Hussars, 25 men of the 10th Hussars, 25 men of the 10th Hussars. The others a robust, almost able-bodied looking lady, any divided among numerous regiments.

THE ROYAL-VICTORIA

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY
OF CANADA

SATISFACTORY INCREASE IN BUSINESS

Care in the Selection Business

ANNUAL MEETING

The Annual Meeting of this Company was held at the Head Office, Montreal, on the 25th inst., when the Directors' Report and Financial Statement were submitted.

Mr. James Crathern, President of the Company, occupied the chair, and Mr. David Burke, the General Manager, acted as Secretary.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

In presenting their Annual Report and Financial Statement for the year ending December 31st, 1899, your Directors have pleasure in calling attention to the satisfactory results of the business for the year.

Income.

The premiums and interest received in cash during the year amounted to $68,435.85, showing an increase over the past year of $38,762.07, or over 130 per cent. The increase in premiums alone has been even more marked in proportion, such increase being $36,422.91 or over 148 per cent.

Death Claims.

The Company paid out during the year in Death Claims $2,000, under two policies of $1,000 each on two separate lives, but only one became a claim during the year, the other occurred in 1898 and was unpaid at the end of the year, awaiting the usual proofs of death, but was included as a liability due of $1,000 in the Statement for that year.

The total Death Claims since the Company commenced business have amounted to only $4,000 on three lives insured, which indicates that much care has been exercised in the acceptance of risks.

Applications Received and Insurance Issued.

The application for insurance received reached $1,205,998, of which $1,112,730 was accepted by the Company, and policies issued thereunder to the number of 764; the balance, $93,268, was declined or deferred as not being up to the Company's requirements.

Insurance in Force.

The Insurance in force on the Company's books at December 31st, 1899, amounted to $1,707,807, under 1,129 policies. The average amount insured under each policy in force being $1,512 and the average amount on each life insured $1,621.

GENERAL INCREASE DURING THE YEAR.

	1899	1900	Increase.
In Assets	$800,128.38	$233,224.94	$566,903.44
In Premiums Received	24,529.12	91,522.03	66,992.91
In Reserves	30,353.36	70,207.75	39,854.39
In Applications Received	850,088.00	1,205,998.00	355,910.00
In Insurance Issued	770,577.00	1,112,730.00	342,153.00
In Insurance in Force	921,577.00	1,707,807.00	786,230.00

Security for Policyholders.

The Assets of the Company now amount to $233,224.94, being an increase during the year of $20,417.38, which together with the guaranteed Capital of the Company, makes $1,033,616.64 of security for liabilities to policyholders of $70,267.73 for Reserves on Insurance in force on December 31st, according to Government valuation.

Premium Rates and Reserves.

In conformity with the amendment to the Insurance Act passed by the Dominion Government at the last Session of Parliament, this Company has adopted premium rates based on the Institute of Actuaries' H. M. Table with 3 1/2 per cent. interest for all new policies issued after January 1st, 1900. On all such policies the Company will maintain Reserves on a 3 1/2 per cent. interest basis. The effect of such a conservative basis for both premiums and Reserves must give still greater confidence in the foundation on which our business rests.

Boards of Reference.

Since the last Annual Meeting the Directors have established Local Boards of Reference at Toronto and Ottawa, and the following resident shareholders have been appointed members of such Boards:—

Toronto	Sir Theo. W. Taylor, Ex-Chief Justice of Manitoba. Donald Mackay, Esq., Vice-President Ontario Bank. W. J. Gage, Esq., President W. J. Gage & Company, Ltd. Geo. Burn, Esq., General Manager Bank of Ottawa.
Ottawa	John MacLaren, Esq., MacLaren & McLaurin, Lumber Merchants. W. D. Hogg, Esq., Q. C., O'Connor, Hogg & Macgee.

The vacancy on the Manitoba Board caused by Sir Theo. W. Taylor taking up his residence in Toronto, has been filled by the appointment of Mr. Jas. T. Gordon, of Winnipeg.

The Company's Agents.

The Directors wish to express their high appreciation of the efforts of the Agents of the Company in accomplishing such a satisfactory increase in the business done during the year.

Certificate of Auditors.

The books, vouchers, and securities of the Company have been audited by Messrs. Macintosh & Hyde, Chartered Accountants, and their Certificate is herewith attached to the Financial Statement.

Retiring Directors.

The Directors retiring this year are Messrs. Jonathan Hodgson, H. N. Bates, David Morris, Gaspard LeMoine and Edmund B. Osler, all of whom are eligible for re-election for the upcoming term of three years.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

DAVID BURKE, General Manager. JAMES CRATHERN, President.

DAVID BURKE, A. I. A., F. S. S., GENERAL MANAGER.

Audited and found correct,
MACINTOSH & HYDE,
Chartered Accountants and Auditors.

There was a large attendance of prominent shareholders, including Messrs. Geo. Hargre, C. F. Smith, David McFarlane, Henry Morton, Rev. E. Scott, Geo. Caverhill, Hon. F. E. Gilman, John Ross, James Crathern, Jonathan Hodgson, T. G. Roddick, M. D., M. P., John Cassin, E. P. Hannaford, C. S. J. Phillips, Gaspard LeMoine, David Burke, Geo. F. Hart, Andrew F. Gault, Jas. Wilson, Samuel Finlay, C. J. Hodgson, Jas. Elliot, Thos. Bell, J. A. Pickens, J. O. Gravel, Edward Maxwell, Geo. Durnford, R. A. Dunton, and others.

The President,—"In moving the adoption of the Report, I wish to add a few words bearing on a point which has not been referred to in the Directors' Report, although such may not be necessary, as the report is very full and complete.

On comparing the results of the year 1899 with 1898 I find the earnings (received and accounted) in the former year, which was our first, complete year of operations, fell a little short of our organization and ordinary expenses, while the earnings on the business of 1899, notwithstanding the consequent increase in expenditure in connection with the increased volume of business secured, computed on identical basis the same business as for 1898, gave a balance in our favor in 1899 of over $32,500. With the volume of business and the premium revenue therefrom now on the Company's books, the Directors feel safe in predicting an increase in future earnings on a similar basis proportionate with the increasing business of the Company.

"Referring to the average risk on lives insured by the Company, great care and attention have been given to obtain a safe average in the amount of insurance carried on each life, when the Report shows to be about $1,600. The average age of the policyholders now insured in the Company is 31 years. In the selection of desirable business, the younger ages are considered preferable as having a longer average existence on the books of the Company. While this applies more directly to Life policies, the effect is also shown in the selection of longer periods for Endowment policies by those of younger ages, requiring lighter premiums which will tend not to doubt to retain a larger proportion of Insurance each year on the Company's books.

"All these matters directly favor the building up of a Life Insurance Company, enabling it to retain its accumulated funds for a longer period, which is important both to the policyholder and to the Company."

Mr. Andrew F. Gault, Vice-President:—"In seconding the adoption of the Report it affords me much pleasure to express my gratification at the very satisfactory report and statement of the Company's business now submitted to the shareholders. The Company has been carefully managed, and its death claims have been exceptionally small, which can be accounted for by the great care exercised in accepting only the best business offered. The Company's progress since it commenced business has been equal with any of the best managed offices, and the building up has been on a solid foundation. There is no doubt but that the Company's position as an important factor in the Life Insurance business of this country, is now established."

Dr. T. G. Roddick, M. P., Medical Director, on referring to the very favorable mortality experienced so far by the Company, paid a high tribute to the Doctors who made the examinations, and stated that in every case the Examiners had protected the Company's interests in a manner most satisfactory to himself and to the management.

The Directors' Report was unanimously adopted. Scrutiny having been appointed by the President, a ballot was taken which resulted in the retiring Directors being unanimously re-elected for three years.

At a meeting of the Board subsequently held Mr. James Crathern was re-elected President, Messrs. Andrew F. Gault and Hon. L. J. Forget re-elected Vice-Presidents, and Dr. T. G. Roddick elected Medical Director.

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

Making Them is a Very Dangerous Trade—Perils That Meet the Manufacturer of Nitroglycerin.

Nitroglycerin and its peculiarities are little known, even in localities where it is made. People generally give it a wide berth, and even a less number know how it is manufactured. Probably in no place in the United States is there such a great amount of the explosive used as in the Indiana oilfields, says The Philadelphia Press. Indiana has four nitroglycerin factories, and they are seldom visited by curious people.

The explosive is made from a composition of acids and glycerin. It is generally pale yellow in color, and quite colorless when pure. It is odorless, and has a sweet, pungent, aromatic flavor. If touched by one's tongue, or even brought into contact with the skin, it will produce a severe headache. A large tank, called an agitator, is where the fluid is mixed, and the mixture is composed of equal parts of nitric and sulphuric acids. Inside the tank are several paddles, like those of a churn, and it is here that the real danger exists. The paddles are put in operation and a steady stream of steam is blown turned into a vat until 250 pounds are thoroughly mixed with the 3,500 pounds of acid. The chemicals coming in contact produce an intense heat, and in order to obviate the danger cold water is run through pipes winding and running through the vat. At 85 degrees F. a red vapor, almost like fire, arises. If cutting off the supply of glycerin in the agitator does not lower the temperature, it is time to say farewell. Before 90 degrees are reached nothing but atoms of the structure and its contents are left.

Colonel William A. Meyers, of Bolivar, N. Y., was the man who made and exploded the first round of nitroglycerin in an oil well. He built the first factory in the United States, near Titusville, Pa., in 1868. Up to that time powder had been used to torpedo oil wells. It was then that an explosive that could be discharged under water was found in nitroglycerin. Colonel Meyers' father was a Philadelphia banker and taught him how to make it.

The first well torpedoes was on Colonel Mills' lease, near Titusville, and the charge consisted of only two pounds. Oil was worth $3 a barrel then, and a torpedo that would double the production of a well was worth almost what the maker chose to ask for it. Colonel Meyers built 12 different factories in different parts of the oil regions from 1868 to 1888, when he retired from the business. Only one of the original factories stands intact today. Meyers made several fortunes and spent his money like a prince, but, fortunately for him, he still has a meg coin laid by.

SHAVING ACCIDENTS.

THE BARBER DISCUSSES THEM WITH THE MAN IN HIS CHAIR.

Chances to Cut Throats That Are Not Often Taken Advantage Of—Narrow Escapes From Serious Mishaps—A Father's Dream.

The man in the chair sat up quickly and looked carefully at the barber, who was feeling the edge of the razor with one finger. The barber smiled to reassure his customer and said: "It seems a queer question, I know, but it is a wonder to me that there are not a number of people killed by that way every year. It would be the easiest thing in the world for the barber as he wielded his razor to make one sweep with it and sever the jugular vein, and you would be dead almost on the instant. Suppose, for instance, that the barber should go insane. There would be nothing to prevent his doing such a thing, and you would have no warning nor any opportunity to save yourself.

"There is always a chance of a serious accident happening to the man in the chair. I have seen a number of such accidents and have a horror of even nicking the man I am shaving. In fact, such an occurrence makes me feel out of sorts for the rest of the day. It was only a few days ago that I almost had an accident that gave me a great fright and completely unnerved me. I was shaving a young man, and in passing from one side of the chair to the other a button of my waistcoat caught in his hair. It pulled a trifle, and he moved his head suddenly just as I went to put the blade to his face. I came within an ace of slashing him, and only a quick jump back saved him. The perspiration stood out on me, and I had to call one of the other men to finish shaving my customer.

"But the worst accident I ever saw in a barber shop occurred while I was working in a small town in the west. One of the patrons of the place was a business man whose 8-year-old daughter was lying at the point of death. Her father put in most of his time at her bedside. One afternoon while she was asleep he came in here to get shaved. He was so exhausted through lack of sleep that he fell asleep immediately after he had taken his seat in the chair next to the one behind which I was at work.

"He dreamed that some one had come into the place to tell him that his child had died. With a cry of alarm he started up just as the barber laid the razor against his neck. Into the flesh it sank. He was not yet thoroughly awake, and as he imagined that some one was holding him back from his child he threw out his hand to free himself, and his fingers closed over the blade of the razor. So fazed was he that he could not realize what had happened, but sat there in the chair, with the blood streaming from his throat and fingers.

"The man who had done the cutting was the first to act, although half-awake. He hurried for a doctor while we watched the flow of blood the best we knew how. Even as the doctor was at work sewing up the wounds a messenger came to say that the little girl had died suddenly in the greatest agony, calling for her father just before she died. He was under the influence of ether at the time and did not know, but afterward, when he heard of the circumstances attending her death, he insisted that he had heard her call as he lay there asleep in the chair and that it was her cry that had caused him to make his mad movement.

"For years after the accident he continued to shave in the same shop where it had occurred, and it was never mentioned. He carried a reminder of it for the remainder of his life. In addition to the scar on his throat, the fingers of his right hand were all drawn up and useless.

"Sudden movements while in the barber's chair are always apt to be attended with serious results, and I could recall dozens of instances where it has been only the merest chance that has prevented serious if not fatal mishaps. Nine times out of ten where the person getting shaved receives a nick and lays the blame on the barber he should thank the wielder of the razor that it was no worse. The probabilities are that it was quick action by the barber that prevented a bad cut. A slight nick often would have been a case for the doctor or coroner were it not for the watchfulness of the barber. Here yesterday I happened to draw blood from a young fellow's face near his ear, and he made a great fuss about it, until I showed him that it was only the sudden withdrawal of the razor which resulted in the slight nick that prevented him losing a good part of his ear. Then he was grateful and thanked me, besides promising to be more careful in the future.

"But there are other ways the barber has of getting even," continued the little barber after relathering one side of his customer's face. "There is no need of his shaving a man. He can inflict injuries that will make his victim decidedly uncomfortable, and at the same time the latter will not be aware of what is being done." What the barber meant by this last remark his victim did not ask.—New York Sun.

Horace Wallace, a Port Hope lad, was accidentally shot, but not seriously, by a companion.

GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA.

Peace and in War—A Spirited Lot of Views

Southern Africa, that enormous expanse of tropically verdant territory extending from the Zambesi River to the Cape of Good Hope, has for a century or more lain dormant to the eyes of the civilized world. Only within the past two decades has public attention been drawn to the wonderful natural resources and mineral wealth of this wild and rugged land, and yet, within this period, marvellous creation of brilliant modern cities have supplanted the desert lands and haunts of savage tribes. The steady march of civilization, the all-pervading ambition to accumulate the wealth of diamonds and gold that lay beneath the crust of this benighted land, each has borne its part in the metamorphosis and has led to the world's wonderment of the energy and enterprise that the 20th century will bring to light.

In no other country of the world has progress been marked with such adversity and strife as Africa. From the time the early Dutch settlers landed in the Cape Colony up to the present, there has existed almost a constant state of warfare; the natives disputing the advance of the Dutch and they in turn repeating the inroads of civilization. In spite of this, no strenuous war of the efforts of the colonists in their determination to turn to account the beauties and resources of the land of their adoption, that to-day they enjoy the fruits of their successes in a paradise of tropical vegetation, a salubrious climate and surrounded by the highest advantages of intellectuality and luxuries of civilization.

Cape town is the metropolis and seat of government of the Cape Colony. Its historical past and present is firmly fixed in the traditions of the early Dutch and the Huguenots. The old forts and buildings of distinctly Dutch architecture still remain, but, tested in South Africa and the progress of the war, and so eager the thirst for information, coupled with the demand for a pictorial history of the country, the efforts of the publisher of "Glimpses of South Africa" has been undertaken upon a scale of grandeur, fidelity and completeness never before thought of, involving as it has an expense of extraordinary magnitude. In order that the work might be absolutely reliable and thorough in its character, the publishers have contracted for its authorship with Mr. Wynnie Flemming, an African who has authority upon South African matters in a way widely acknowledged. This gentleman—born in the Cape Colony, having traveled over nearly every inch of the country south of the Zambesi River and lived in South Africa for nearly thirty years, with an extensive newspaper experience, in Africa, England and America, the author of many interesting sketches of South African life and scenery, formerly connected with the consular service at Port Elizabeth, whose comments on the war have been so favorably received by the American press, and whose magnificent collection of photographs will appear in this work—will present South Africa as it is to-day, with views of everything of the important scenes of battle and a graphically illustrated description of each stage in the progress of the war.

Port Elizabeth is the Liverpool of South Africa. It is a great commercial centre, coupled with some of the largest shipping interests in the world; a city of the most modern type, essentially English in character, and possessing some of the largest and some of the most architecturally magnificent buildings and public institutions in South Africa.

Natal is the beautiful, tropical Garden Colony. Its luxuriant vegetation and glorious climate, its wide avenue of trees and fine buildings, the native Zulu servants and the picturesque costumes of the Orientals lend an air of peace and tranquillity, while the marks of civilization and progress are in evidence at every turn.

Johnannesburg, the Golden, with its fine architectural creations, public institutions and parks, possesses many attractions that easily place it as the foremost city of South Africa. Its great industry, mining, the apparently inexhaustible veins of gold-bearing quartz, in which upwards of seven hundred millions of dollars are invested, have been the attraction for the thousands and thousands of "Uitlanders" whose "grievances" are substantially the cause for the cruel war between Britain and Boers, the battles of which have been ranked as the "bloodiest of the century."

This great work is published in serial form, and when complete will comprise the most magnificent collection of photographic reproductions of the British-Bour war and South Africa obtainable in this country. Portfolios distributed by the Morning Times. For particulars see announcement on another page of this issue.

As an offset to the Boers taking the field, Britain proposes to take the field, river, mountain and every other form of territory.

SOME QUEER DREAMS.

VISIONS THAT RESULTED IN THE CAPTURE OF CRIMINALS.

Marvellous Manifestations That Baffle the Ingenuity of Man to Explain and Which Prove That Truth is Stranger Than Fiction.

A very remarkable instance of the tracing of a criminal by means of a dream occurred in St. Louis. A woman named Mary Thornton was detained in custody for a month, charged with the murder of her husband. A week or so after her arrest she requested to see one of the prison officials and told him she had dreamed that an individual named George Ray had murdered her spouse, giving the official at the same time full details of the tragedy as witnessed in her vision. The man Ray was not suspected at the time, but the prison authorities were so much impressed by the woman's obvious earnestness that a search was at once made for him.

After some delay he was traced and charged with the crime, the details of the same as seen in the dream being rehearsed to him. Overcome with astonishment, he then and there confessed that he had committed the crime. Curiously enough, the woman had only met the murderer once and believed him to be on the very best of terms with her husband.

Almost as remarkable was the case of a woman named Drew, who dreamed one night that her husband, a retired sailor, had been murdered by a peddler at a Gravesend tavern, where the said husband was in the habit of putting up when visiting the town in question. The first news that awaited her on rising in the morning was that her spouse had been assassinated at the very tavern she had seen in her extraordinary vision, whereupon she burst into hysterical tears and cried out that her dream had come true.

She calmed down somewhat after a few hours and then handed the police officials an exact description of the peddler of the vision, giving a minute account of his dress, which included a blue coat of a very peculiar pattern. Marvellous as the fact may appear, a man wearing such a coat and following the occupation of a peddler was discovered two days later at an inn some six miles from Gravesend, and, on being taxed with the crime, he at once admitted that he was guilty and that robbery had been the motive of the outrage. He was hanged soon afterward, his doom having been brought about by the flimsy evidence of a woman's dream.

Women as dreamers seem more successful than men, but a rather peculiar instance of a crime being traced by a vision and in which the dreamer was a member of the male sex comes from Rennes, in France. A worthy merchant, having quitted his office one Saturday evening, proceeded home to dinner and after enjoying a substantial meal lay down on the couch and fell into a light sleep. A very vivid dream then came to him wherein he saw two men of the burglar type engaged in rifling the safe in his office, and so much impressed was he by the vision that he resolved, upon awakening, to at once go to the office and see that everything was under lock and key. His amazement may be imagined when, on arriving there, he discovered the door forced and a burglary in progress. To summon a couple of gentlemen was the work of an instant, and five minutes later the thieves, who proved to be notorious housebreakers, were on their way to the police depot, where the prosecutor told his extraordinary story. In view of the fact that the safe contained valuables to the extent of some thousands of pounds, the dream in question proved a very fortunate one for the dreamer.

How to explain these marvellous manifestations, which prove once more that truth is stranger than fiction, is a task beyond the ingenuity of man to compass. Perchance the theory of telepathy may have something to do with the mysterious business, but even that theory would appear rather inadequate in such cases as the aforementioned. A skillful forger who moved in the highest circles of society was once detected by the agency of a dream. The affair occurred in Boston and caused the greatest excitement of the time. The forger, a young man of eight or nine and twenty, had become acquainted with a rich publisher, at whose house he became a constant guest. One day the publisher's bankers discovered that some one was forging their client's signature to various large checks, and two detectives were at once instructed to look out for the culprit. Their efforts proved useless, but one evening the publisher's youngest daughter, a little girl of 11, dreamed that she saw a man whom she described as "like Mr. Blank," the visitor to whom reference has been made, sitting in a room in Main street copying her father's signature. The child's dream was communicated to the police, who, though inclined to ridicule the same at the outset, eventually promised to have the gentleman in question watched, with the result that his lodgings were raided and a complete plan for the making of bank notes found there. It then transpired that he was a man who was wanted for manifold forgeries throughout the Union, and he was sent to prison for a very long term.

The child's dream was all the more extraordinary in view of the fact that she was too young to understand the leading incidents of the business and attributed the copying of her father's signature in the dream to the "gentleman" wanting to write nicely, like papa. Strange, very strange, but none the less true, and proving once more that, as Hamlet remarked, "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamed of in your philosophy."

A Positive Woman.

A woman has a right to be positive on matters which are matters of personal knowledge and experience. Every woman who has used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for diseases of the womanly organs is positive as to its wonderful curative value, and confidently recommends it to similar sufferers. Women who suffer from inflammation, ulceration, female weakness, or nervous diseases caused by disease of the womanly organs will find a complete cure by the use of "Favorite Prescription."

"Several years ago I suffered severely from female weakness, prostrated, and menorrhagia, and used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription with splendid effect," writes Fannie Shelton, of Washington, Iowa. "Glad I have not needed it for a few years past, but if I should have need of it again, I would surely try 'Favorite Prescription.' I have recommended it to a number of my lady friends. I always tell them to try a bottle, and if they are not benefited by it I will pay for the medicine. In every case they have spoken in praise of it."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription
MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG AND SICK WOMEN WELL.

Slow Suicide.
A source of great evil among all workers is the widespread habit of eating a hearty meal hurriedly when the body is in a state of exhaustion. Too often, also, the evil is enhanced by the fact that the food is insubstantial, badly cooked and clogging in itself. This is one species of slow suicide, causing a long train of evils which are usually attributed to overwork. Now, it were better to go without food than to take it under these conditions. Your dog knows better than to eat when he is tired, and if you will watch him you will notice that he is always reluctant to be coaxed into play after eating. Left to himself he will take a nap, or at least drop care for awhile and rest. Humanity might raise its standard of health by following the example set by the instincts of the brute creatures.—Health Culture.

Aggravating the Offense.
"You are charged, young man," the magistrate said, not unkindly, "with carrying the complaining witness nearly out of his senses by putting him through some mock ceremony, of initiation. I can make allowance for your exuberance of spirits among college students, but sometimes this exuberance is carried too far."
"It was this way, your honor," explained the youth who appeared to be the spokesman—"we were out for a little lark, and we caught a Jay."
"The fine will be $2 and costs each," said his honor, his face hardening.—Chicago Tribune.

This is What.

The Hamilton Times has to say about the Hamilton Male Quartette, who appear at the annual concert of the George Street church choir on April 17th. "The Hamilton Male Quartette, of Toronto, met with decided success at the hands of the audience and well merited the frequent encores accorded. Mr. J. M. Sherlock in tenor solos displayed a remarkable range and sweetness for a male voice and was heartily applauded." Remember the date, April 17th, 1900. Admission 25 cents.

Died in Denver.

Intelligence was received on Saturday of the death of Mr. John O'Brien, son of Mr. Dennis O'Brien, Douro, which took place in Denver, Colorado, where he had gone for the benefit of his health. The deceased's lungs had given him some trouble, and although he was known to be poorly, his death was totally unexpected and was a great shock to his family, whose grief is intensified by the fact that the son's death was preceded by that of two of his sisters, one of whom died in July and on an infant. The remains are being brought home for interment.

Be in Style.

Get and wear a button containing portrait of your favorite English General. We have just received a sample lot of the following English Generals' portraits on a neat little button—Lord Roberts, Lord Kitchener, Gen. Buller, Col. Baden-Powell, Gen. White, and Union Jack flag. Columbia, Thrasher, Iver Johnson and Adair, all of which are new. Also the Red Bird, P. Macpherson; Gendron and Crescent, F. Davidson; Stearns, Talbot Bros.

Thanks to the Ladies.

Miss Bertha B. Baughman, Deputy Supreme Commander of the L.O.T.M., through the Times, wishes to express her sincere thanks to the Sir Knights of Peterborough for their kind assistance in the organization of the hive of Lady Macbeth, and wishes to especially mention the names of Sir Knights McClellan, Wilson, Loring, Titterton, Pratt and Morrison, who very materially assisted in the work.

TWO BOYS DROWNED.

THE CREEK CLAIMS TWO VICTIMS ON SATURDAY.

Willie Fleetwood and Horace Kearns Both Drowned in the Creek—The Body of the Former Recovered.

The creek claimed two victims on Saturday, both being little boys between six and seven years of age. The first to lose his life was Willie Fleetwood, a six year old son of Mr. William Fleetwood, butcher for Mr. J. J. Howden.

It appears that while playing with a number of companions on the bank of the creek in the rear of Hamilton's blacksmith shop, a short distance above the Brock street bridge, about 3 o'clock, he fell in and was carried away so quickly by the strong current that there was no chance to save him. At the lower side of Brock-st. bridge an attempt was made to catch him with a pikepole but it was unsuccessful. He went over Patterson's dam and was unconscious or dead as he passed Hunter-st. bridge, where another glimpse was caught of him. His body was finally found below the C. P.R. station, where the creek enters Spaulding's bay.

(The Second Accident.)

About 5.30 p.m., while a number of children were at play on the bridge which crosses the creek on Park-st., a little son of Mr. W. J. Kearns fell in. It is said the little fellow was standing on a pier, and had been called to go home. In turning around he lost his balance and fell into the raging current. In a few seconds he was carried away. A man, who stood near, could have saved the child as he was floating past, but seemed, for some unaccountable reason, not to have done so, or made the slightest effort in that direction.

Efforts were made to recover the body yesterday and on Saturday night, without success. It is feared that it will have been carried to the lake, and may not be recovered for some time.

Much sympathy is felt for the parents of the two children.

A JUSTIFIABLE DESIRE.

The large majority of people very naturally have a justifiable desire that the physician's prescription should be filled by a competent druggist. Our long experience and our ample facilities for dispensing are at your command at all hours.

If you have wisely decided to make use of Faine's Celery Compound, that kind of medicines, we are always prepared to supply your wants. Our stock of this popular medicine is always fresh and pure. We heartily recommend it.

H. S. Macdonald, Druggist, Peterboro', Ont.

A Presentation.

Miss Bertha B. Baughman, Deputy Supreme Commander of the L.O.T.M., left Saturday morning for Waukegan, after having completed the organizing of a Hive of Lady Macbeth in Peterborough. During her stay in town she has made many friends, whose good wishes she carries with her. At the close of the last meeting of the L.O.T.M. the members presented Miss Baughman with a beautiful bracelet, in appreciation of the work she has been doing.

New Electric Company.

A syndicate has been formed for the purpose of erecting a dam and power house at Crooked Rapids, Belmont, and supplying light and power to Havelock and other town and villages in that locality. The following gentlemen are retained in the scheme—A. C. McDonald, E. M. E., electrical engineer; M. J. Butler, C. E. D. T. S., hydraulic engineer, and Fred W. Wilkins, D. T. S., surveyor.

A New Paper.

We are in receipt of a copy of the Dispatch, published at Campbellford, Ont., by Mr. H. B. R. Dryden. The paper is a neatly printed, eight page sheet and reflects credit on the publisher. We wish our contemporary every success.

Bastion Notes.

There is another of the popular smokers announced for Thursday evening at the Bastion room in the Opera House block. All the young men of the town are involved.

The Non-Comp. are arranging a social event, which will take place in the near future, in the shape of an At Home. Further announcements later. Corp. Smith and Corp. Irwin have been appointed on the executive instead of ex-Sergt. Stethem and ex-Sergt. Cameron.

Those who desire to enlist should be on hand at the drill shed on tomorrow evening.

HAPPY FAMILY.

When They Got Rid of the Coffee Habit.

A little woman out in Omemee, Ill., tells about her husband having determined to see if he could not make her quit coffee drinking, which he believed to be the cause of her constant neuralgia and general nervousness, brought home several packages of Postum Food Coffee which he had discovered, by trying elsewhere to be good.

She says: "What in the world he brought home five packages for, I could not understand; nevertheless I quit coffee and started in on Postum Food Coffee. I did not have much faith in the change doing me any good, but was astonished to discover that my neuralgia left me almost at once, and the nervous troubles kept growing less and less."

"Little daughter at that time had been ill and could eat little or nothing. She was pale and thin. As soon as I discovered how Postum treated me, I began to give it to her. She liked it very much, and would drink it when she would take nothing else. She began to pick up rapidly and got plump and round and rosy."

"I don't care what sort of food there is in Postum so long as it treats me as it has. It is plain enough the food contained in Postum Coffee is good, and that's all we want to know. I am rid of neuralgia and nervousness, and am a healthy woman. Husband has also been improved, and daughter is well and happy, as I stated above. With best wishes, Mrs. Nellie Troman."

A LOSS OF $500.00.

Through Incompetent Work the Bridge on Reid Street Succumbs.

Last year new stone abutments were built on the creek on the street in front of the Wm. Hamilton Company's premises. The work was done by the town, under the supervision of the Engineer. Instead of seeking a proper foundation, the stone walls, which support the superstructure of the bridge, were apparently laid on the bottom of the creek, without a proper foundation, and the result is that the stone-work is now a mass of ruins. A competent authority told the Times that it will cost the town $500 to rebuild the stone-work, and repair the superstructure.

The freshet in the creek is proving one thing, and that is, that the work done by the town in regard to the bridges, is of a character that reflects no credit on the corporation's engineering department.

How long, how long is this kind of work to continue?

ACCURATE DISPENSING.

When you call upon us to have your doctor's prescription filled, we can give you every guarantee of accurate and careful dispensing. We please the most critical and exacting people.

The Kind That Cures.

If you have been disappointed in the past in your efforts to regain health and strength, try the life giving virtues of Faine's Celery Compound. Thousands are using it with marvelous success. No other medicine has such a sale. When you ask us for Faine's Celery Compound you are sure to get it.

Ormond &amp; Walsh, Druggists, Peterborough Ont.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

There was a large market on Saturday.

Lindsay is talking about turning the old Waverly Hotel property into a modern hotel.

Maple syrup was selling on the market on Saturday at from 30 to 35 cents per quart.

The Chief of Police is in possession of a purse found in the Opera House after the matinee on Saturday.

The street parade of Station's Uncle Tom's Cabin Co., on Saturday, attracted a large number. The streets were well lined.

Mr. A. McFarlane was to work on Saturday as usual, little worse for his thrilling experience of the previous evening in the creek.

Hogs are now selling at 61-4 cents per pound, live weight. The war between the buyers is a good thing for those who have hogs to sell.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

The Times invites all its readers to contribute to this column all items of a personal or social nature, such as the arrival and departure of guests, the movements of well known people, business men, and particulars of so homes, parties, etc. All that is required is to send a postcard or letter, of telephone the Times, giving rough outline, and we will put it into shape.

Hon. Geo. A. Cox was in town on Saturday.

Mrs. H. P. Kennedy is visiting Mrs. Samuel Sherin, Lakeside.

Mr. M. S. Kennedy has returned from a business trip to Kentucky.

Messrs. C. A. McMichael and John McGovern, of Beaverton, are in town hiring men for the W. and A. MacArthur Lumber Co.

A letter received by Mr. W. H. Bradburn from his father, states that the party are in good health. Mr. Bradburn's health is much improved, the climate of California apparently agreeing with them.

Lindsay Post: Mr. D. McRae, the popular proprietor of the Campbell house, Glenora, passed through last evening from Peterborough, after spending a couple of days there. He was accompanied by his mother.

A Coming Event.

The Toronto Globe—"The Sherlock Male Quartette appeared in two numbers and greatly pleased the audience, many of whom had come expressly to hear these numbers. The many expressions of delight from all parts of the house showed the esteem in which this organization is held. Indeed it is doubtful if a better male quartette has ever sung in Toronto." The Quartette will appear at the annual sacred concert of the George-st. Methodist church on Tuesday, April 17.

The Creek.

The high water in the creek is causing considerable work. On Friday night the employees of the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Co. were obliged to strain every effort to clear the ice from their dam. Although the ice jam was several times blasted with dynamite and the men worked hard until three o'clock in the morning, the dam was considerably injured and the Reid street bridge, in front of their establishment, was almost demolished. A temporary railing has been erected around the damaged bridge. During the night Mr. Hamilton served refreshments to the men, and when they were through they were invited by the firm to partake of supper at the restaurant of W. J. McCallum.

Wedding at St. Andrew's.

On Wednesday afternoon at St. Andrew's, Rev. J. G. Potter performed the marriage ceremony uniting Mr. J. T. Hunter and Miss Clara Graham of Omemee. The young couple left on a trip west and will return to take up residence in Omemee. The same afternoon the marriage of Mr. John W. Walter and Miss Elizabeth Banks, of Hope township, was performed by Rev. Mr. Potter. The newly wedded couple left in the evening for Port Hope.

Look to Your Trees.

The best measure to pursue in combating the pest caterpillar is already been considered by some of our exchanges. Last season the great shortage of white honey was due to the worms checking and destroying the bloom in the bottom trees, and the effect of the ravages in the maple groves last year is evident with considerable apprehension by sugar makers. So far as fruit trees are concerned, very effective work can be done at this season by destroying the masses of eggs. These are now plainly visible, being generally located on small twigs or on the outer ends of the limbs. A few hours work on the part of all owners of fruit trees would go far towards removing this obnoxious pest.

A Novel Parade.

Mr. George Stevens, the well-known local junk merchant, gave a novel exhibition on Saturday morning, and it is difficult to know whether he or Uncle Tom's Cabin Company attracted the most attention. Mr. Stevens recently received a car load of light wagons, and he hitched up to these and formed a procession of respectable dimensions. There were no less than 25 rigs in line, each rig being decorated with flags. These are only a portion of Mr. Stevens' "transport" service, a large number of rigs being out in different parts of the country.

Further discussion concerning the Queen's going to Ireland has raised the doubt that if she went there she might put her foot in it.

The steam saw mill on the Egan River Bay, together with booming grounds, piling grounds, dock, wharves, pumping house, fire protection, stove-house, boarding-house, dwelling houses, etc., the foregoing are subject to lease, which will expire on the 1st day of May, 1901.

All the above berths are 25 square miles, more or less, with the exception of berth No. 154, which contains 25 square miles, more or less.

THE UNION JACK AGAIN FLOATS OVER KINSARDT

Which Place Was Formally Re-annexed to Cape Colony on the First of April.

BRABANT ISOLATED ON BORDER OF BASUTOLAND.

Colonial Brigade of Over Two Thousand Men Has Been Cut Off From Its Base of Operations—Boers Open Fire at Fourteen Streams, But Are Silenced.

Cape Town, Cape Colony, April 9. The morning gales have blown the smoke of the guns of the Cape Colony, April 1, amidst the cheers of the assembled crowd. A large number of Boer prisoners, including many of their leaders are now imprisoned. Col. Drury's column, including the West Australian and Canadian Mounted Rifles and Artillery left here yesterday for De Aar.

London, April 10. The Bloemfontein correspondent of the Daily Mail, telegraphing Sunday says: "The air is blue with rumors of Kruger's forces of Boers to the southward, but there is no positive official information on the subject. On the other hand the railway is said to be well guarded."

London, April 10. The Times publishes the following from the Wimpener, dated Sunday, April 8: "The Wimpener garrison is practically isolated. Moreover the line is enormously strong and the force is fully provisioned. Desultory fighting between outposts continues."

A commando of 2,000 with four guns went into laager last night five miles from here in the direction of Dewetsdorp. London, April 10, 5 a.m. Provisions are being made to hold Bloemfontein against surprise. Lord Kitchener has been given an important duty, being responsible for the protection of the railway, while Lord Roberts is waiting for reinforcements and winter clothing for the troops, whose thin cotton khaki apparel and boots are worn out. Gen. Brabant and Gen. Gatacre are both at a stand still. Lord Roberts will probably for some time confine his operations to clearing the Free State behind the railway, and to relieve Mafeking, for which purpose apparently the 8th division, now arriving at Cape Town has been ordered to Kimberley.

Lady Sarah Wilson and other correspondents send diaries of the doings, showing that the Boers have tried by stratagem to lure the British out into a mined ambush. Fortunately the British engineers discovered the mine and cut the wires connected, and unearthed 350 pounds of dynamite and war gelatine. What the chances are for an advance to Pretoria may be judged from the fact that from 6,000 to 10,000 horses are on the way to the Cape. Mr. Steyn's address to the Free State Road at Kroonstad is confirmed. Lady Roberts will remain at Cape Town. The Duke of Marlborough and Lord Henry Cavendish have gone to the front.

Kimberley, April 9. Fifty-two prisoners who were captured at Boshof arrived here. Only three are Dutchmen, the remaining are French and Russians.

London, April 10. Mr. Spencer Wilkinson, reviewing the situation in the Morning Post, says: "The fact that the situation is unchanged is in itself a favorable sign as implying that the Boer offense is not dangerous. It does not matter much whether the advance of Lord Roberts is begun this week or next, provided that the start is made, everything is ready for an uninterrupted movement in co-operation with Gen. Buller. Unless the Boers are able seriously to interrupt the command of Lord Roberts their exertions will not influence the course of the war. In the event of a Boer invasion of the Basutoland compelling the British agent to give the Basuto chiefs a free hand, it is to be hoped that the Imperial Government will likely confine to the Government of the great powers the true history of this delicate subject so as to leave no doubt that the movement of the natives has been provided by the Boers in despite of the strenuous exertions of the British, confining the quarrel to the two nations."

SHIELLED FOURTEEN STREAMS. Boers begin a bombardment but are quickly silenced.

Warrenton, April 7.—Yesterday evening the British shelled Fourteen Streams.

which was occupied by a force of Boers. The morning gales have blown the smoke of the guns, which they fired ineffectively. A fusillade of musketry followed at intervals throughout the day. The British dropped riddles and shrapnel shells into the Boer position, finally silencing the enemy's fire and driving off the emipers.

BRABANT IS NOW CUT OFF.

He Has No Communication With Other British Forces.

London, April 9.—The amazing activity of the Boers southeast and southwest of Bloemfontein continues. The Boer commando, seemingly going and coming throughout a wide region as they please, but taking good care not to allow themselves to be thrown against strong bodies of the British. The retirement of the Irish Rifles from Rouxville to Allwal leaves Gen. Brabant without communication with the British forces. He has 2,000 or 3,000 colonials holding a fine defensive country, but he is apparently isolated so far as London knows. Telegraphic and railroad communications with Bloemfontein are kept up as usual, but nothing comes through for public consumption. Lord Roberts' last message was dated April 6, and the last official message bore date of April 7. The last unofficial message notes that the good spirits at Bloemfontein are continuing, and tells of the arrival of animals and fresh cavalry regiments. Lord Roberts now has 15,000 mounted men altogether.

THEY ARE ALL STUPID.

The Times on the Lack of Intelligence in British Officers.

London, April 9.—The Times has the following special from Cape Town, dated April 5: "The details of the disaster at Kroon Spruit serve to show the marvellous cleverness of the Boers, and the no less marvellous carelessness of our own officers, whom no series of disasters will ever teach to keep wide awake. The Boers in the rear of Col. Broadwood's column drove his force into the party at the drift exactly as partridges are driven to a gun. As the drift, as each wagon went down the Boers quietly covered the drivers with their rifles, pointing them where to drive so as not to block the convoy. When the guns arrived the trap was all clear again. To quote the words of one present, 'It was just like walking into a clockwork.' The Boers politely took your rifle, asked you kindly to step to one side, and there was nothing else you could do. Already there is much talk of reorganizing and increasing the army. One important thing is to make the army intelligent. Generals and regimental officers and soldiers are all brave, but it is useless to shrink the fact that the majority are stupid. The empire will have to such army as it ought to have until it creates a system of military training which is not calculated to deprive the units of the initiative and of intelligence."

In its editorial The Times says: "It is satisfactory to know that our men did not surrender until compelled to do so, but it is unexplained how they came to be caught in such a trap, and driven into an indefensible position by a force which Lord Roberts says was estimated at 2,300 strong, with five guns. How is it that the enemy was able to muster and move such a force between the army of Lord Roberts and that of General Gatacre without detection, until our men blundered into them at Mestera Hoek? The railway, which was probably the objective of the Boers at Reddersburg, appears to be still intact, and trains and much needed reinforcements are arriving daily at headquarters. The line is strongly guarded, but the enemy occupy a thin line, eight miles long, from Sanna's Post, on the Modder River, to a point east of the Jagtfontein road, and a great part of this line is parallel and close to the railway. Their strategy and daring may expose them to disastrous blows from greatly superior British forces opposed, but their concentration ought seemingly to have been impossible had adequate skill and vigilance been exercised on our side."

RUNDLE AT KIMBERLEY.

Commander of the Eighth Division Ordered to the North.

Cape Town, April 9.—Lieut. Gen. Sir Henry Rundle, commander of the 8th division, has been ordered to Kimberley on special duty.

STEYN IS VIRULENT.

He Speaks of Placing British Prisoners in the Johannesburg Mines.

Loreano Marques, April 6.—The meeting of the Free State Road was chiefly remarkable for the virulence of Mr. Steyn against England. Referring to the war, he said that the republic was in a better position than at the commencement, and would conquer. Victory, perhaps, would come in a way never expected. President Kruger himself wished for no further shedding of innocent blood, and complications with Russia might compel England to make peace. He firmly believed that peace would be restored shortly, as the great powers would not allow the destruction of the republic. Mr. Steyn described the removal of the Boers to St. Helena as a barbarous act, which would justify them in placing the British prisoners in the depths of the Johannesburg mines. Mr. Steyn's proclamations and his action in borrowing £500,000 from the Transvaal were approved of. He was authorized to enter into a further loan if necessary.

Another of Mr. Steyn's brothers was captured near Kamek Siding yesterday and arrived here to-day.

BOERS ARE MISTAKEN.

They Construe Buller's Inactivity into Fear to Move.

London, April 8.—It is reported from Ladysmith that the Boers are beginning to construe Gen. Buller's inactivity as a sign of fear or inability to resume active operations. Hence they are showing much activity in the Biggarsburg, and are said to be planning to outflank General Buller by an advance in force by way of Helpmankers. As the plan is known it is not likely that the Boers will find Gen. Buller unprepared.

The Boers state that the Colesburg and Stormberg commands, numbering 6,000 men and ten guns, have reached Kroonstad.

REINFORCEMENTS ARE ARRIVING.

Roberts is Finishing Preparations for His Advance.

Bloemfontein, April 9.—All is quiet here. Reinforcements and reinforcements are arriving, and preparations are being made to deal with the enemy. Last Tuesday many of the historic regiments, the Scots Greys, the Inniskilling Dragoons and the Lancashire Fusiliers, could not muster a hundred mounted men, while artillery horses were very scarce.

HE SAW GREAT BRITAIN'S QUEEN.

Private Mitchell, of Toronto, Tells of Her Majesty's Visit to Wounded Soldiers in Hospital.

Private J. A. Mitchell, who is well known in Peterboro, sent the Morning Times the following account of the Queen's visit to Neley Hospital. Private Mitchell is a resident of Toronto and went to South Africa with the Royal Canadian Regiment. He was invalided and sent to England. His letter is as follows:—

I am sending you a slight description of the Queen's visit to Woolwich Hospital to-day on account of my being one of the few invalids the Queen spoke to and gave flowers to. It was a great day for the sick and wounded, and I partook of the excitement myself. Being a stranger to the customs of this place, of course I expected that a visit from her Majesty would be something grand, but I found it as pleasant as a visit from one's own mother. Before going any further I may say that I am one of Toronto's boys, in other words, one of C Company, and got invalided home with enteric fever. We arrived in Southampton on Sunday, the 15th, and came down here the following day. When it became known that the Queen intended paying a visit, the invalids were well pleased. We started making preparations on Tuesday, and by Thursday morning everything was completed. I have been convalescent for some time, and so was able to take in all the sights. Being a stranger in this part of the world I was greatly interested in all the proceedings. However, after dinner we could see from the hospital the vast crowds lining all approaches to the grounds, and then they began to speculate when her Majesty would arrive. At 3.45 p.m. we could hear the boom of the royal salute at Woolwich, where another visit was being made. About 4.15 we could hear the cheers from the crowd as her Majesty approached the hospital. I could not see much more, as I had to go to my ward to get ready for the royal visit. The royal party first visited the surgical ward, and afterwards came along the corridor to our end of the building, speaking to some of the troops as they passed. I may say that I and another Canadian (the only two) from Halifax were put in a special ward, so the Queen would have a chance to speak to us as she passed each cot. I was feeling a little excited as the royal party approached my cot. First came the principal medical officer, telling her Majesty the different regiments the men belonged to, and also their special case. He told her that I was one of the Canadians, and Princess Christian, thinking she did not hear, said, "Ma, this is one of our Canadians. Her Majesty was wheeled up a little closer to my cot—as we all had to lie down in bed—and asked me if I was feeling all right now, and on my replying that I was quite able and willing to go out and fight for her again she seemed pleased, and presented me with a bouquet of daffodils and lilies. Then the Princess asked after my health and what part of Canada I came from. I told her the Queen City, Toronto. I felt overwhelmed with all the questions. After they had gone down toward the door a tall lady came back and asked my name and if I had any message to send home, as her sister is the Countess of Minto. Actually I was speechless with surprise. I had to say that I had written before, (which was true) telling the people at home I was all right. I thought the Queen looked very sad. I suppose, though, her Majesty feels for the sick and wounded. I am sending you one of the daffodils her Majesty gave me. I have not mentioned anything about any of the rest of the royal party. I was so taken up with the Queen and the Princess I had no time to look at any of the others. I passed some one up to my ward [the words were not clear] and sent home against my will, but anyhow I have had an audience with the Queen (what a good many would like) so can tell the boys of C Company all about it.

THE QUEEN AND THE CHILDREN.

Her Majesty Rapturously Cheered by the Sons and Daughters of Old Erin.

Dublin, April 9.—The children's demonstration, which closed the Queen's week in Ireland, was probably one of the most gladsome days that either the Queen or Dublin has known for years.

Certain it is that the Queen is making fresh conquests daily, and her many acts of personal self-sacrifice have completely won the hearts of the people of Ireland. There were miles of cheering children under continuous canopy of fluttering flags, with a background of thousands of holiday-making elders who accompanied them.

The charming weather tended to make the celebration in every way delightful, not only to the Queen, but also to the little princess who followed the royal procession.

The genuineness and spontaneity of the children's welcome kept Her Majesty in continual good humor, and yet visibly affected her deeper feelings as well.

The fact that 16,000 children arrived at and departed from Dublin without serious accident, so far as known, was not the least remarkable feature of the day.

WILL NOT KEEP SICK SOLDIERS.

Imperial Authorities Object to Maintaining Canadians Who Are Ill at Halifax.

Halifax, April 9.—Friction has arisen between the Imperial military and the militia authorities over the refusal of the former to take charge of the sick of the provisional regiment.

Two cases of measles and one of scarlet fever developed in the corps Wednesday, just a few hours before the regiment had been formally handed over by the militia to Imperial authorities. One of the cases of measles was contracted on the train en route from Ottawa and developed here. The scarlet fever case developed at the quarters here. All three patients were admitted to the city hospital for infectious diseases.

The militia authorities have been advised that the Imperial authorities will have nothing to do with the cases. They will not administer to the sick or pay for their maintenance, $4 per week for each patient at the civic hospital, because the cases developed before the corps had been taken over and notwithstanding the fact that the regiment had concentrated at Halifax for Imperial service.

The authorities at Ottawa have been advised of the action of the Imperial authorities.

THE RUSSIAN BEAR IS SHARPENING HIS CLAWS

And Either Japan or Turkey Will Very Soon Be Forced to a Bloody Combat.

A CRASH PREDICTED IN FAR EAST OVER COREA.

Japanese Naval Manoeuvres Are to be Carried Out on an Unprecedented Scale—Forty or More Vessels Will Take Part in the Demonstration.

London, April 9.—Russian activity has been the international factor of the week and diplomatic functionaries attached to the court of St. James are asking themselves "What does it all mean and where will it end?" The Russian ambassador smiles blandly and assures his dear friends that it means "nothing, absolutely nothing," but, just the same, speculation is acute.

There are many men of fair standing and a tolerable knowledge of international undercurrents who are willing to say that war between Russia and Japan has now come within measurable distance. Of these Henry Norman, who has just returned from a trip to Russia, is one. But no such view is taken by the British foreign office, which during the recent troublesome times has sized up the international situation with wonderful correctness.

The next few weeks may, perhaps, bring up a tremendous war scare, but the silent fact remains that Japan is not ready for hostilities.

Downing Street not Disturbed. Japanese telegrams from the far east may increase and multiply and Korea may seem to be on the verge of annexation by Russia, but the calm of Downing Street is not likely to be disturbed. Korean matters have been arranged by treaty and Lord Salisbury does not believe that Russia intends to break the treaty, though her relations with Japan may become strained to a serious point.

If all this rumour in the far east has been postponed for another year there is scarcely any doubt that war would be a serious probability, but those having any intimate knowledge of Japan's far-reaching naval projects and her recent state of incompleteness do not hesitate to say that Japan is not going to risk anything until her plans are matured.

Japanese naval manoeuvres in the coming fall are to be carried out on an unprecedented scale and will partake more of the nature of a demonstration than that of peaceful evolutions. Forty or more war vessels are expected to be present in Japanese waters. The moral effect of such an aggregation upon far eastern questions is causing no little comment.

Turkish Situation is Menacing. As far as Great Britain is concerned Russia's military, rather than naval, activity is chiefly interesting, though we must be allowed to take up its cue in this matter. The foreign matter, while only faintly interested in Korea, being practically sure that no serious trouble will result there, is devoting careful investigation to the warlike preparations occurring in south Russia.

There seems no longer to be any doubt that Turkey for her tardiness to meet Russian demands regarding railway concessions is being menaced by her northern neighbor, and many signs point to the fact that Russia intends to settle herself in the north-east of Asia Minor unless Turkey will give in. Already 250,000 of Russian troops are maintained on those borders, while the Black Sea squadron is ready for business at a moment's notice.

To what extent British assistance can be given to Turkey in withstanding the Russian demands is a question which at the present moment is occupying Lord Salisbury's attention to an even greater extent than the South African war. In view of the troubles of Great Britain in South Africa it is more than probable that Turkey will meet the demands and that the Russian troops will be withdrawn.

Afghanistan Scare Forgotten. The scare about Russian troops concentrating to settle herself in the north-east of Turkey in Asia Minor and Afghanistan has passed into the category of peaceful, uninteresting spheres. With all these reports, to say nothing of continued rumors of Bulgaria's desire to throw off Turkey's suzerainty and become a vassal of the Czar, it is evident that while Russia is observing in the letter her promise to England not to interfere in South Africa, she is not idle in taking advantage of opportunities in every quarter of the globe.

For the peace of the world it is reassuring to remember that the fixed policy of Russia for years has been to take matters almost to the point of hostilities and then to settle diplomatically, the only exception of this in modern times being in the Crimea, when the tone of the peace party in England led her to believe that the country would not interfere.

As a nation and as individuals Great Britain is very wroth over the Boer war, and it is merely the latest instance where the country has got the worst end of trusting to arbitration.

AMMUNITION RAN OUT.

Last Cartridge of the British was Fired before Surrender.

London, April 9.—The capture of the Irish Fusiliers and mounted infantry at Reddersburg was due to the exhaustion of their ammunition, which ran out at 2 o'clock on Wednesday morning. The British waited until dawn in the hope that the sound of the Boer guns would bring aid to them. They were then enfiladed by a heavy fire from three sides, and not having a cartridge left they surrendered.

The Royal Irish Rifles had been marching in the eastern part of the Free State collecting arms and were returning to Bethany Tuesday when they were intercepted by a Boer commando, which had placed three guns in position. The Irish entrenched themselves, while the mounted infantry scouted along both flanks only to find escape impossible.

The Boers opened with gun and rifle fire. The British repaid sparingly with rifle fire, husbanding their cartridges in the hope that help would arrive.

Gradually the Boers drew into closer quarters. They fired intermittently during Tuesday night, but did not attempt to rush the British position until Wednesday, when the Irishmen, who had fought tenaciously were suffering severely from want of food and water. At this time also the rifles had expended their last cartridge. Finding that there was no sign of succor, they surrendered, having fought for nearly 30 hours. They lost 10 killed and many wounded.

Among the wounded is Captain Tennant, General Gatacre's chief intelligence officer.

Gen. Gatacre arrived too late. Reddersburg was already recaptured by the Boers, and the enemy are now threatening the lines to the south. (Gen. Gatacre's force has returned to Bethany without having found any trace of the ill-fated British column captured by the Reddersburg commando.)

SENDING AWAY THE WOMEN.

General Roberts is Getting Rid of the Non-combatants.
